Detroit, Mich.—Alexander Czarnecke, foreman of the city's conservatories at Belle Isle, during the last month has smiled on the world with the joy that Peary may have felt when he stood at the North Pole, for Mr. Czarnecke has evolved, he says, seven new varieties of mums, seedlings raised in the park conservatories.

Reading, Pa.—A record-breaking attendance marked the closing hours of the flower show held in the Auditorium November 9 to 11 under the auspices of the Reading Florists' Association. Early in the evening of the last day the exhibitors journeyed in automobiles to the Mineral Spring hotel, where they enjoyed an informal dinner. Charles H. Grakelow, of Philadelphia, who was the guest of honor, gave an interesting talk, touching on trade conditions in the east. The Reading florists are already considering plans for next year's exhibition.

"S-U-B-S-T-I-T-U-T-E" SPELLS "INFERIORITY"

That is a safe general rule; in the case of CYPRESS as THE Greenhouse Lumber it is an absolute truism. Small wonder that those who urge the "substitute" have but the one cry, "cheaper." But the substitute is NOT "cheaper," except as to initial cost.

The only businesslike way to figure material costs in Greenhouse building is BY THE YEAR.

There's nothing consolingly "cheap" about repair and replacement bills. The truly cheapest greenhouse is the one that shows the least totals—at the end of a term of years—first cost and up-keep together.

By that rule CYPRESS for greenhouse construction has all other woods beaten at the start. It is the absolute cheapest, figured by the years of its life. If built of heart Cypress, with "Pecky" Cypress for certain parts, the wood cannot be substituted by any other material ever grown or made. Talk of a "substitute" is worse than bosh. It is not quite square. If contractors would say: "We can build you a greenhouse of cheaper wood," that would do, for the so-called "substitutes" are all cheaper in first cost. BUT MORE EXPENSIVE IN THE END. Do you care? You bet you do—you're a business man as well as a flower grower. "The Building Age," August, 1912, issue, page 409, in specifications for a small greenhouse, says: "These timbers should be made of Cypress, for on account of its straight grain, strength and durability, this has been found to be THE WOOD BEST ADAPTED FOR GREENHOUSE CONSTRUCTION."

GET ACTION on our Cypress Pocket Library; the booklets are absolutely free. Write for one, or a dozen. Vol. 3—(nothing but greenhouses) is the first one you want. CHASE A POSTAL AFTER IT. NOW. Also ask for Vol. 36, the book on carpentry, both instructive and interesting. Vol. 37 is the Silo Book.

¶ The good features of Garland Quality Greenhouses are best seen in the houses we have built. Davis & Steiner, Ottawa, 76 x 900 ft.; Davis & Steiner's thirteen houses at Streator; Stielow Bros., at Niles Center; Geo. Hoeffle and Edward Meuret, at Des Plaines; St. Adelbert Cemetery, at Niles.

Our houses speak for themselves. Seeing is believing. May we not have your inquiry?

PRACTICAL GREENHOUSES

Built by us for Robert Semrau, at Detroit, Mich.

Here is a nice range of greenhouses which we built this past summer. Our latest style of "Bolted-Thru-The-Pipe" purlin fittings are used in the superstructure.

Perhaps you don't know exactly what we mean by "Bolted-Thru-The-Pipe." Of course we could show you better than we can tell you, but we can explain a bit.

Each purlin is fastened to its upright support by a fitting which goes around the purlin and is fastened to the upright support by a bolt which goes not only through the fitting, but also through the upright itself. The ordinary fitting just clamps the two together and a windstorm can lift your roof off the support.

Our greenhouses have lots of other fine points and we would be glad to tell you about them if you will just drop us a line. Estimates and sketches free.

EVERYTHING FOR THE GREENHOUSE

SPEED WITH ACCURACY

We have specialized for many years in the production of high-grade Ventilating Machines and Greenhouse Fittings from best material. Our customers are those who require better product than is ordinarily made. All material used by us has, as a basis, the necessary quality and strength to insure permanent work.

The man who depends upon the quality of his product for the continued success of his business will not permit a small part that might prove defective to stand in the way.

Write for our catalogue. The illustrations might suggest something that will save you considerable money and answer your purpose better.

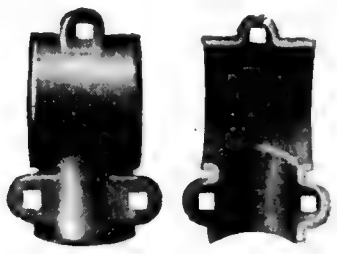
INDEX TO ADVERTISEMENTS AND TABLE OF CONTENTS—PAGES TWO AND THREE



The bars are firmly held to the ridge by this steel ridge bracket, which takes all the weight and strain, which otherwise causes toe nail splits.

Roof bar splice plate, used at the purlin. In addition to the cap at the top there are two metal inserts that keep the joint tight, even if the ends dry out and spread.

Detail showing Giant Arch fittings.

Three-bolt malleable clamp fitting. They bite into the pipe, as well as friction grip it.

Purlin showing the end cap, which keeps out moisture and insects.

Side view of malleable clamp fittings.

Some Things No Other Builder Does

JUST because one builder does things that no other builder does, may be because no other builder thinks they are worth doing.

Then again some builders don't do some of the things others do, because it costs too much to do them, and leave the larger profit they are bound to make you pay them.

The things we do are worth doing.

Worth it to the house.

Worth it to you.

In our Semi-Iron House—here are four things that we do, that no other builder does:

1. The bars are fastened to the ridge by a steel bracket.
2. Where bars need to be spliced, it is done with a special no-leak clamp tight joint.
3. The clamp column fittings are malleable iron, made to carry three bolts (not just one or two).
4. The capping over the pipe purlin end, keeping out moisture and preventing insects from lodging there.

These are not all the things we do different. Just some of them. For the rest send for Special Pipe Frame or Semi-Iron Circular.

CHOICE SHIPPING ROSES Russells—We are growing the finest Russells arriving in this market. All visitors to the greenhouses in this district say that our Russells are the best to be found. We cut our flowers tight in the bud, as the majority of our trade is shipping. Flowers that are sold mostly to the city trade are allowed to open more than for the shipping trade. We have the regular varieties of Roses in large quantities, receiving them direct from the greenhouses within a few hours of being cut, which enables us to fill all orders with strictly fresh stock. This is the great advantage of buying direct of the grower.

CLEVELAND, O.

November 15, 1916.

The White Company,
Cleveland, Ohio.
Gentlemen:

I purchased my first White three-quarter ton truck in May, 1914. Since that time it has been constantly on the go, making deliveries in Cleveland and its suburbs, and has always given dependable service. It is economical to operate, costs very little for repairs and appears to be as good today as when I purchased it.

Since I installed motor delivery service I have not only reduced my yearly delivery costs by a worth-while margin, but their greater speed has enabled me to expand my business over a much larger territory. The trucks have advertising value too, for they bring my name before the public every day.

The best proof of my satisfaction is expressed in my purchase of three additional White trucks this year.

Very truly yours,

KIRCHNERS.

We have many things to be thankful for—not the least of which are our NOVELTIES FOR 1917, in CHRYSANTHEMUMS and ROSES, THE BEST WE HAVE EVER DISTRIBUTED

LOUISA POCKETT

A white that will displace Turner. Mr. Pockett, who raised both varieties, says so and I endorse his statement.

NAG-IR-ROC

(Exhibited as Golden Champion)

Positively the best yellow we ever introduced; color, marvelous, shiny orange.

W. W. WAITE

A wonderful bronze that will keep on or off the plants for weeks and can be shipped across the continent.

OCTOBER KING

The record-breaking early yellow. Color, as deep as Golden Yellow. Size, one of the largest, and ready to cut the first week in October.

PRES. JOHN EVERITT

A bronzy-buff monster, indispensable for the show table; ideal in stem, form and foliage.

BOL D'OR

Maize yellow, absolutely perfect in outline; a "big fellow" that will stand with the very best.

Trade prices—$1.60 per plant; $16.00 per doz.; $100.00 per 100. Delivery in the new year.

(Price applies to the six foregoing varieties.)

NOVELTY SINGLES

Our New Singles are the finest in the world. We were awarded First for our exhibit of Singles at the Boston Horticultural Society Show; First in the Horticultural Society of New York exhibition, for twenty-four vases of Singles, and First in the American Institute for Seedling Singles—while every exhibitor of note in the country carries our Singles in the winning stands.

Dickson's Novelty Garden Roses

LILLIAN MOORE

Winner of the $1000 trophy at the Panama-Pacific Exposition, for the best seedling not yet in commerce. Winner of the Silver Medal at the New York Horticultural Society Show, for the "Best New Rose of the Year." Color, exquisite deep Indian yellow, flowers absolutely perfect in shape.

Ulster Standard, brilliant crimson, and Golden Spray, a lovely yellow. Two single roses of surpassing merit.

Mrs. H. M. Barton, a blaze of crimson from May until November, and Ethel Dickson, a lovely rose-pink variety.

June delivery, 4-inch pots. Trade price, $12.50 per doz.

The Tuxedo Collection of New Japanese Anemones

We take pleasure in announcing that we have secured for distribution this year the New Seedling Anemone Mums raised by Mr. Carl Schaeffer, of Tuxedo, N. Y., which created a sensation at the exhibitions in Tuxedo, Philadelphia and New York.

These are:—

INNOCENCIA, pale pink
WILFREDA, pale yellow, bronze center
GRAF von FLEMING, pale lavender
JUNO, deep lilac, shaded white
WEE WAH, terra-cotta, shaded yellow
YELLOW PRINCE, maize yellow
OLD ROSE, old rose in color
H. J. HEINZ, canary-yellow, orange center
CLEMENCIA, deep pink

NEW POMPON ANEMONE

Norman Reuter, brilliant yellow, one of the finest pot plant subjects ever introduced

Prices, 50c per plant; $5.00 per doz.; $35.00 per 100

NOVELTY FORCING ROSES

Primrose—The Improved Ophelia. Flowers have more petals and considerably more color, being a deeper shade of pinkish-yellow. By its behavior with us—mildew and spot proof.

Mme. Collette Martinette—Deep golden-yellow, resembling the color of the deepest Sunburst, and does not bleach. One of the few yellow roses that takes kindly to grafting.

Trade prices—Grafted or own root, $6.00 per doz.; $40.00 per 100

Our Complete List will be ready in January

Geo. W. Crawbuck Co.

INCORPORATED

47 West 28th Street Phones: Madison Sq. 5296-5297 NEW YORK CITY

The GEO. W. CRAWBUCK CO. takes much pleasure in announcing its removal to its new and elegant store at 47 West 28th Street, between 6th Avenue and Broadway, convenient to all trolleys, the Elevated R. R. station and the subways. We now have every facility for handling satisfactorily the products of our growers. Shipments to any part of the country. President Crawbuck is the only wholesale florist member of the Rotary Club in New York.

We handle the choicest varieties of Roses, Mums, Carnations, Lilies, Violets, Valley, and every seasonable flower.

Among our leading Specialties are

BUDLONG'S FAMOUS ROSES, In 20 Varieties

Among our Growers are

JACOB HAUCK, with his noted late Chrysanthemums and Easter Lilies.

RYDER BROS., W. H. STONE and H. R. McENEANY, with their high-grade Carnations.

H. T. & A. H. FUNNELL, with Snapdragons, Daisies and Carnations.

We have handled the products of these growers and many other experts for years. Doesn't this appeal to you who think of making a change? Give us a trial.

MAGNOLIA FACTS

¶Yes, Mr. Florist, be particular as to what kind of Magnolia Leaves you buy now, under the present conditions.

¶Dye colors have advanced from 1000% to 2000%; preparing chemicals have exactly doubled in prices since the war began, as have also the paper cartons. In spite of this, we are in position to furnish you with first-class Magnolia Leaves through your wholesaler at a small advance in comparison with the above.

¶We guarantee that the quality of our leaves is as good now as they were before the war, and that they are prepared fully, regardless of the above-stated high prices of the materials.

¶You fool yourself if you buy the cheaper grade of leaves, as they will become mildewed and they will dry out shortly after the boxes are opened. Our goods are sold by every leading wholesale florist in the United States and Canada, and they have stood the test for the past six years.

¶A magnolia leaf is only worth using if it has been fully preserved, but NOT by a cheap process, which enables others to sell the leaves cheaper by a few cents. You pay these few cents about ten or fifteen times over, when you consider the poor value of these goods.

Craig Quality Christmas Plants

PLANT BASKETS

Our Plant Baskets have been so well received that they are now a very important feature of our Christmas business. Last year we offered only one style in three sizes. This year we have about twenty-five different numbers. All are first-class, both as to style of basket and filling.

Nothing but highly-colored well-grown stock is used, such as Dracaenas in variety, Crotons, Pandanus, Ferns, etc. On account of being filled early and becoming established, they are bound to give you and your customer satisfaction. We cannot recommend them too highly.

Many of the baskets and window boxes are in two-tone effect.

All baskets have zinc (not tin) liners.

NEPHROLEPIS JOHN WANAMAKER

Introduced August, 1915

The Wanamaker Boston has more than made good. Everyone who has received early shipments from us has been greatly pleased with the variety and repeat orders have been coming in daily. We have a very large stock.

A "sport" from Nephrolepis Scholzelii, with longer, narrower, gracefully drooping fronds. It is not so compact in growth as Scholzelii, and therefore does not decay in the center, and is a durable house fern. It is a rapid grower, making an abundance of fronds, and is quite distinct from any other Nephrolepis.

The following prices are for immediate and spring delivery:

2¼-inch pots, strong plants.....$8 per 100; $75 per 1,000
4-inch pots, strong plants.....$25 per 100; $225 per 1,000
6-inch pots, strong plants.....$50 per 100
8-inch pots, strong plants.....$12 and $15 per doz.

Quick Shipments of Thanksgiving Ribbons and Chiffons

Owing to the large stocks we carry, we are in a position to give very prompt service to those florists requiring quick deliveries.

Practically every item we sample we carry in such large quantities that we are in an especially favored position this season, when demand keeps pace with the supply.

Being manufacturers, we offer you values based upon cost of production, and you thus eliminate between profits. We are justly enthusiastic over our line of novelties this season. In style, variety and beauty they exceed all previous efforts, and we think they are well worth the careful inspection of all progressive florists.

THANKSGIVING MAKES ANOTHER GAIN

It is easy to see that flowers are becoming a necessity in the lives of an increasingly large number of people, as, with food prices the highest ever known, the sales of decorations for the table have beaten the record of any previous Thanksgiving.

THOSE florists who chart their sales, so that they need not base their plans on tricky memory, found at the opening of this week they had need of the largest quantity of stock ever provided against Thanksgiving orders. In the annals of the trade Thanksgiving has been known for years as "an extra good Saturday" and the week as "one with two Saturdays." The estimate will have to be revised. Thanksgiving has been on the up grade for several years. In 1914 we attributed the increase to a special degree of thankfulness due to the recent shock of the war in other lands. In 1915 we credited the gain to the wave of returning prosperity, a prosperity that is at high tide today.

Flower-buying Is a Habit.

But in 1916 let it be said that flowers have become so fixed as a part of the needs of the American people that they hold their place regardless of the rising cost of living that has an appreciable influence in other lines.

In the provision trades they once spoke to us patronizingly, commiseratingly, because, as they said, flowers were "a luxury"; it was to be expected that a florist would have harder sledding than almost anybody else, for almost everything was more necessary than flowers. But we are entitled to look with sympathy on, to deal gently with, the man who says that now. Poor fellow; he doesn't know! Flowers today will grace many a Thanksgiving table that sees no turkey! Flowers have become a necessity—if not to all the people, at least to a great many more than ever before, and not by any means all of them wealthy.

CHRISTMAS NUMBER

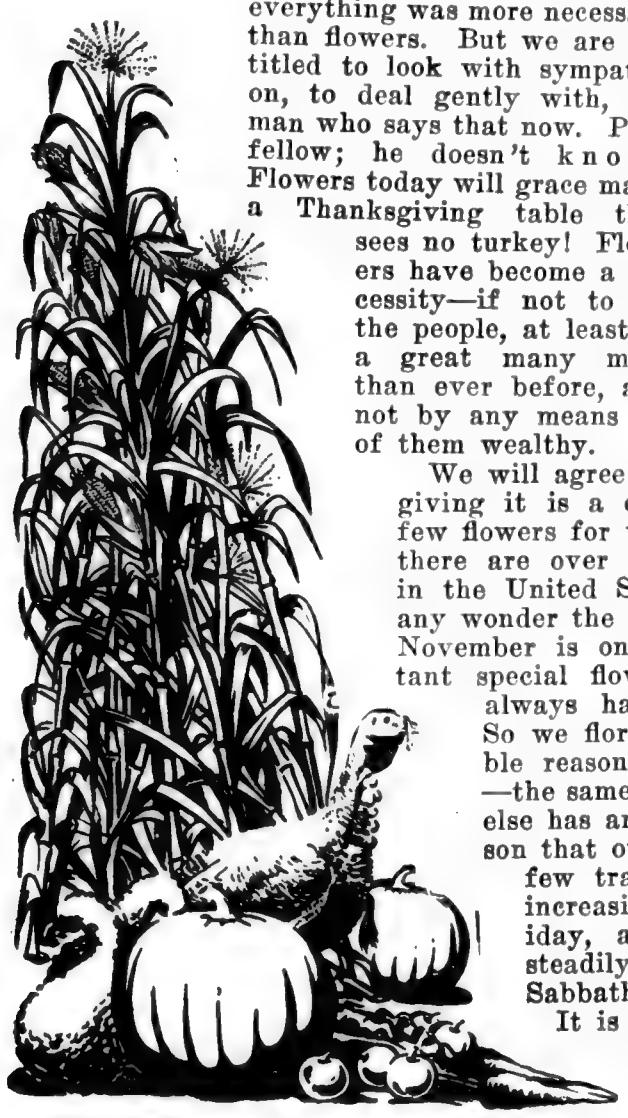
FLORISTS' REVIEW

OUT DECEMBER 14th.

We will agree that at Thanksgiving it is a case of "just a few flowers for the table." But there are over 20,000,000 tables in the United States! So is it any wonder the last Thursday in November is one of the important special flower days? Not always has been, but is. So we florists have a double reason to be thankful—the same reason everyone else has and the extra reason that ours is one of the few trades that profits increasingly by this holiday, a holiday which steadily becomes more Sabbath-like.

It is apparent florists everywhere have had a good Thanksgiving. There were plenty of flowers; they could be offered at moderate prices; everybody bought some. It was quite turning the tables on the provision man, who had to pay so much for his stock he could sell less than usual even though he cut his profit thin.

Anyone reviewing the Thanksgiving business will be sure to note that it was the moderate-priced stock that was in demand, a little better grade than usual, perhaps, but still the "sensible" length. It always is so when people buy flowers for their own use.



At Christmas one can count with reasonable certainty on the call being for the more costly grades of stock, but for Thanksgiving short to medium roses, carnations and pompon mums are the big sellers.

A Difference in Demand.

"You know before a customer tells you," commented a thoughtful retailer the other day, "what is to be done with the flowers selected. The long-stemmed Beauties, the 4-foot Russells and the largest mums are gifts for somebody who might think one 'cheap' if more useful flowers were sent. But the flowers to go to one's own home are 12-inch roses, a few carnations or a bunch of pompons."

One of the noteworthy features of this Thanksgiving was that the trade increased, the quantity of flowers sold made a gain practically without special effort on the part of the trade. What would it have been had everybody pushed the way Mothers' day is pushed? Business conditions have been so good this autumn that many florists dealing with the public have relaxed their efforts to sell, which makes the large volume of business done this week look all the better.

But here a word about Christmas, now only a few days distant. Don't let Christmas go by without some special advertising of flowers for use as gifts. Let it be known, also, that flowers and plants are one commodity that still can be bought at moderate prices—at the prices one is accustomed to pay, for the advances in this trade are nothing like the increased prices of other Christmas gifts. It is an argument we can make much of. We can give splendid values and make friends.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

WILL YELLOW TURNER SUIT?

Can you tell me the name of any yellow chrysanthemum that is similar in habit and size to Wm. Turner?

G. E. Y.—Okla.

One yellow chrysanthemum that comes into bloom at the same time as Turner and has the same habit, etc., is Yellow Turner. This is a trifle light in color and, if you are looking for a deeper yellow, Odessa would answer the purpose. Chas H. Totty.

JAPANESE ANEMONE MUMS.

The Tuxedo Collection.

The Japanese anemone-flowered chrysanthemum was grown considerably more twenty-five years ago than it is today. At that time the varieties like Judge Hoyt and Le Chatillonaise were our standbys. They gradually dropped from cultivation and at this time are almost forgotten.

It is, therefore, a great pleasure to be able to report a renaissance of the Japanese anemone mum. Carl Schaeffer, of Tuxedo, N. Y., has been working patiently on this type for the last fifteen years and the resulting varieties, which he calls the Tuxedo collection, and which I am describing in the succeeding notes, created something approaching a furor at the exhibitions in New York, Philadelphia and Tuxedo this fall.

Mr. Schaeffer has succeeded, by a process of elimination, in getting together a remarkable collection of this type, and a visit to his place this fall created an impression not easily forgotten. He had one entire house devoted to these anemone mums and they were certainly a wonderful sight. Mr. Schaeffer is over 80 years of age, although one would not think so when listening to his sprightly conversation and noting the ease with which he walks about among his pets, as he calls the Tuxedo collection. It is doubly pleasing to be able to chronicle his splendid success at this age, while he is still living to enjoy the fruits of his many years of labor.

A Cultural Hint.

In growing these anemones, Mr. Schaeffer sets the plants out on the bench in early May and allows three shoots—consequently three flowers—on each plant. When grown in this manner, they leave nothing to be desired either in size or finish.

One of the prettiest of the entire set is Innocencia, the outer petals of which are pure white and the quilled center petals beautifully flushed pale pink. The edges of the individual petals are lined with light yellow. This is a chaste and beautiful sort.

Old Rose, as its name implies, is old rose in color. The center, which of course is prominent in all of the true anemone type, is over six inches across. The flowers that I saw were all nine inches across and these were grown five or six flowers to a plant. The center tubular petals are tipped with gold and make a splendid contrast. Old Rose is one of the most generally admired of the entire collection.

H. J. Heinz showed up as the largest of the set. The outer petals, like the center, were also tubular and stood straight out at right angles from the center. These petals are light canary yellow, but the center is a deep bronzy orange. This is a strong-growing variety and is most impressive, standing straight up, stiff and erect, with a marshal-like aspect of trimness and neatness.

Exceptionally Full in Center.

In Clemencia the ray petals are deep pink, shading in the tubular petals to a deeper shade of pink. The center petals are exceptionally prominent in this variety, as the outer or ray petals fall down considerably. Many of the ladies who saw this variety on exhibition insisted on handling it, since they claimed it looked like a flower cut from tissue paper.

Graf von Fleming is one of the most charming and refined varieties. The color is a pale lavender. The inner petals are not so prominent as in some of the others of this type. The outer petals are tubular until about half an inch from the edge, when they open and droop back in the most graceful and artistic fashion.

Wee Wah is the name of an old Indian village in Mr. Schaeffer's neighborhood and he desired to perpetuate the name by applying it to one of his varieties. The general effect in the color of this variety is bronzy yellow, somewhat of a flame color. The outer petals look as if gold dust were powdered over its crimson-yellow surface, it glistens so in the sunlight. Wee Wah is a dwarf grower and wonderfully effective when grown as an exhibition pot plant.

Pepita also is a refined looking flower. In this variety the orange-yellow center predominates over the pale pink of the outer petals. The latter are much more numerous in this variety than in any other of this type, and this permits its being used more extensively as a cut flower for shipping than many of the others. The indications are that a large number of this anemone type will be grown for the market next year, and Pepita is the most valuable for that purpose.

A Special Favorite.

Yellow Prince was my favorite of the entire collection. The outer or ray petals droop considerably and the center tubular petals are loosely arranged, giving the flower a much more light and airy appearance than is possessed by most of the others in this set. The color of the ray petals is light yellow and the shading gradually runs to orange in the center of the flower. Yellow Prince is one of the most attractive of the group in color and style of growth.

Graf von Oriola is a particularly strong grower. As in the case of Heinz, the petals are stiff and crisp. The color is a pure rose-pink and the tubular petals in the center are all tipped with bright gold. The ends of the outer petals in every case incurve slightly, instead of drooping back as some of the others do, and this makes the flower much larger and gives it a bold appearance.

Titian Beauty is well named and the picture does not begin to do it justice. The color is a rich bronze, shaded in the center to what is practically scarlet. This is a striking variety and effective in its combination of coloring. A table decoration I saw in Tuxedo, arranged with this variety and autumn foliage, was the most novel I have ever seen.

Wilfreda is particularly strong in stem and foliage. The outer petals are numerous and placed at right angles.

A Portion of the Tuxedo Collection of Anemone-flowered Chrysanthemums, Grown by Carl Schaeffer.

These ray petals are pale yellow. The tubular petals in the center shade to a bronzy terra cotta, tipped with old gold. It is a magnificent variety in every way.

Juno is deep lilac, shading to white. The center petals are of a deeper shade than the ray petals and are loose and graceful in effect. It is a large variety, with remarkable foliage and stem. The stem is stiff and erect.

This is the finest break we have had in many years in mum growing and I predict that the interest in the 1917 exhibitions will be greatly increased in consequence of these anemones being introduced to the trade.

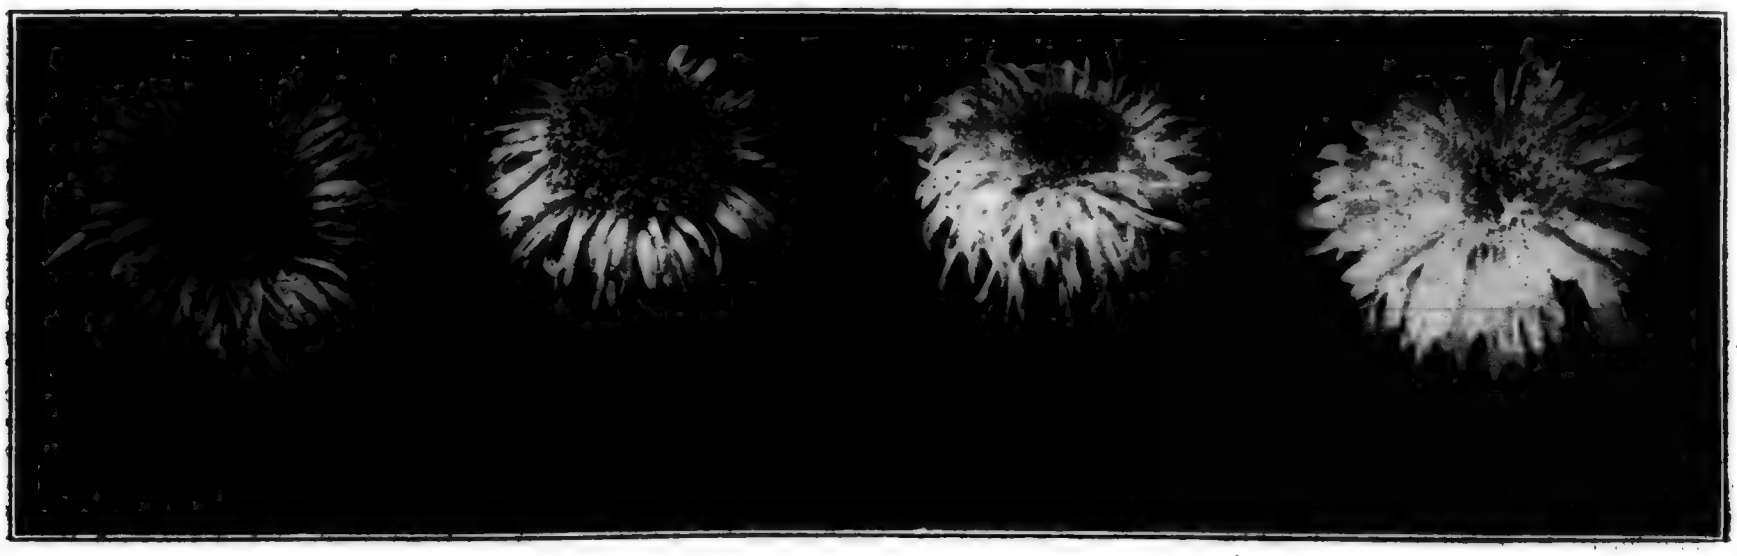
At Boston, November 18, sport from a pink seedling, light pink, Japanese reflexed, submitted by the F. Dorner & Sons Co., La Fayette, Ind., scored as follows on the commercial scale: Color, 15; form, 13; fullness, 9; stem, 14; foliage, 14; substance, 14; size, 9; total, 88.

At Chicago, November 18, seedling, white, greenish center, anemone, submitted by the Deerfield Nurseries, Deerfield, Ill., scored as follows: Color, 35; form, 18; stem and foliage, 16; fullness, 16; total, 85.



At Chicago, November 18, Annie, white, yellow center, anemone, submitted by Henry Wehrmann, Maywood, Ill., scored as follows: Color, 35; form, 18; stem and foliage, 19; fullness, 18; total, 90.

Charles H. Totty wishes to change the name of the variety exhibited by him as Golden Champion, calling it Nag-Ir-Roc. C. W. Johnson, Sec'y.

PROPAGATING DRACÆNAS.

Can you tell me how to propagate Dracæna Lindenii and Dracæna gracilis? R. P.—Ore.

Such dracænas as Lindenii and gracilis can be propagated by rooting the tops in sand, or by ringing them. The latter method consists in making a cut clear around the stem, pushing pieces of toothpick in to keep the cut open, tying moss around this cut and keeping it constantly moist in a warm house. When the moss becomes filled with roots, the wood can be cut off and potted. These dracænas can also be propagated by cutting the stems into short lengths—one inch is sufficient—covering these with sand in a warm propagating bench and keeping them moist. Growths will start in a few weeks, and when the roots start to form the portions of stem can be potted and kept close and warm until established. C. W.

FUEL FAMINE EASING UP.

PINCH IS LESS SEVERE.

Cars Are Being Supplied.

Although there are hundreds of florists who will not agree with the statement, the coal situation is easier than it was. The great outcry has resulted in speeding up the movement, and especially the unloading and return, of cars, as the railroads have found themselves the goat and have been making great efforts to relieve the conditions for which they are responsible.

Deliveries have become more regular for the growers who are dealing with responsible people and who have established reputations for meeting their own obligations promptly.

Contracts and Credits.

The situation is one that brings the business methods of sellers and buyers into the bright light and shows them up for what they are. Beyond question, the best of coal producers have been prevented from living up to their schedule of deliveries by the shortage of cars, but they all have had some cars, equal to at least fifty per cent of their mining capacity, and they have been able to make at least that percentage of deliveries on contracts, probably more, because mines do not usually contract up to full capacity. The dependable concerns have been giving the contract customers every pound shipped, selling absolutely no coal on the open market. The untrustworthy producer has been "stalling" the holder of a contract with the story of the alleged impossibility of getting cars and selling his output at the high prices now prevailing in the open market.

Each florist will know from his experience which class of producer he has contracted with this season and will know what to do next year.

But obligations never are all on one side and this is a time when the florist finds a record of the prompt payment of bills is a decided advantage. If the florist has failed to make payment as agreed, he has broken the contract and has no claim under it the other party does not choose to recognize.

Many Florists in Bad Place.

Each day brings new reports of greenhouse establishments that are on the verge of closing up or freezing up. Nothing that has happened in years has so vividly illuminated the average florist's lack of preparedness, the want of forehandedness that for years has been a handicap on the development of the trade. There are hundreds, even thousands, of greenhouses in which the fuel supply has been permitted to become a hand-to-mouth affair. Repeated warnings that the arrival of cold weather would bring trouble failed to stir them and today for every grower who has his bunkers full there is another who is dependent on tomorrow's deliveries for the next night's fire.

The florist who has been buying regularly in one place and paying bills promptly is in a position where, even if his supply is low, he will be taken care of up to the limit of the ability of the coal concern with which he deals, but the man who still owes for last spring's fuel is in a precarious position.

Prices a Little Easier.

The number of florists who have contracts for coal is small in comparison to those who must pay whatever price is asked. The larger places nearly all have contracts, for they would not have become large had not the managers been men who could look ahead, but some ranges in which the fuel bill always has run to quite a figure find it necessary to pay the market price, which is anything the seller asks, up to three times the summer rate.

As to how and why the market eased the Coal Trade Journal says:

"The anthracite situation has quieted noticeably within the week. It is not that the supply has increased or that the demand for coal at the regular price has subsided, but the panicky feeling on the part of consumers has disappeared for the time being. With the public less clamorous, retail dealers are not so much inclined to offer extravagant prices for immediate delivery, and as a result smaller premiums are being obtained by independent operators and middlemen.

"A sudden let-up in the demand for bituminous developed right after election and the market has weakened slightly since then. Various theories are advanced to account for the change of heart on the part of consumers. None is entirely convincing in itself, but each has probably played its part. About the most logical deduction is that many steam users who were short of coal have managed to secure enough on their contracts and outside orders to carry them along for a while and have decided not to buy any more in the open market until their stocks are again nearing exhaustion or until prices recede.

"Looking to the future, it must be said, however, that there is every indication of a strong and steady market for bituminous coal and the movement from the producer to consumer is regulated largely by the car supply."

CRYSTAL WHITE NEXT YEAR.

David S. Ward, of the carnation department of the Cottage Gardens Co., asks the Review to print the following paragraph "to correct a wrong impression":

"The impression seems to be widely prevalent in trade circles that the Cottage Gardens Co.'s new carnation, Crystal White, is to be disseminated this season. The company is at a loss to know where this impression originated, as it has never been their intention to send out Crystal White until next season and they never made any statement that could be construed otherwise. The only carnation they are sending out this year is Cottage Maid and they wish to assure the trade that Crystal White will not be on the market until the season of 1917-18."

TO CHECK CARNATION RUST.

I am sending you some leaves of my carnations, which show signs of some sort of disease. The symptoms of the trouble have appeared only on a new lot of plants which were shipped to me from another state. The disease was on them when I received them, but has become worse, though it has not yet spread to my other plants. What shall I do to check the disease? I have used a nicotine spray. A. G.—Okla.

The disease you complain of is the well known carnation rust. This is not affected in the least by nicotine spraying. In fact, the nicotine has no fungicidal properties whatever and should be used only in combating insects, such as aphis, thrips, etc. For the rust you need to use such remedies as Bordeaux mixture, Grape Dust, sulphur on the steam pipes, etc. First pick off as many of the affected leaves as practical and then either spray the plants thoroughly with the Bordeaux mixture or dust them with the Grape Dust. Mix some sulphur and lime in equal proportions with enough water to make a thick paint, and paint one of the steam pipes with it. Reduce your syringing to a minimum, always keeping a sharp lookout for signs of red spider. Give all the ventilation possible and keep the plants growing vigorously. A. F. J. B.

WORMS ON CARNATIONS.

We are sending you some worms, which we think are wireworms, though we are not quite sure. They are spoiling our carnations. They work up the stem, eat out the heart, and spoil the leaves. The soil seems to contain quantities of the worms and lime has no effect on them. Can you tell us the most economical way to rid the soil of them? M. F. C.—Colo.

The specimens appeared to be of the wireworm type. Lime will have no effect on them, but if you procure some carbon bisulphide, obtainable at all drug stores in 1-pound cans and selling at about 25 cents per pound, you can clean out these and all other soil pests. Bore holes twelve to eighteen inches apart each way in the benches with a sharply pointed stick, pour a scant teaspoonful of the carbon in each hole and immediately cover it with soil. The carbon forms a gas which will kill all soil pests and is not injurious to plant life. As you cannot reach the worms inside the stems or on the foliage with the carbon bisulphide, it would be advisable to spray the foliage with arsenate of lead, at the rate of three pounds to fifty gallons of water. This will not burn the foliage, but will somewhat whiten it.

When working with the carbon bisulphide do not use any naked lights, as the carbon is somewhat explosive. I think if you use the carbon and arsenate of lead you will clean out the bulk of your foes. C. W.

GAS IN COOLING ROOM.

Last year and the year before that we had trouble with our carnation blooms. They would go to sleep the day after they were cut. The stems were long and stiff and the blooms large, seemingly showing good substance, but no matter whether they were cut in the morning or at night, in one day they would be sleepy looking and unfit for first-class sale. What was the trouble? N. F. C.—Iowa.

I am inclined to think that your trouble is not in your houses but in your cooling room. Could there possibly be any gas there, from a gas main or a stove? There is perhaps nothing that will put carnations to sleep so quickly as gas, and it does not take much of it to do the trick.

A. F. J. B.

REMEDY FOR STEM-ROT.

Will you please tell me what is the best remedy for stem-rot of carnations? I have a house of plants that are badly affected with the disease. As I have not had much experience with this trouble, my best course seems to be to call on you for advice.

G. W. B.—N. Y.

If it were possible to apply the remedies at the proper time, there would be less difficulty in controlling this destructive disease. By the time a plant shows that it is affected it is beyond saving, as it does not begin to wilt until the disease has destroyed the bark nearly all the way around the stem. So the only practical method is to treat every plant in the house, with the hope of reaching those that may be in the early stages of the disease.

We suggest that you procure some Bordeaux mixture and apply it with a compressed air sprayer, shooting the liquid in among the lower branches and stems of the plants in such a manner as to reach every portion. This is the best remedy known at this time. Water carefully, but do not run the soil too dry. Syringe only often enough to keep down red spider. Do everything you can to promote a steady, luxuriant growth, as that will assist the plants in resisting the attacks of the fungus. Give liberal ventilation at every opportunity. A. F. J. B.

Houston, Tex.—The new sales manager for Kerr, the Florist, E. W. Eichling, comes from New Orleans, where he saw years of service with one of the leading establishments.

Greenville, Miss.—L. A. Waas reports business good and Christmas prospects excellent. He says one of the chief pests the growers in this locality have is the little black ant, which tends to overrun the greenhouses.

New Orleans, La.—F. C. Couret has been a successful grower of chrysanthemums for the last four years. Each season a percentage of the flowers are lost because of rot that develops after the blooms are a few inches in diameter, due no doubt to the wettings the flowers have received. This year there were more chrysanthemums grown for All Saints' day than ever before, most of the growers having unusually good success.

Dallas, Tex.—While T. J. Wolfe, president of the Texas State Florists' Association, was here attending the state flower show, November 15 to 17, he devoted considerable time to investigating trade conditions. At the close of the show he said: "Every florist seems to be busy. Flowers are in good demand throughout the state at better prices than I ever have known to be obtained in previous years."

New Orleans, La.—In the flower division of the live stock show, November 18, the Avenue Floral Co. won a prize of $25 for a group of mums. The Metairie Ridge Nursery Co. captured two prizes of $25 each for crotons and a group of foliage plants; also first prize for table decorations, thirty-three other prizes and the sweepstake prize. The Flower Shop won first on a wedding decoration.

FUEL FAMINE EASING UP.

PINCH IS LESS SEVERE.

Cars Are Being Supplied.

Although there are hundreds of florists who will not agree with the statement, the coal situation is easier than it was. The great outcry has resulted in speeding up the movement, and especially the unloading and return, of cars, as the railroads have found themselves the goat and have been making great efforts to relieve the conditions for which they are responsible.

Deliveries have become more regular for the growers who are dealing with responsible people and who have established reputations for meeting their own obligations promptly.

Contracts and Credits.

The situation is one that brings the business methods of sellers and buyers into the bright light and shows them up for what they are. Beyond question, the best of coal producers have been prevented from living up to their schedule of deliveries by the shortage of cars, but they all have had some cars, equal to at least fifty per cent of their mining capacity, and they have been able to make at least that per centage of deliveries on contracts, probably more, because mines do not usually contract up to full capacity. The dependable concerns have been giving the contract customers every pound shipped, selling absolutely no coal on the open market. The untrustworthy producer has been "stalling" the holder of a contract with the story of the alleged impossibility of getting cars and selling his output at the high prices now prevailing in the open market.

Each florist will know from his experience which class of producer he has contracted with this season and will know what to do next year.

But obligations never are all on one side and this is a time when the florist finds a record of the prompt payment of bills is a decided advantage. If the florist has failed to make payment as agreed, he has broken the contract and has no claim under it the other party does not choose to recognize.

Many Florists in Bad Place.

Each day brings new reports of greenhouse establishments that are on the verge of closing up or freezing up. Nothing that has happened in years has so vividly illuminated the average florist's lack of preparedness, the want of forehandedness that for years has been a handicap on the development of the trade. There are hundreds, even thousands, of greenhouses in which the fuel supply has been permitted to become a hand-to-mouth affair. Repeated warnings that the arrival of cold weather would bring trouble failed to stir them and today for every grower who has his bunkers full there is another who is dependent on tomorrow's deliveries for the next night's fire.

The florist who has been buying regularly in one place and paying bills promptly is in a position where, even if his supply is low, he will be taken care of up to the limit of the ability of the coal concern with which he deals, but the man who still owes for last spring's fuel is in a precarious position.

Prices a Little Easier.

The number of florists who have contracts for coal is small in comparison to those who must pay whatever price is asked. The larger places nearly all have contracts, for they would not have become large had not the managers been men who could look ahead, but some ranges in which the fuel bill always has run to quite a figure find it necessary to pay the market price, which is anything the seller asks, up to three times the summer rate.

As to how and why the market eased the Coal Trade Journal says:

"The anthracite situation has quieted noticeably within the week. It is not that the supply has increased or that the demand for coal at the regular price has subsided, but the panicky feeling on the part of consumers has disappeared for the time being. With the public less clamorous, retail dealers are not so much inclined to offer extravagant prices for immediate delivery, and as a result smaller premiums are being obtained by independent operators and middlemen.

"A sudden let-up in the demand for bituminous developed right after election and the market has weakened slightly since then. Various theories are advanced to account for the change of heart on the part of consumers. None is entirely convincing in itself, but each has probably played its part. About the most logical deduction is that many steam users who were short of coal have managed to secure enough on their contracts and outside orders to carry them along for a while and have decided not to buy any more in the open market until their stocks are again nearing exhaustion or until prices recede.

"Looking to the future, it must be said, however, that there is every indication of a strong and steady market for bituminous coal and the movement from the producer to consumer is regulated largely by the car supply."

CARNATIONS

CRYSTAL WHITE NEXT YEAR.

David S. Ward, of the carnation department of the Cottage Gardens Co., asks the Review to print the following paragraph "to correct a wrong impression":

"The impression seems to be widely prevalent in trade circles that the Cottage Gardens Co.'s new carnation, Crystal White, is to be disseminated this season. The company is at a loss to know where this impression originated, as it has never been their intention to send out Crystal White until next season and they never made any statement that could be construed otherwise. The only carnation they are sending out this year is Cottage Maid and they wish to assure the trade that Crystal White will not be on the market until the season of 1917-18."

TO CHECK CARNATION RUST.

I am sending you some leaves of my carnations, which show signs of some sort of disease. The symptoms of the trouble have appeared only on a new lot of plants which were shipped to me from another state. The disease was on them when I received them, but has become worse, though it has not yet spread to my other plants. What shall I do to check the disease? I have used a nicotine spray. A. G.—Okla.

The disease you complain of is the well known carnation rust. This is not affected in the least by nicotine spraying. In fact, the nicotine has no fungicidal properties whatever and should be used only in combating insects, such as aphis, thrips, etc. For the rust you need to use such remedies as Bordeaux mixture, Grape Dust, sulphur on the steam pipes, etc. First pick off as many of the affected leaves as practical and then either spray the plants thoroughly with the Bordeaux mixture or dust them with the Grape Dust. Mix some sulphur and lime in equal proportions with enough water to make a thick paint, and paint one of the steam pipes with it. Reduce your syringing to a minimum, always keeping a sharp lookout for signs of red spider. Give all the ventilation possible and keep the plants growing vigorously. A. F. J. B.

WORMS ON CARNATIONS.

We are sending you some worms, which we think are wireworms, though we are not quite sure. They are spoiling our carnations. They work up the stem, eat out the heart, and spoil the leaves. The soil seems to contain quantities of the worms and lime has no effect on them. Can you tell us the most economical way to rid the soil of them? M. F. C.—Colo.

The specimens appeared to be of the wireworm type. Lime will have no effect on them, but if you procure some carbon bisulphide, obtainable at all drug stores in 1-pound cans and selling at about 25 cents per pound, you can clean out these and all other soil pests. Bore holes twelve to eighteen inches apart each way in the benches with a sharply pointed stick, pour a scant teaspoonful of the carbon in each hole and immediately cover it with soil. The carbon forms a gas which will kill all soil pests and is not injurious to plant life. As you cannot reach the worms inside the stems or on the foliage with the carbon bisulphide, it would be advisable to spray the foliage with arsenate of lead, at the rate of three pounds to fifty gallons of water. This will not burn the foliage, but will somewhat whiten it.

When working with the carbon bisulphide do not use any naked lights, as the carbon is somewhat explosive. I think if you use the carbon and arsenate of lead you will clean out the bulk of your foes. C. W.

GAS IN COOLING ROOM.

Last year and the year before that we had trouble with our carnation blooms. They would go to sleep the day after they were cut. The stems were long and stiff and the blooms large, seemingly showing good substance, but no matter whether they were cut in the morning or at night, in one day they would be sleepy looking and unfit for first-class sale. What was the trouble? N. F. C.—Iowa.

I am inclined to think that your trouble is not in your houses but in your cooling room. Could there possibly be any gas there, from a gas main or a stove? There is perhaps nothing that will put carnations to sleep so quickly as gas, and it does not take much of it to do the trick.

RETAIL STORE MANAGEMENT

WHAT THE LEADERS IN THE TRADE ARE DOING

"THE AWFUL GAP."

There are a large number of retail florists who operate greenhouses, producing cut flowers. Many of these find it necessary to buy a part of their stock in wholesale markets, but at other seasons produce more in their own greenhouses than is needed for their local retail trade and at such times are consignors to the wholesale markets. It is characteristic of such florists that they are unable to understand what one of them refers to as "the awful gap" between the price they have to pay when buying and the price they receive for the same thing when shipping to the wholesale market.

In the wholesaler's lexicon such florists are known as "dumpers" and many commission houses deal with them reluctantly. Not that the wholesaler has anything personal against the florist who alternately is buyer and consignor, but that his trade is not of the most desirable character. Such a man invariably orders most frequently when stock is scarcest, when his orders are most difficult to fill and when prices are at the highest. Quite the opposite, he turns consignor at a time that the wholesale markets are loaded with the stock of regular shippers, at a time when flowers are most difficult to sell and when prices are at the lowest. Such a man gets both extremes of the market, the hot end in each case, and he is not heard from at all under normal conditions, the average conditions that make the flower business the success it is.

The man who grows only a part of what he retails should understand these conditions, for "the awful gap" is largely of his own making and something that he will have to expect as long as the business is conducted along its present lines.

LET UNCLE SAM HELP.

The way paper prices have been bumping the sky during the last year, even little ideas for cutting down paper bills are not to be overlooked.

An eastern manufacturer recently sent out a notice to his dealers in which he suggested the use of government post cards as paper stock for small circulars, or advertising that could be successfully presented on the back of Uncle Sam's 1-penny post cards. Emphasis was laid on the fact that advertising literature printed on post cards can be mailed without the labor of stamping—the stamp being on the card, that labor is saved.

As yet Uncle Sam has not increased the price of postal cards, so it still is possible to purchase this piece of paper, postage paid, at the same cost as last year.

If a retail florist was to circularize 1,000 buyers of Christmas trees by means of first-class mail, the cost of postage would be $20. For that sum 2,000 buyers could be reached with 1-cent post cards, or the original 1,000 would require an expenditure of only $10 both for postage and paper. There would be no envelopes or letterheads to pay for; the post cards would simply have to be printed and dropped in the mail box. If a comparison is made between the costs of using post cards and large 1-cent circulars, the saving is in paper stock. Of course, in many cases the government card is not large enough to present the sales idea, or it may be too cheap-looking to harmonize with certain propositions.

The government also furnishes stamped envelopes, at the same old prices. And these prices seem low now when contrasted with prices on similar grades of stock envelopes purchased from paper houses or printers. Uncle Sam also will print the envelopes he sells, without extra cost, and everybody knows that printing bills now are higher than ever.

The government purchases post cards and envelopes in large quantities, on long-time contracts. Increased paper prices cannot increase the price of the post card, and it also is unlikely to increase the cost of standard envelopes, even if the government should have to pay a little more.

A BOOST FOR US.

Perhaps there is nothing more widely read in America than the back page, 2-column editorials in the Hearst newspapers. Consequently when these editorial columns contain a reference to the use of flowers it is of inestimable value to the trade.

November 21 the Hearst papers had an editorial entitled "Remind Me of My Wife's Birthday," in which it referred to "an interesting view of American married life," as follows:

Here is, to us, a new idea that illustrates one entertaining side of American married life.

A well-known florist sends out indiscriminately to prosperous and supposedly affectionate husbands a cheerful little postal card. On it is written, "Date of my wife's birthday—remind me of it."

The affectionate husband mails it back to the florist.

Then, every year, on the birthday of "the dear one," or a day before, the florist rings up the husband and says, "What about your wife's birthday? Any flowers?"

The husband says, "Thanks very much for reminding me. Send up a box of roses, with 'Much Love and Devotion' written on a card. Don't forget to remind me next year."

The wife gets the box of flowers on her birthday and the card with all the love and devotion. The husband pays the bill and all is serene in that happy American home.

The husband goes down to his work making money.

The wife leans back in her straight front or crooked front corset and says to all of her friends as they come in and roll up their eyes when they see the flowers, "Yes, Henry never forgets."

Dear Henry doesn't forget, thanks to the florist.

How many American homes are kept happy and smooth by these intelligent reminders?

The Hearst papers have done a great deal, in the news columns, to increase the appreciation and use of flowers, but probably nothing of greater value than this, although obviously the purpose was along quite another line.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Giganteum Lilies.

Most of the giganteum lily bulbs now have been received and the potting should be done with as little delay as possible. I have found that old chrysanthemum soil suits them well. Do not use any fresh manure or fertilizer for lilies, or, for that matter, any other bulbs. The 6-inch pots are the best to use. Set the bulbs low in the pots, leaving space for a liberal top-dressing. You have probably noted that all the best roots on Easter lilies come from above and not below the bulbs. For that reason the bulbs should be well covered, but it is best not to do all the covering at potting time. If you are short of 6-inch pots you can start them in 4-inch pots and give them a shift later. Giganteum lilies like heat from start to finish. After potting them, place them on or below a bench where a minimum temperature of 55 degrees is maintained. For some time it will be all right to tier the pots several deep, standing boards between the layers of pots.

Poinsettias.

The present fall, so far, has proved so warm and clear that poinsettias are more advanced than ever before at this season. Some plants, in fact, already have bracts almost fully developed. Some of these plants should be disposed of without delay, as it is doubtful whether they can be held in good shape for Christmas. Care must be taken not to subject these advanced plants to any decided temperature changes, or a heavy loss of foliage will be sure to follow. Watering must now be done with greater care. While we have continuously clear skies it seems to hurt plants little if they get a little too much water, but with lower temperatures outdoors, more artificial heat, dark weather and less ventilation, the watering must be done carefully. Liquid manure can be used until the bracts are half developed; then discontinue its use, or the bracts will become soft and will lose some of their brilliancy.

Azaleas for the Holidays.

Such azaleas as are wanted for Christmas should have their buds well advanced before being placed in heat; then they need plenty of syringing and atmospheric moisture. Such varieties as Mme. Petrick, Hexe and Deutsche Perle are good Christmas standbys. A short time ago it seemed doubtful whether any azaleas would reach this country in time for the holidays, but recently they have come to hand in large numbers and in good condition. Carried-over plants will have the buds better made up than the imported ones and, while they may not have so good a color, will usually bloom much more profusely.

Snapdragons for Spring Crop.

Perhaps you would like to grow a bench or two of snapdragons for a spring crop. In such a case, now is the time to sow seeds of such good varieties as Silver Pink, Nelrose or Virginia, in pink, and of a good intermediate white, these being the best selling colors. Of course you can root cuttings also, but you will find that seedlings possess far more vigor and a small percentage only will fail to come true to color. A space 10x10 inches is ample for these snapdragons when benched. Pink is far and away the best selling color. Next comes white, with a smaller call still for yellow and scarlet. We have not yet secured a true winter-blooming pink snapdragon, one which will flower like Phelps' White, but we are bound to get it before long.

Keeping Bulbs Outdoors.

By long odds the best storage place for all Dutch bulbs is a good cold cellar, or they will do well in coldframes where sashes can be used when severe weather arrives and where a coating of dry leaves, straw or hay placed above the flats or pans will help to exclude frost. Although a little frost will not do any particular harm, still it may break earthenware receptacles and would better be excluded. A good many growers still prefer to keep their stock outdoors. In such cases be sure the location is a well drained one and see that water is well supplied as long as good weather lasts. Then cover with soil or coal ashes and, as the weather becomes more severe, use hay, straw or leaves to exclude the frost. It is not the most pleasant of jobs, digging out these bulbs in winter, and mild days must always be selected for the work. I have found that bulbs stored in a good cold cellar do as well as those kept outdoors, and can be flowered even later.

Bulb and Perennial Beds.

It is not a good plan to mulch bulb beds until the ground is frozen fairly hard. A mulch is given, not to keep the bulbs warm, as many imagine, but rather to hold some frost in and check their top growths during winter. If bulbs are buried under leaves or some other dry mulch while the ground still is soft, growth will continue right through the winter, and in spring it will be a hard job to uncover the beds without breaking shoots. Furthermore, mice and other rodents often raise havoc in winter if the ground below the mulch is soft.

Hardy perennials should have a mulch of coarse, strawy manure, which is less likely to be blown away than a lighter mulch. Canterbury bells, foxgloves, sweet williams, pansies, violas, myosotis and daisies need to be stored in coldframes in some cold sections, but I have found that a mulch of dry leaves, with a scattering of old manure over it to prevent its being blown away, carries them through in fine condition, even if we get an occasional minimum of 20 degrees below zero. Merely enough leaves or straw should be given to cover the plants; a heavy covering will cause both foxgloves and Canterbury bells to rot.

NOTES FROM FOREIGN LANDS

Ghent, Belgium.—Azaleas will cost more in 1917. In the first place, everything does; in the second place, labor is scarce; in the third place, every encouragement is given to the production of food crops; in the fourth place, there is less than a normal quantity of young stock coming on, so that the larger commercial sizes are almost sure to be in light supply for several years.

Bath, England.—The embargo on valley pips of every origin has created a demand for an English supply and the industry of pip production is under investigation to see if it can be made permanently profitable, as it takes three years to turn a crop. It has developed that Walter Ware, of Bath, has had considerable experience in growing valley pips for his own forcing and now has a limited supply of home production.

Lisse, Holland.—J. J. Grullemans & Sons are responsible for the statement, with regard to bulbs in general, that prices of the cheaper sorts are advancing considerably. Stocks are low, as many growers threw away large quantities of bulbs the first year of the war, and a big bulk has been used for food. Humanity did not take kindly to "tulip bread," but Messrs. Grullemans say that cows fed on tulips and crocus give an abundance of milk of the finest quality. Daffodils cannot be utilized in this way, being slightly poisonous, so they are a dead loss when not salable.

Paris, France.—A trial of new roses will take place in the park of Bagatelle in 1917 and 1918, as in previous years, the plants, as far as possible, to be raised in pots, and at least five of each variety sent before April 15, 1917. A notice must be appended as to their origin and parentage, stating, if necessary, the special treatment required for the plants. The jury will study, during two seasons, the flowering qualities and habit of growth. Plants are to be forwarded to Roseraie de Bagatelle au Bois de Boulogne, Eu gare de Neuilly-Porte-Maillot-Paris, and communications to Le Conservateur des Promenades de Paris, 4 Route du Champ d'Entrainement, par Neuilly (Seine), France.

OPEN LETTERS from READERS

MURILLO TULIPS.

In The Review for November 16, A. D. C., of New York, asks for information relative to the damping off of Murillo tulips. Having had this trouble with Murillo and having found a way to cope with it, I feel that my brief suggestion may be of benefit to the inquirer.

If, instead of forcing Murillo, A. D. C. placed his pans under an ordinary bench, on the shady side of the house, and left them there until the buds showed through the leaves, and then lifted them into the light, I feel sure that he would have no more trouble.

PRAISES DALLAS SHOW.

Permit me, as an attendant, to say a few words of praise for the flower show of the Texas State Florists' Association, which was held at Dallas, Tex., November 14 to 17. The exhibition was the best ever held in Texas, in many ways. First, the attendance was good and grew better and more enthusiastic each day; second, the premiums were larger and the show better financed than any previous one; third, there was an increase of fully fifty per cent in the quantity of state exhibits; fourth, last but not least, the out-of-state exhibitors were many and most liberal in coming to Dallas with their displays.

The Texas state florists feel grateful for the fine exhibits of plants and cut flowers made by the out-of-state concerns, of whom I mention the Poehlmann Bros. Co., of Chicago; Gullett & Sons, of Lincoln, Ill.; E. G. Hill Co., of Richmond, Ind.; Joy Floral Co., of Nashville, Tenn.; H. S. Ely, of Neosho, Mo.; Elmer D. Smith & Co., of Adrian, Mich.; J. F. Wilcox & Sons, of Council Bluffs, Ia.; Stuppy Floral Co., of St. Joseph, Mo.; Furrow & Co., of Guthrie, Okla.; Park Floral Co., of Denver; Denver Wholesale Florists' Co., of Denver; Mrs. R. E. Darbee, of San Francisco. H. O. Hannah.

A SOUND NEW YORK OPINION.

We are sending $3 to pay our subscription to The Review for three years in advance. This three years' subscription is the only "more than your money's worth" bargain we have bought this year. The day for good bargains for the florist is over, but unless the retailer jumps his price up at least twenty-five per cent the customers will be getting their flowers at bigger bargains than they ever have, at the expense of the poor florist who says, "I cannot charge them more; they won't stand for it," instead of going ahead and putting his prices up so he knows he will make at least a fair profit and living. The public does not remember the prices it paid last season for flowers; the people do not keep posted on them as closely as they do on sugar, flour and other supplies, so if carnations sold at 75 cents and $1 last year and are $1 and $1.25 now, roses $1 to $3 last year and now $1.50 to $5, they do not say anything; at least we have noticed no complaints on higher prices and others won't if they ask the increased price. So here's to higher prices, and say nothing about it unless questioned. Dobbs & Son.

POINSETTIAS FOR CHRISTMAS.

I have some poinsettias benched in a house with Ophelia roses. They are from six to eight feet tall and the flowers at this date, November 14, are already turning red and are about half open. Can these be held until Christmas and what temperature should be maintained? In the same house I have poinsettias in pans. Some of them are just beginning to show buds. We keep the temperature about 58 to 60 degrees at night and 64 to 68 degrees in the daytime. Should these plants be moved into a warmer house, where they will get bottom heat? We cannot depend on the sun, as this is the fourth week and we have had only four bright days during that time and there now is four inches of snow on the ground. Will poinsettias keep if cut three or four days before Christmas? What is the best way to keep them after they are cut and how long should the stems be? What temperature is best for them after cutting? H. C. G.—Mich.

If your poinsettias are planted out, you cannot well lower the temperature without injury to your roses. Even if they are showing red bracts now and are half expanded, they will not be much too early for Christmas. Their development will be slower from now on, with colder weather. You can cut the stalks two or three days before Christmas, if you wish. As you cut them, either sear the ends by dipping in water as near the boiling point as possible for a few seconds to stanch the bleeding, or use a hot iron or a shovelful of live cinders for the same purpose. I like to wrap each stalk in soft paper, leaving merely the head showing, and stand them in deep vases of cold water, not in an ice chest, but in a temperature of 45 to 48 degrees; an ordinary ice chest is too cold for poin-

NOTICE!

To Subscribers whose address labels carry an expiration number higher than 995 (Dec. 21, 1916).

EVERY florist knows through his own purchases what has happened in the paper market the last few months—prices have doubled all along the line.

And it takes more than four tons of paper each week to print The Review!

Many readers have been so kind as to write that The Review is worth considerably more to them than its subscription price. Well, the tremendous rise in the price of paper makes it no longer expedient to sell The Review at $1.00 a year.

The subscription price, therefore, will be advanced January 1, 1917, to $1.50 a year.

Until December 31, 1916, any member of the Trade may subscribe for one or more years at the old rate of $1.00 a year.

Readers whose present subscriptions do not expire until after January 1, 1917, may renew for as many years as they like at $1.00 per year, providing that such renewals are sent during 1916.

Send $1.00 and your subscription will be extended one year from the present date of expiration, whenever that may be.

Send $2.00 and the subscription will be extended two years from the present date of expiration.

Send $3.00 for three years, $5.00 for five years.

No renewals for a full year will be accepted at less than $1.50 unless they are mailed by December 31, 1916.

The Canadian subscription price will be $2.50 a year beginning January 1, 1917. Canadian renewals mailed on or before December 31, 1916, will be accepted at $2.00 a year.

settias and the bracts will wilt in them.

In regard to your later poinsettias in pans, I think they will come along in good season. They are better without bottom heat, but may have a top heat of 62 to 65 degrees at night, to advance them. Drop this gradually as the bracts become well developed. Careful watering is necessary from now on, to hold good foliage on the plants. C. W.

Please name three or four of the best varieties of sweet peas for fall planting outdoors in southeastern Iowa.

S. K.—Ia.

White, Nora Unwin; rosy pink, Hercules; orange pink, improved Helen Lewis; orange scarlet, Thomas Stevenson; lavender, Florence Nightingale; cream pink, Mrs. Hugh Dickson. Usually white, pink and lavender are the best sellers. C. W.

SOWING SWEET PEAS OUTSIDE.

When must sweet peas be sown outdoors in fall and how should they be handled during the winter?

A. R. G.—O.

Fall sowings outdoors of sweet peas should be done a week or two before the ground freezes. The rows should have a winter mulch of coal ashes, over which coarse litter or leaves can be placed. C. W.

POISONING OF THE HANDS.

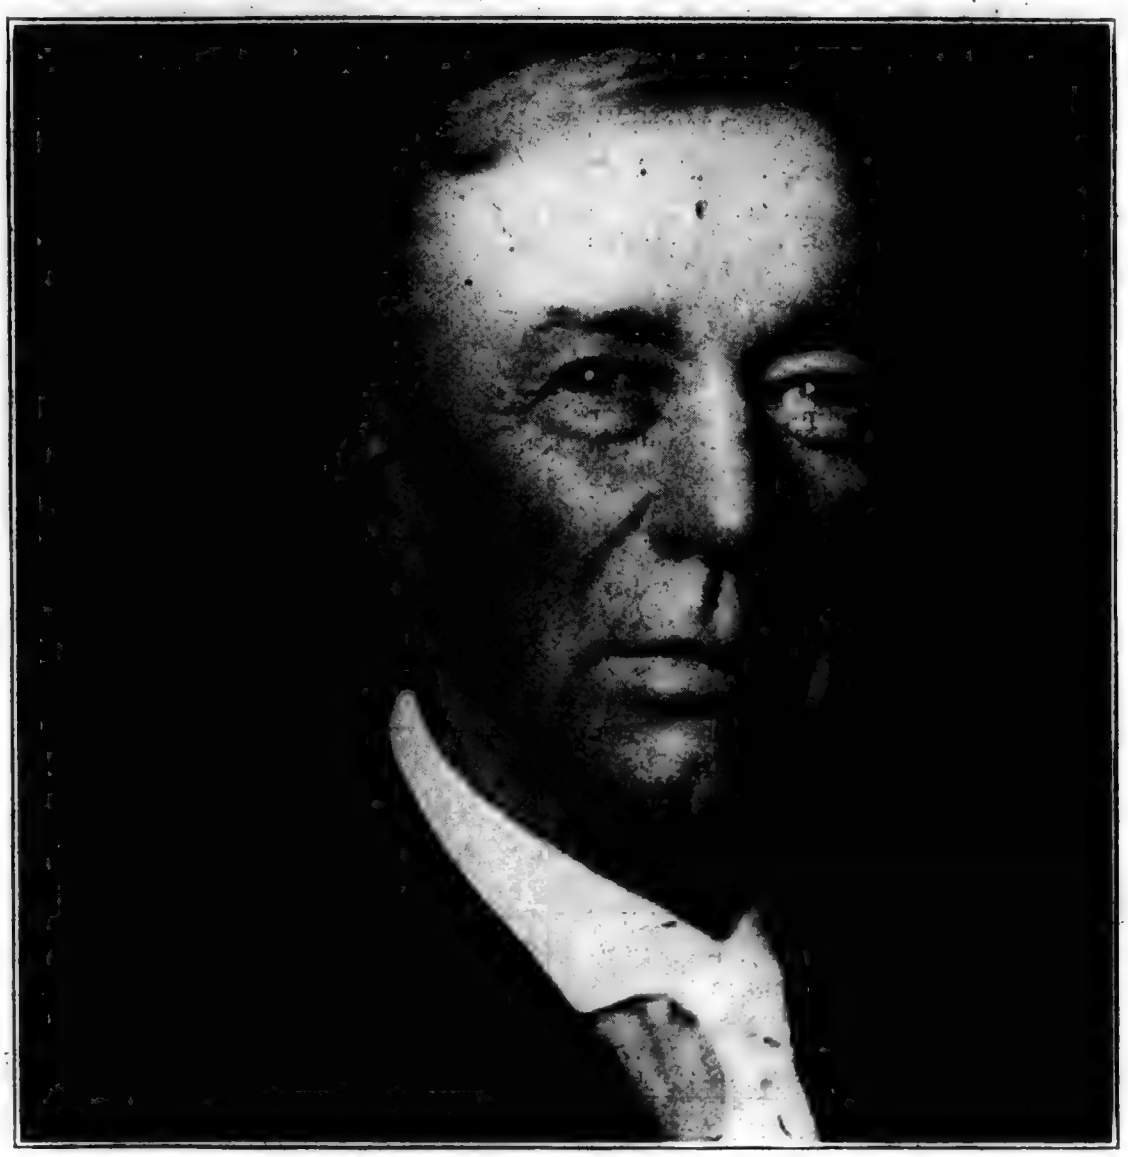
Not Rose Thorns, but Bad Water.

A recent issue of the English publication, the Horticultural Advertiser, contained a communication from a prominent firm of growers with reference to the irritation and poisoning of the hands from continual contact with certain flowers, or from contact with fertilizers and insecticides. The substance of the firm's remarks is as follows:

"Up to some six or eight years ago, we were continually having men and boys with bad hands, in our packing shed. The trouble in these cases was always most painful and sometimes actually dangerous. The direct cause of the injury was, undoubtedly, punctures from rose thorns, but in our opinion this was not the only cause. We believe the greater part of the mischief was due to the fact that the water in which the flowers were stood up, while waiting to be packed, got into the hands through the punctures made by the rose thorns.

"The water at that time was only changed at intervals of, say, two or three days, and this water, and the inside of the tins, naturally, on some occasions, must have been more or less foul. As soon as we arrived at this conclusion, we started changing the water every day, and we boiled the tins at frequent intervals in strong soda and water, and scoured them out with sand. Besides this, we kept a number of vessels about the packing shed, in which was a disinfecting solution in which the people could rinse their hands as often as they had occasion to. We also kept some of the same disinfectant, not diluted, which they could dab on any puncture as soon as they felt one made. Since we have taken these precautions, we have had practically no bad hands from this particular cause.

"There is another way of dealing with water and tins or other receptacles in which flowers are kept, viz., to add always to the water, when first put in, enough of some strong disinfectant to keep the water, and the inside of the tins, constantly sterilized. This, if always kept up, would no doubt be the better plan, but we are afraid that it is one which, in busy times, would often be neglected.



In Handling Bulbous Stock.

"The foregoing is all about one aspect of this poisoning, but there are other forms of it. Some years ago, when we grew daffodils for cut blooms, a good many of our people found they could not keep on picking these blooms without a sort of breaking-out on their hands. We consulted the R. H. S. on this, and were advised to see that the people washed their hands frequently and thoroughly in warm soap and water, and then, before going on with the picking, to see that they rubbed them over with some good oil or grease. We provided conveniences for this, saw that it was done, and afterward had but little trouble in this crop.

"Then we found that many of our people, who had to handle tulip bulbs, had painful gatherings under, and around the quick of, their finger nails. We are able to keep clear of this evil now, to a large extent, by constantly rubbing and working into the parts affected, or likely to be affected, an ointment which we procure for the purpose.

"Another form of bad hands which we think it only common sense to guard against, is that caused through the use of certain artificial manures and insecticides. Considering what some of these things are made of, there seems only one way of avoiding injury through them, and that is, not to allow any person to touch them who has the skin of his hands cut or broken."

WHO'S WHO IN THE TRADE—AND WHY

WALTER W. COLES.

PIONEER is the designation of Walter W. Coles in the membership list of the S. A. F., and he also was a charter member of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, for he started in business in that city in 1882 and did not remove to his present home at Kokomo, Ind., until 1891. Coles was born in England in 1857. He has become widely known in America because of his membership in practically all the trade societies and active participation in their affairs. He was the head of his state organization for four years. He is a Mason of high degree. As a grower his principal fame rests on his success with Kaiserin, a rose he grew with splendid results without replanting for many years at a time others replaced their stock annually. The portrait is his latest, made August 11, 1916.

THE GOOSE FLOWER.

Some species of plants, like many human beings, have a strong propensity toward the freakish, the bizarre or the sensational. We all know people of that sort. In dress, in speech or in general conduct they display a constant inclination toward the grotesque. Some of them possess a brilliant oddity of intellect that verges either on genius or insanity; they are merely acting naturally. In other cases the outré performances are part of a persistent, clever scheme of self-advertising. It would be easy, but dangerous, to cite a few well-known examples of these spectacular self-boomers. And this weary old world, satiated with the commonplace, welcomes or at least tolerates most of these queer specimens of humanity.

Among plants there are few that are more consistently freakish in their behavior than the aristolochias. Consequently many of them are cultivated chiefly on account of the extraordinary forms of their flowers and in spite of their defects, such as the disagreeable odor of some of them—an odor which would not be called fragrance even by the flowers' stanchest friends.

As is well known, several species of aristolochia are named after oddly shaped objects, animate or inanimate, which they resemble. Probably the most familiar instance of this is Aristolochia macrophylla or A. Sipho, the Dutchman's pipe. This plant, however, really owes its popularity to its genuine, unquestioned merits as a vine, rather than to its flowers, which, though curiously formed, are not especially conspicuous. Other examples of the fantastic among these plants are: Aristolochia cymbifera, boat-shaped; A. ornithocephala, bird's head, and A. tricaudata, three-tailed. One variety has even been named A. ridicula; among its appendages are two long lobes which are said to "remind one of a donkey's ears."

Perhaps the most striking of all the aristolochias, however, is A. grandiflora Sturtevantii, the goose flower, a good specimen of which is shown in the illustration, reposing on a lady's arm and looking, indeed, remarkably like a pet bird with a sleepy disposition and an absurdly long, slender tail. The tail reminds one of Euclid's definition of a line, "length without breadth." The goose flower has other common names, such as swan flower, duck flower and pelican flower.

The vine which bore this particular goose flower was grown in one of the greenhouses of John F. Rupp, of Shiremanstown, Pa. Mr. Rupp states that the vine had a fine crop of "geese" in October and aroused a good deal of interest, attracting many visitors to the greenhouses and securing favorable notices in the Harrisburg and Mechanicsburg newspapers. The flower when he photographed it, he says, was eleven inches wide and seventeen inches long, without the tail, which had a length of eighteen inches. The lady in the picture is a teacher in the school of which Mr. Rupp has for many years been one of the trustees, and her pupils were among the most interested investigators of the goose flowers and the greenhouses.

The goose flower should be grown under glass, and one writer naively suggests that it is "most suitable for large structures," owing to its pronounced odor. It is easily propagated by means of cuttings taken from well matured wood in early spring. It should be planted in a bed of good soil, in a warm house where it can be conveniently trained up pillars, rafters or a trellis. It is not well adapted for pot culture.

SEEDLING PERENNIALS.

I sowed seed of sweet williams, foxgloves, hollyhocks and delphiniums about August 19. The hollyhocks and delphiniums I have potted into 2½-inch pots. The sweet williams and foxgloves were pricked out into flats. They are all growing nicely. Will they flower next summer? What protection shall I give them for winter?

D. H.—O.

You sowed the perennials too late to get a satisfactory crop of flowers next season. The sweet williams and delphiniums will flower, but the foxgloves and hollyhocks will hardly be of sufficient size and strength to do so. To carry these over winter successfully, store them in a well built coldframe and when freezing weather arrives cover them with dry leaves, placing sashes over these and board shutters over the sashes, to prevent snow from breaking the glass. Give some ventilation during mild weather, but be sure to keep the leaves in a perfectly dry condition; then each plant should winter perfectly.

Another season, if you want plants of sufficient size and strength to flower satisfactorily, sow foxgloves and sweet williams early in June and hollyhocks and delphiniums about July 1.

OBITUARY

S. J. Reuter.

The death of S. J. Reuter, one of the pioneer florists of New England, took place at his home at Westerly, R. I., November 23, interment being November 26 in the presence of a large number of members of the trade from Boston, New York, Philadelphia and other points.

S. J. Reuter was 65 years of age October 7, 1916, the family having removed to Westerly from Norwich, Conn., in 1880, in which year he started a retail florists' business which grew to large proportions. In the course of time a greenhouse establishment was started on the main road from Westerly to the fashionable Watch Hill resort, the glass being added to from year to year until it became the largest range in the vicinity, known far and wide. The place always has been kept spick-and-span, an advertisement for florists of inestimable value. A general line of plants and cut flowers is grown, for the retail stores opened at Norwich and New London, Conn., in addition to the one at Westerly, and for the wholesale markets of several large cities within easy reach.

Mr. Reuter's son, Louis J. Reuter, grew up in the business, which was incorporated in 1907, the founder gradually relinquishing the active management to the son, upon whose shoulders the principal responsibility has rested in recent years.

Joseph Henry Cushing.

Joseph Henry Cushing, one of the most successful greenhousemen in Rhode Island, died November 25 at his home at Quidnick, R. I., following a three weeks' illness. He was in his sixty-sixth year.

Although engaged at different periods of his active business life in several lines of industry, the decedent's greatest success was achieved in connection with the Quidnick Greenhouses. The flowers grown therein were shipped to Boston and New York, as well as to the smaller cities of the east.

Mr. Cushing was born in Fiskeville, R. I., in 1851, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey Cushing. He received his elementary education at a private school at River Point, R. I., and later was graduated from the East Greenwich, R. I., Academy and a business college of Providence. Upon completing his course at the latter institution he established a grocery business at Anthony, R. I., but this was not successful. Later he opened a grocery at Quidnick, which grew rapidly. After fifteen years he disposed of the business to his brother-in-law and a partner.

Previous to disposing of his grocery business Mr. Cushing developed a fondness for plants and flowers, and after the sale he invested his savings in greenhouses. These were successful from the start and soon covered several acres, roses being one of the specialties. The range he continued until about a year ago, when he sold his business to other parties, who have continued the business under the style of Quidnick Greenhouses, Inc.

Mr. Cushing married four times. He was essentially a home man, but was affiliated with the Rhode Island Horticultural Society and the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island. He is survived by his wife, one daughter by a former marriage and three sisters.

News of the sudden death of William L. Kroeschell brought sorrow to his many friends in Chicago, as it will to many hundreds of florists throughout the United States who did not have the pleasure of his personal acquaintance, but who faced his name every time they entered their fire pits.

Mr. Kroeschell was found dead sitting in an alcove just off the library of the Illinois Athletic Club in Chicago on the afternoon of November 23. He was 61 years of age, having been born in Nashville, Tenn., May 22, 1855. While he was still a youth the family removed to Chicago and he was educated in the Chicago public schools. Although the family long had been identified with boiler-making, Mr. Kroeschell's first business experience was on the board of trade. In 1881 he became a member of the grain commission firm of Gerstenberg & Kroeschell, which did a successful business until its dissolution in 1900, when, on the death of an older brother, Mr. Kroeschell entered Kroeschell Bros. Co., becoming its secretary and treasurer. The last sixteen years of his life were devoted to its business, the greenhouse boiler department being in his special charge up to the time its management largely was delegated to Fred Lautenschlager. But Mr. Kroeschell always took a special interest in the greenhouse trade and the business his company does with florists. He also was secretary of Kroeschell Bros. Ice Machine Co. and a director in both corporations.

Mr. Kroeschell not only was a man of thorough business integrity, but possessed unusual qualities in the way of remembering faces and making friends, so that he numbered among his personal friends all of the large number of florists with whom he came in contact. He was a life member of the Society of American Florists, having joined in 1907; a member of the Chicago Florists' Club, and many other trade organizations. He was one of the executive committee that managed the recent Chicago convention of the Vegetable Growers' Association of America, and his last public appearance in the trade was as toastmaster at the banquet given that organization at Hotel La Salle on the evening of September 29.

In 1882 Mr. Kroeschell married Miss Ida Spangenberg, who survives with two daughters. One brother, Charles, president of Kroeschell Bros. Co., also survives.

In accordance with his wish, frequently expressed, funeral services were omitted. The remains were cremated and the ashes interred at the family plot in Graceland cemetery.

H. B. Burdett.

News has been received of the death of one of the well known florists of Seattle, Wash., H. B. Burdett, who joined the Canadian contingent of the Allies early last spring and proceeded to the front in France, after receiving the usual training at Vernon, B. C. It might be mentioned in this connection that Gordon Beavan, who formerly worked at the Burdett Co. place and went to the front about two years ago, recently met the same fate. Mr. Burdett had been in business for himself about sixteen years in Seattle, starting at an age when most boys are entering their apprenticeship, and through many ups and downs he always conducted his business in a straightforward and gentlemanly way. He has left many friends in Seattle who will deeply mourn his loss, remembering his clean mind and upright character as an example to be followed. T. W.

Milo S. Crozer.

Milo S. Crozer died in a hospital at Cedar Rapids, Ia., November 23.

Milo Crozer was one of the best known men in Cedar Rapids, having been prominent in civic and fraternal circles for a number of years. Born in Clinton, Ia., October 22, 1868, he removed with his parents to Cedar Rapids twenty years ago, where his father, J. G. Crozer, founded the flower store which has since become almost an institution in that part of the country. Following a crossing accident in which his father suffered the loss of a foot several years ago, the son retired from the insurance business and took active charge of the store.

He was married in Clinton to Miss Myra Walls, and to them were born three children, Carl, Lynn and Dorothy. Both boys were associated with their father in business. Other survivors are his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Crozer, and three sisters.

Fraternally Mr. Crozer had a wide acquaintanceship, holding membership in Cedar Rapids lodge No. 251, B. P. O. E., Crescent lodge No. 25, A. F. & A. M., Linn tent No. 38, K. O. T. M., and the Woodmen of the World.

During the summer Mr. Crozer gave up his active connection with his flower store to accept a position with the American Express Co., becoming its traveling agent, leaving the business to the sons, grandsons of J. G. Crozer, the founder.

PAPER WHITES FOR CHRISTMAS.

Please tell me when Paper Whites should be brought in for Christmas. They are outdoors, covered with soil and fairly well rooted. There is a growth of about three inches above the flats. H. E. M.—Pa.

Thirty-third annual convention, New York, N. Y., August 21 to 24, 1917.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

THIS year we get up from the Thanksgiving dinner table and find ourselves almost in the midst of the Christmas rush.

FOR the same reason that it is impossible for a Pierce-Arrow to get up full speed like a flivver, The Review finds it necessary to advance the hour of closing its advertising forms. In the days when there were few ads to set and not many copies to print, it was not necessary to get an early start, but now Tuesday closing is essential if the paper is to catch the mail trains Thursday.

No great successes are made in this trade by trying to see how cheaply stock can be sold, and trimming the quality to fit the price. A business built on price has no permanent customers. The real successes are built on quality, on supplying the best stock in the best way, at prices that cover the cost and give a fair profit. A business built on quality gains customers it can claim as its own.

COLLECTIONS in the trade are just fair. Prices of everything are so high that everybody needs the money to meet his own bills and everybody is pushing collections harder than usual. Consequently the florist who is the exception to the rule is the man who finds collections slow; the ones who are pushing are getting all the money and there is none left for the man who neglects that part of the business. If you don't keep at it you don't get yours.

IF your boiler needs new tubes they will cost 40 cents per foot as against a normal price of about 18 cents for 4-inch tubes at Chicago.

THERE seems to be no limit to the supply of holly, especially as the abundance of Christmas red berries has made the majority of buyers indifferent as to the number of berries on the holly.

THERE are reports that indicate that there have been large losses as the result of the unseasonable cold snap that swept over the country November 10 to 15. The cold wave was widespread and it destroyed large quantities of unprotected stock in districts that seldom have freezing weather at this date. Also, it caught a lot of plants on the rail, including some important imports of Belgian stock.

FROM BOTH COASTS.

That Chicago is the ideal city for publishing a trade paper is shown by the day's mail. Here is a letter from New England:

I am enclosing $2 to pay for The Review two years in advance. In this connection I wish to state that it is a great asset in my business and I would not care to be without it.—F. P. Falk, Mt. Hope, Boston, Mass., November 22, 1916.

And here is one from the extreme southwest:

I enclose $2 to pay for The Review for the next two years. We consider it a most important adjunct to the business and look forward to its weekly arrival with keen interest, for it keeps us informed on the many phases of the florists' and nursery business.—H. C. Pease, San Bernardino, Cal., November 21, 1916.

With the following as evidence from an advertiser:

It may have caused you some surprise that I have not done more advertising with you, but the fact is, you people did yourselves out of a job the last time you ran my ad in The Review. It brought me new customers who since have taken practically all I can produce. I am satisfied no better investment could be found for money; a few dollars did the trick and a whole lifetime's business is the result.—A. W. Warren, Corry, Pa., November 20, 1916.

When you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising you can be pretty sure he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

A BRITISH VIEW.

Commenting on the necessity faced by the greenhouse trade in the United States, that of higher selling prices to make up for the increased cost of doing business, a British trade paper says:

"As with us, the genuine business man, who calculates what his stuff costs him to produce, and tries to sell it at a price which will yield him a fair profit, is faced with the competition of men who, through ignorance or indolence, omit 'costing' altogether from their work, and others who are too timid to take a step in advance because they are afraid the other man will not follow.

"In our opinion, it is the grower and producer who ought to take the first step when a move is necessary; then the middleman will be compelled to follow suit. This is the natural sequence, just as in the corn trade, when the farmer or dealer gets a rise in wheat, the miller raises flour, and the baker in turn promptly passes on the rise to his customers.

"To our mind there is too much dread of the price cutter in our business. In the motor trade, the Daimler and Rolls-Royce people do not adjust their prices to meet Mr. Ford and in many other trades we find the best class men manage to run on their own lines, and ask and get prices based on the value of the goods they turn out, not on what the cheap-jacks in their trade manage to quote.

"Our trade will never be a really prosperous one until the majority give this question of prices their serious attention and settle it upon a sound commercial basis. But the thing that would help on the millennium more than anything would be for everyone to set his wits to work to grow stuff better than ever done before, and give customers the best service possible, instead of trying to attract trade by selling rubbish at cut-throat prices."

INSECTICIDE LAWS.

A pamphlet that will be of interest to many readers of The Review was issued September 16 by the Insecticide and Fungicide Board of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. It contains copies of the insecticide and fungicide laws of all the states that have passed special legislation on the subject. These states are:

California,
Colorado,
Idaho,
Kentucky,
Louisiana,
Maine,
Maryland,
Michigan,
Minnesota,
Montana,
New Hampshire,
New Jersey,
New York,
North Dakota,
Ohio,
Oregon, Pennsylvania,
Washington,
Wisconsin.

A perusal of the pamphlet will show members of the trade who deal in insecticides and fungicides the special requirements they must observe. There are in addition laws in other states which are specifically food and drugs laws, but which apparently, but not in so many words, include insecticides and fungicides because of their poisonous character.

Copies of the document may be had without cost by those interested who address the Insecticide and Fungicide Board at Washington, D. C.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

There seems to be every reason why all those identified with the growing and wholesaling of cut flowers in the Chicago market should have a pleasant Thanksgiving; business never was better, the demand exceeding last year's high record by a good margin.

In a general way two factors are given credit for the increased demand and excellent but not unreasonably high prices. In the first place, the country is more prosperous than it ever was before, but of equal importance in bringing orders into the Chicago market is the fact that Thanksgiving is nearly a week later than ever before, while the late mums were a little earlier than usual, so that florists who sometimes rely on their home mums for this holiday were obliged to send to Chicago for stock this year. In a general way the stock in greatest abundance this week is pompon mums and carnations, with violets on the short side, with valley and cattleyas, and a fairly plentiful but by no means overabundant supply of roses and large mums. Of course the bulk of the sales are on the plentiful items, with the most numerous inquiries for the less abundant stock.

The end of last week found the market in a decidedly improved condition. The supply of stock was considerably

WE INVITE SPECIAL ATTENTION TO OUR MRS. RUSSELLS

RUSSELL is an exceptional Rose—your customers are different from the general run if they do not buy it on sight—and, having bought it once, they will call for it again and again, because of its splendid keeping quality.

Ours are exceptional Russells—the finest in America last season, for they won first prize at both the National and International Shows. This season they are better than before and we have a large supply of each grade up to $25.00 per 100.

OTHER ROSES

There are no finer Killarney, White Killarney, Ward, Sunburst, Killarney Brilliant, Ophelia or Milady and our cuts are increasing every day.

CARNATIONS

A very large supply and excellent quality, the best varieties in each color. You will wish you had ordered more.

BUNCH MUMS

One of our growers has a large lot of Anemone-flowered mums in a variety of colors; the cut will last till Christmas. Very popular.

EASTER LILIES

Now the big white Mums are gone you will need Lilies. You can get them here.

VIOLETS

Our large supply of Violets includes the cream of the crops of double and single.

BEAUTIES FOR CHRISTMAS

We are assured a large supply of extra fine, home-grown. Beauties for Christmas and will book your order now. Write us about your needs.

FANCY VALLEY

We never are without fancy Valley. You can count on our ability to fill your orders.

cut down, but still there was a sufficient quantity to go around. Supply and demand were more evenly balanced than heretofore and firmer prices, with a tendency towards higher figures, obtained. Probably the most marked improvement took place in the condition of carnations, a demand arising which is almost as unexplainable as the long period out of favor from which carnations suffered after the first slight popularity at the beginning of the season.

Roses in all varieties and lengths are clearing well and at fairly good prices. American Beauties continue scarce, but what stock reaches the market is clearing easily. Russell is both the best and most popular rose. Hoosier Beauty is in light supply. There is an appreciably better call for red, Richmond and Milady.

Chrysanthemums are selling well at good prices. The football game November 25, between Chicago and Minnesota, was probably in part responsible for the ease with which it was possible to move them the latter part of the week. Bonnaffon and Chadwick were and are the best sellers. Pompons are moving well at improved prices.

The supply of violets is short, while a strong demand is manifest, bringing the price up. Valley continues short and is clearing well. Lilies are beginning to move as white mums go down; there is an ample supply. The supply of Paper Whites has increased materially and stock is clearing well. Stevia reaches the market in such ample supply it is moving rather slowly.

All kinds of greens are scarce, and no difficulty is found in moving the supply which reaches the market. It is probable that the long dry spell in the south was injurious to the plumosus and Sprengeri grown there.

Various Notes.

Those who are wholesaling Paper Whites at $2 per hundred have overlooked the fact that at this year's price for the bulbs the grower won't get a new dollar for his old one at that rate.

According to J. H. McNeilly, business is better than last year in spite of the greatly increased competition along East Sixty-third street, but a still more interesting observation was his remark that "we are getting better prices than last year, but we do not have to pay as much at wholesale." Mr. McNeilly says he rarely places an advance order, taking his chances on the turn of the market.

Florists who make use of the new 6-story garage of the City Auto Parking Co., on Michigan avenue, near the market, find Archie Jackson, former florist and son of A. V. Jackson, at the head of the institution. It is said that H. Baushe is another of those interested in it.

According to A. F. Keenan, who conducts two stores a block apart on Sixty-third street, Christmas is a gamble and Easter a fair certainty. He asserts that the extent and character of the Christmas demand are impossible to forecast because all lines of trade make an appeal, but Easter can be figured on with assurance that the buyers' thoughts will be concentrated on only two lines, clothes and flowers.

Commenting on the increased interest taken in the anemone-flowered chrysanthemums in the east, John Michelsen, of the E. C. Amling Co., points out that Alois Frey, at Crown Point, has been specializing on these for several years and that the local retailers have not failed at any time to keep each day's receipts cleaned up.

The George Wittbold Co. is occupying its new store this week, but it will be some little time before everything about the place is completed. The store will be one of the handsomest, as well as without a superior in the matter of equipment, in this city and already there are indications that it will bring a good increase to the already large retail business.

W. J. Keimel says his records show that Sunburst has for the last two years paid better than any other rose grown by the Wendland & Keimel Co. It is his opinion it will do as well this season, although the competition has been considerably increased by other growers increasing their plantings.

Odessa is said to be the best yellow mum at Bassett & Washburn's, a companion to Turner, the largest white, but C. L. Washburn calls the big flowers "Friday and Saturday mums." He says they bring profitable prices only on those days, being in request for the football games, a use which limits the sale to one flower to a person.

There is nothing lacking in the varied stock which awaits the holiday purchaser at Schillers' west side store. Baskets and vases that range in size to hold anything from the longest Beauties to a single violet, and many other novelties are on display, and a big business in these articles is expected.

According to Miss O. A. Tonner, Beu and Klondike pompons are still the old standbys, the calls for them exceeding those for any other varieties.

that a maximum of daylight is provided. This is a great help, according to Philip Schupp, manager of J. A. Budlong, insofar as daylight is an essential factor in picking out stock.

The year 1916 has been much the largest in the history of the A. L. Randall Co., the supply business having grown faster even than in its younger days. The company now occupies the second, third and most of the fourth floor in the Lemoyne building, and nearly all the basement, besides a large storage floor on Randolph street, a total of 90,000 square feet, more than two acres.

Christ Streich, for eighteen years boss steamfitter and head of the heating department of the John C. Moninger Co., has accepted a similar position with the American Greenhouse Mfg. Co.

Lubliner & Trinz, former florists, opened another of their string of moving picture houses November 23. It is called the West End theater and is one of the finest in town. When a house now building on Garfield boulevard at the corner of Michigan avenue is open, they will be running eight theaters, including several of the largest picture palaces in the city.

"A friend in need is a friend indeed," at least so the Cook county hospital authorities felt last week when Peter Reinberg let them have two carloads of coal to help them over a tight place.

A number of florists not members of the congregation attended the dedicatory services of the new Trinity Evangelical Lutheran church in Oak Park November 26. E. C. Amling is one of the trustees and his son-in-law is pastor.

Miss Louise Washburn is paying a two weeks' visit to her brother at his Hinsdale home. She is on her way to California.

The trade has special interest in the Chicago Billy Sunday revival that is planned to break all records because Wm. A. Peterson is treasurer of the committee. It is proposed to erect a mammoth tabernacle at the old Cubs' ball park.

Ernst Wienhoeber has had his hands full this week, for in addition to the increased business Thanksgiving brought, he had three coming out parties to take care of.

Taking up golf on the advice of his physician, Albert F. Amling is said to be becoming one of the game's most ardent devotees.

M. Moore, of Milwaukee, was in Chicago November 27.

F. E. Bonham, of Macomb, Ill., was in Chicago November 27, purchasing supplies for a new store he is to open.

The Market.

The condition of the wholesale market last week was excellent all through, with better prices. From advance orders placed for Thanksgiving the retailers expect a heavy business. These orders were mostly for chrysanthemums, but the supply is not so heavy as it has been and other stock is coming into demand. The market last week afforded some fine specimen blooms of Bonnaffon, Eaton, Seidewitz, Lynnwood Hall, Chadwick and Golden Wedding, the best of which brought as high as $4 per dozen.

Roses have been selling better, at a few cents higher for fancy stock. Beauties are up to $5 per dozen. Fancy Russells fetch $3 per dozen. Ophelia and Sunburst are in good demand, as are choice Killarney. This week will see an advance in price on all grades.

Carnations are coming along nicely and better quality of stock is shown daily in Enchantress, Beacon, Ward, Philadelphia and White Enchantress.

Orchids are up to $7.50 and $9 per dozen; they are scarce, while demand is large. Violets are showing good color and better stems; they bring 50 cents per hundred and sell up clean. While valley sells for $6 per hundred, the demand has been quite large and the price is likely to go up a cent next month.

Sweet peas are starting to come in and a good supply is looked for during December. Easter lilies are plentiful, with rather light demand at present.

Asparagus, smilax, galax, leucothoe and flat ferns have daily good demand.

The Market.

This has been a rather peculiar season for the florists. The early chrysanthemums were late and the late ones were early; the first carnation crop was meager and the second came with the chrysanthemum glut. Rose growers have been pinching back their crops for a large Christmas output; therefore at the present time a gap is felt in the market.

The supply for Thanksgiving is limited, but of good quality. Chrysanthemums, in good condition, and roses, mostly medium and long, are bringing good prices. Carnations are not overabundant and bring from $2 to $3 per hundred. Lilies are scarce and meet with little demand, but orchids, valley and sweet peas are more popular. The supply of plumosus, Sprengeri and adiantum is normal, but fern leaves continue of poor quality. Potted plants, including Primula obconica and P. malacoides, cyclamens, Lorraine, Melior and Chatelaine begonias, celestial peppers, Jerusalem cherries and poinsettias, are making the windows attractive and creating the spirit of Christmas.

The Climax Line is a Good Line to Tie To

THE FACT that we have in the past seven years built up the largest Cut Flower Box business in the Country is our best advertisement. We strive to please and the results speak for themselves.

"WHEN BETTER BOXES ARE MADE WE WILL MAKE THEM"
is still our slogan.

We manufacture and carry in stock for prompt shipment: Oxford Gray, Mist Green, Mist Tan, White Carnation and our popular Favorite grade—the latter a most satisfactory telescope shipping box. Holiday boxes in season. We make special sizes promptly and at reasonable charge, and specialize in attractive and up-to-date printing and embossing.

There are twenty-five miles of freight congestion on the belt road around Indianapolis and it is thought that numerous cases of azaleas have been caught in this, as they are arriving in poor condition, some wet and frozen and others dried out. Good azaleas for Christmas will therefore be scarce.

E. H. Rieman has a fine single chrysanthemum, of a pleasing shade of pink, which bids fair to become a popular variety, owing to its lateness.

Largely on account of the fire at the establishment of the Capital Paper Co., which caused a loss estimated at $150,000, in one day's time the price of paper jumped 35 cents on the ream and twine was raised 3 and 4 cents on the ball.

Coal has been so scarce that the florists who have contracted for their supply have received just a few tons at a time. The supply of Pocahontas has been exhausted.

Local seedsmen and decorators are expecting a big evergreen trade for Christmas, as a number of orders arrived in September, considerably in advance of other years.

Edwin M. Morner, formerly of the E. G. Hill Co. here, held the formal opening of his new store at Shelbyville, Ind., November 21. Several Indianapolis florists attended and those not fortunate enough to attend sent their best wishes. Mr. Morner is artistic and original in his tastes and the prospects for a successful business are good.

The December meeting of the State Florists' Association will be postponed. W. J. Vesey, vice-president of the American Carnation Society, has called a meeting of the committees of this society at the Claypool hotel, Wednesday, December 6, at 8 p. m. E. E. T.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The eve of the opening of the social season at Thanksgiving finds the cut flower market in a state of brisk activity. Sales are increasing in numbers and in size. Prices are firm; now and then they advance. Conditions indicate a good Thanksgiving business. A great many chrysanthemums are being marketed. A dozen or two dozen here and there go at $2.50, $3 and even $4 per dozen; a vast quantity of them at $2 per dozen to a dime apiece, with poor stock much lower and hardest of all to sell. The street men will often pay top prices for chrysanthemums, particularly Bonnaffon—$10 to $15 per hundred, and take them as they come. Yellow is most seen. Partly for that reason the retailers are more eager for pink and white. Greenhouse-grown pompons are out of favor; as a rule their quality is poor.

Violets were good stock for the Yale-Harvard football game. Several street men went from here to New Haven, taking the violets with them. They paid the top market price, $10 per thousand, and bought freely. Valley has advanced to $8, a price unknown to the present age. History tells us it was $12.50 per hundred once, but that is a good while ago. There are more orchids than a week ago, but not enough more to make much difference in price, as there is a good demand.

Carnations have shared in the improved market. The light pinks are still weaker than the bright colors. Beauties have advanced; the trading in Beauties is brisk. The crops of other roses are rather meager, not unusual four weeks from Christmas. The fancy varieties are preferred to the standard sorts. Easter lilies sell slowly under keen competition with the fine white chrysanthemums. Double pink bouvardia has arrived and it is in high favor, being much more durable than the single. Boxwood has come.

The Show in the Park.

The authorities of Fairmount park, who have in charge the flower shows in Horticultural hall, evidently feel that a really good thing is hard to beat. This idea is expressed in the show now staged in the east wing of Horticultural hall. In conception and execution it is an exact repetition of the show staged there last year and for several years previously. There are but slight variations in detail. The chrysanthemum plants grown in pots with their flowers in natural clusters are arranged on staging across each end of the wing, the white and pink varieties at one end, the yellows at the other. Here and there a rogue has crept in, as it were, to heighten the effect. There is one notable improvement. It is in the arrangement that, starting from the border of the path at the feet of the onlooker, forms a broad sheet of unbroken color to a considerable height in the rear. This work has been done with infinite pains. The result is a flower picture of quiet sadness at one end, of glorious life at the other. Between the two pictures are palm-bordered walks brightened by specimen chrysanthemum plants in bloom. The show is free. The attendance is heavy on Sundays.

A Question of Judgment.

There was one point of more than ordinary moment that came up for consideration in the secretary's room in Horticultural hall last week. The Pennsylvania Horticultural Society had generously offered the use of Horticultural hall free of cost. The hall contains about 16,000 square feet of floor space on two floors. Perhaps one-sixth of this space the P. H. S. wished reserved for its own spring bulb show. The First Regiment armory, on the other hand, would cost $1,000 rental for a four days' show, with additional charges of perhaps $200—$1,200 in all. The armory has a floor space of over 21,000 square feet, all on one floor. After careful deliberation the armory was chosen for the scene of the American Rose Society's first show on its own account, because it was believed Horticultural hall would prove too small. Besides its other advantages, the armory contains seating space for 600 persons.

William K. Harris considers the present chrysanthemum season as the best in seven years.

Raymond Brunswick says that advance orders of the M. Rice Co. are so heavy that they compel continued overtime to get them out.

The London Flower Shop figures in the movies with its motor delivery driven by a woman chauffeur.

George E. Campbell is successful with Rose Prima Donna.

Sydney H. Bayersdorfer says that his firm, H. Bayersdorfer & Co., is able to keep pace with its orders, although they are much heavier than at this time last year.

P. J. Vervaecke is bringing choice carnations to Berger Bros.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

The season of the year now has been reached when, so far as the flower business is concerned, it is the chrysanthemum or nothing. Of course, that is expressing the situation rather extravagantly, but it hits pretty nearly the truth. In another fortnight, however, roses, violets, carnations and orchids again will resume their sway. The demand for mums this year has been unusually large, although the call has been for blooms retailing for about $1 per dozen. The holiday greens give notice of the rapidly approaching holiday and preparations are being made to meet the call for potted stock. Prices hold well and there is a plentiful supply of everything.

Various Notes.

A new boiler of large capacity is being installed by John J. Kelley, of Valley Falls.

Samuel Resnick, with Joseph E. Koppelman & Co., is in a hospital suffering from a breakdown.

Alonzo Vose has completed extensive alterations at his greenhouses at Woonsocket.

Smith, the Florist, reports a good run of business last week. He had nearly fifty funeral pieces and designs in two days.

George Johnson & Son, of Elmwood, lost several hundred dollars by fire in a field of haystacks a few days ago.

S. J. Reuter & Son, Inc., has taken over the Foster greenhouses at Westerly.

Miss Florence Willard, of the Hope Greenhouses, Massachusetts avenue, is furnishing some of the finest begonias seen in this market in many seasons.

Albert Holscher is cutting some exceptionally good bouvardias, which find a ready sale.

"The Low Spots in Rhode Island Agriculture," was the subject of a stereopticon lecture by William G. Vinal before the members of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society last week.

Thomas Hope, formerly president of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society, recently was appointed clerk of the United States District court for Rhode Island.

The Hampden Meadow Greenhouses, James Annis, proprietor, are producing large numbers of pompons, including thirty varieties.

will testify. Boxwood is greatly in demand and it is hard to get enough pine to satisfy demands. The retail stores, especially the ones catering to the society business, were busy last week. Many debutante affairs called for creations that class florists as "sure thing" artists.

Club's Anniversary Banquet.

The Pittsburgh Florists' Club celebrated its twenty-fifth anniversary Monday night, November 20, with a banquet at the Fort Pitt hotel. The tables were set in the Dutch room. E. C. Reineman, the first president of the club, acted as toastmaster and read a paper entitled "The History of the Club," in which he spoke of J. W. Ludwig as being the father of the club. It was Mr. Ludwig who started the interest in a club after returning from the S. A. F. convention at Boston. The first meeting was held in the store of Ludwig & Richter and the organization perfected. Since that time the club has had a continued growth and has done its share to advance the production of better flowers.

Among the other speakers were P. S. Randolph, who called attention to the wonderful advance the cut flower business has made. He added, however, that the plantsmen had not kept up with the procession; they are not getting prices commensurate with the cost of production. Fred Burki expressed himself on the pleasure of meeting old friends and asked to be excused from making a speech.

George Oesterle, the first secretary of the club, was the next speaker. He was one of the most successful growers, but now is in the laundry business. J. W. Ludwig then told of his visit to Boston and how, on the train coming home, he went among the men and secured their promises of assistance. They then secured other names and after a few months had an enrollment of 125. Mr. Ludwig still is interested in the club and usually is on hand at the meetings. William Falconer said that, inasmuch as everything where he came from—people, trees and shrubbery—was dead, much could not be expected from him. Despite this, his interesting talk was appreciated.

T. P. Langhans spoke on the bad business habits of the florists—those who fail to consider and figure their overhead expenses properly. He also spoke of the loose methods of giving credit. Ernest Ludwig gave his experiences from flower boy to proprietor of one of the busiest stores in the city, with greenhouses at Ludwig station. Ben Elliott, proprietor of the John Bader Co., thinks the plant business is all right. The only trouble is that many plantsmen do not know the value of their own goods and make bad competitors.

Neil McCallum gave one of his original talks, replete with instructive points and suggestions, and was followed by George Burke, superintendent of Schenley and other city parks, who spoke lengthily on plants. Edward McCallum advocated holding a flower show in the city and assured the members of his willingness to work hard, long and late for its success.

W. A. Clarke thought that the street boys were good cut flower demonstrators and persuaded many to buy who formerly had thought it an extravagance. He also advised plantsmen to demonstrate their products to the public through free shows, these, he believes, being cheaper and better than newspapers or catalogues.

John W. Jones came next and discussed association helps and the spring flower show of the Garden Club. The speakers continued until about midnight, and even at that late hour the members seemed reluctant to leave.

Various Notes.

Randolph & McClements are the first to complain about the coal car shortage. They are compelled to haul their coal from downtown.

Frederick Riegelmeier last week purchased the property he now occupies as a store. Prosperity must be working overtime on the south side. Clarke.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

At last the New York wholesale cut flower market has awakened. The cold snap November 25 was the last stimulus needed to put life into the mummy of the last three months. It was a long sleep and many thought there was little hope for recovery.

Thanks to society and football, November 25 was a day to be remembered. What flowers New York could not use, New Haven sent for. The leading retailers of New York had advance orders for many boxes of violets, mums and roses. Practically everything worth while was taken and the new week began with the empty larder. Shipments of everything are lighter than expected. Splendid values are anticipated for Thanksgiving. Better prices than those of November 25 will prevail; there is no indication of a surplus of mums for the holiday and the large varieties certainly will command a figure that will give the growers cause for thanksgiving. The Chadwicks especially are in demand. In pots some fine plants are seen and the baby mums, pompons and singles have advanced in value.

All roses are advancing both in price and quality. The supply was short at the week's end and is likely to be until December. Beauties have sold up to 35 and 40 cents each for the highest grades. Hadley is running a close race with the old favorite, while Ophelia, Mock, Key, Russell, Shawyer, Sunburst, Radiance and Prima Donna grow daily in public favor. Even the small and short-stemmed roses, in quantities, were held at $2 per hundred. Unless shipments materially increase this week, higher averages are assured.

Lilies are up again, the best November 25 going above $6 per hundred; $8 was asked for selects on the morning of that day. Valley brings $6 for the long-stemmed stock.

Carnations were selling at from $2 to $4 per hundred at the week end, and good flowers will go higher for the holiday. Orchids are scarce and in three or four varieties, the prices ranging

Festoon Winding Machines Improved

Fourth year on the market. Two types. Makes all kinds of Festooning. Type No. 1 will wrap on any size wire used for its center. One turn with handle gives two wraps on Festooning. Center wire is measured while Festooning is wound, which eliminates measuring of Festooning. Type No. 2: Fine wire is used for the center, one turn with handle gives one wrap on Festooning. Does equally as good work as Type No. 1. We furnish machines ready to work, with enough wire to make 500 yards. Three days' trial allowed. Money refunded if machine is not what you want. Prices:

from 35 to 75 cents each, with a few choice cattleyas at $1. The best cypripediums sell at $2 per dozen.

Violets, thanks to Yale, were selling in New York November 25 at $1.50 per hundred. Good prices may be depended on until Thanksgiving. Sweet peas are fast improving in quality. A few southern-grown gladioli are here, and there are plenty of stevias, narcissi, callas, wallflowers, bouvardias and antirrhinums. The supply of autumn leaves shows no diminution and the demand remains. Holly trees, well berried, have arrived, and southern mistletoe, as perfect as ever, is here.

Various Notes.

The next meeting of the New York Florists' Club will be held December 11. Much interest is already taken in the nomination contests for the various offices, especially for that of president. There are five candidates for that office—Messrs. Pierson, Schenck, Stumpp, De Forest and President Weston.

Walter Mott, representing B. F. Hammond, of Beacon, N. Y., is in the city, en route to his home at Schenectady, N. Y., after a successful southern and western trip of several months' duration.

December 5 and 6 the convention of the National Association of Gardeners takes place at Washington, D. C. Secretary Ebel says everything has been done to make the meeting profitable and instructive.

Woodrow & Marketos are enlarging their store for the winter. Special work along publicity lines is in the competent hands of Miss Hamburger, the firm's stenographer.

Joseph Trepel, of Brooklyn, celebrated the opening of his new building and store at 1060 Broadway November 25. The enterprising proprietor engaged an orchestra of women and regaled his many friends with refreshments. Mrs. Trepel has long been her husband's "right-hand man."

A. J. Rickards has joined the force of travelers of R. I. Irwin.

H. C. Riedel, of Riedel & Meyer, Inc., November 21 celebrated the nineteenth anniversary of his wedding.

A meeting of those interested in bowling was held last week at the office of Joseph S. Fenrich. Plans were completed for the formation of the club immediately after Thanksgiving.

S. J. Reuter, of Westerly, R. I., passed away Friday, November 24. He was buried November 26 and many in the trade here attested their respect by attending the funeral services or sending floral tributes. Mr. Reuter was universally respected.

E. J. Fancourt, of the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia, was in the city November 24.

George Stumpp, Sr., has returned from a sojourn of nearly two years in Germany. His stories of the great war are intensely interesting, and he is glad to get back to God's country.

J. J. Coan is receiving some grand Russell and Milady roses and splendid yellow Eaton and Chadwick mums from Jacob Hauck.

The first mistletoe of the season is seen at the Kervan Co. establishment. It is of splendid quality.

Frank Millang handles more "home-grown" asparagus than any house in the wholesale section—the entire product of G. C. C. Schrader's twenty-six greenhouses at Elmhurst, L. I.

J. Austin Shaw.

"Give me that money!" said a bold bandit to George Kaucher, manager of the Bowery store of Adolph LeMoult & Son, who was taking $38 from the cash register preparatory to closing at 11 o'clock, on the night of November 15. Mr. Kaucher threw the money into a vase of mums and grabbed the intruder. When Mr. Kaucher recovered consciousness he found he had been stuffed into the icebox where the cut stock is kept. Fortunately, the latch on the door had not caught, so he got out and called the police. He found the $38 where he had thrown them. A few coins were scattered over the floor, which the police said the robber had thrown there in rage at not having got more money.

John H. Muller, a retired florist, who was in the business in Brooklyn for more than thirty years, died recently, at the age of 74. A wife, five daughters and a son survive.

Wahpeton, N. D.—Good business and prospects of more of it have caused H. Osen to erect a greenhouse 25x100 feet.

The Market.

The near advent of Thanksgiving has given the market a somewhat better tone, but trade lacks any real snap. It may be in part the oversupply of chrysanthemums, but is in greater measure due to lack of demand. Chrysanthemums are selling a little better, but are not making profitable prices. Bonnaffon remains the dominant variety. Enguehard, Patty, Mrs. Jerome Jones, Yellow Chadwick and several other late sorts are in evidence. There still is an ample supply of pompons. Roses are in short supply, but lack of a brisk demand has kept prices from rising far. All varieties have, however, made moderate advances. Carnations do not seem likely to bring fancy prices for Thanksgiving. Growers, as usual, are holding back much of their cut just before the holiday. Alice as a light pink is at present the leader and runs of a more even color than Pink Delight. As it gives fully double the number of flowers of Delight, there is no wonder that more people are growing it. Scarlet, deep pink and crimson are selling best at present.

Violets November 22 and 23 sold up as high as $1.50 per hundred. As usual, a large number were held back until November 24 and 25 and on the latter day prices slumped to 50 cents and 75 cents, another instance of the folly of holding stock back until the last day. The same is true of every holiday and special occasion when flowers are used in quantity, but growers seem unable to learn a lesson from such cases.

Lilies have been selling much better of late. Sales of valley are somewhat small; people decline to pay $6 per hundred for it. Paper Whites, stevia, calendulas, yellow marguerites, bachelor's buttons and candytuft are all in good supply. Small lots of white and pink bouvardia are seen. Good sweet peas readily bring $2 per hundred. Gardenias are scarce and cattleyas are skyrocketing in price, easily bringing $9 per dozen for C. labiata. A small lot of Percivaliana has appeared. There is a fair call for asparagus and a much improved demand for begonias, cyclamens and other pot plants.

Florists' Bowling League.

The score November 23 and standing of the league at present are as follows:

Team—	Won	Lost	Total
McAlpine & McDonald	21	3	1308
Galvin's	20	4	1308
Waban Rose Conservatories	19	5	1346
Flower Exchange	17	7	1235
H. M. Robinson & Co.	11	13	1279
Carbone	9	15	1275
New England Supply Co.	7	17	1235
Co-operative Market	7	17	1293
B. A. Snyder Co.	3	21	1208
Penn's	3	21	1210

Various Notes.

Penn's are this week devoting one window to Dutch bulbs put up in neat boxes for home culture, retailing at 50 cents each, and have had a large sale of them.

Awards made at the last meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club were as follows: Carnation Rosalia, from F. Dorner & Sons Co., grown by S. J.

Goddard, report of superior merit; Laddie, from the same raiser and grower, report of merit; Nancy, from S. J. Goddard, report of merit; chrysanthemum sport of a white seedling of Dorner's, from S. J. Goddard, report of merit; Carnation 48-A, from Littlefield & Wyman, report of merit; No. 44, from same raiser, honorable mention. The invitation to the American Carnation Society to meet in Boston in 1918 met with enthusiastic approval.

In one of the windows of T. F. Galvin, Inc., November 24, I noticed a beautiful basket of orchids which included such varieties as cattleyas, calanthes, cypripediums and Vanda Sanderiana and V. Cærulea.

John L. Russell, one of the popular salesmen for Joseph Breck & Son, was married November 15 to Miss Alice Belle Safford. The happy couple have been spending their honeymoon at Monadnock, N. H.

At the next meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, December 19, officers will be elected and J. N. Keeler, New England representative of Hitchings & Co., will give a stereopticon lecture on greenhouse construction.

C. S. Andem, of Putnam, Conn., is sending extra fine carnations to the market this season. His leading varieties are Alice, Pink Delight, White Wonder and Matchless.

Sweet peas are not at present abundant, but J. W. Philbrick & Co., of Beverly, are sending in fine Spencers which readily sell at $2 per hundred.

At the great national allied bazaar, to be held in Mechanics building December 9 to 20, at which it is hoped to raise a million dollars for relief, the plant and cut flower booth will be quite an imposing one and great quantities of flowers are sure to be disposed of. The management looks for a paid attendance of 30,000 daily.

The Albert Roper Estate, of Tewksbury, is sending in fine shipments of the new rose-pink carnation, Albert Roper; also, fine flowers of Grace, Commonwealth and other seedlings.

S. J. Goddard, of Framingham, now has a grand crop of carnations. Specially fine are Doris, his new crimson seedling; Beacon, Gloriosa, still hard to beat; Pink Delight, Benora and Matchless.

Everett E. Cummings, of Woburn, is bringing in excellent Spencer and grandiflora sweet peas, calendulas, single violets and chrysanthemums in quantity, such as White and Yellow Bonnaffon, Enguehard and Intensity.

Patrick Welch made large shipments of violets, bachelor's buttons and crimson mums for the Harvard-Yale football game at New Haven.

The Waban Rose Conservatories had a large Thanksgiving crop of Yellow Chadwick, Eaton and Mrs. Jerome Jones mums. Roses with this concern are in light crop at present. Hadley, Russell and Ophelia are coming well.

William R. Nicholson, of Framingham, had a grand cut of Intensity mums for the Harvard-Yale football game. His shipments of Alice, Pink Delight, Matchless, Benora and Beacon carnations are unusually high grade.

At Welch's, 280 Devonshire street, Edward Welch reported business as picking up nicely. No specially heavy Thanksgiving trade was anticipated, but Christmas prospects are good.

The Budlong Rose Co. received its last chrysanthemums of the season November 24. Roses at present are not in heavy crop. Mrs. W. R. Hearst shows up well and they have a fine cut of Double White Killarney, Ophelia, Stanley and Maryland. Hoosier Beauty is not doing as well as other scarlets.

Adolph E. E. Koch, of Nobscot, is marketing a fine lot of stevia, pink snapdragon and Mrs. Sander marguerites.

The Chestnut Street Greenhouses, of Marlboro, is shipping the Mann Co. extra fine lots of snapdragons and mums.

Lewis Smith, of Tewksbury, has caught on to the indoor culture of bachelor's buttons. His flowers now are carried on stout 12-inch to 15-inch stems and readily realize $2 per hundred.

Chandler Bros., of Tewksbury, have a fine house of Bonnaffon mums for Thanksgiving.

Welch Bros. Co. are doing good business and getting a lot of advance orders for the holidays. W. N. C.

BRAMPTON, ONT.

The Ontario Horticultural Association completed its annual session last week at the Parliament buildings, Toronto. There were several interesting subjects discussed, Miss Blackloch's paper on hardy asters, and Professor Naconn's paper on creepers securing a great deal of attention. Dr. Clark spoke on the possibilities of bulb culture in Canada. R. Whorley, representing fifteen different societies in northern Ontario, was a prominent speaker throughout the session. There was no flower show this season, but the general idea was that an effort should be made to revive the annual exhibition in Toronto next year.

Cold weather has set in at Brampton and stock is less plentiful, since most of the roses have been cut back for Christmas. The demand for valley and orchids from the United States is abnormal and large shipments are made daily. Business is brisk everywhere. Chrysanthemums were poorer this year than they ever were; one or two growers produced some first-class stock, despite the weather conditions.

A. N. Pierson, of Cromwell, Conn., and R. Whorley, of Haileybury, Ont., were visitors last week. W. G. P.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

The market for Thanksgiving day trade promises to tighten up. Large mums are scarce and fancy stock is practically off the market. Pompons are plentiful, but indications are that they will clean up. Good valley is scarce. Roses and carnations are in fair crop only. The market for pot plants is in better condition than that for cut flowers. Choice cyclamens, begonias, primulas and chrysanthemums are to be had in quantity.

Various Notes.

Nearly all importers of azaleas were hit hard last week by receiving frozen and partly rotten plants. There still are a few cases on the way.

The coal situation continues serious. Some of the coal barons quote run of mine coal at $5 per ton, f. o. b. Cleveland, while others make no quotations whatever.

There were nearly 5,000 paid admissions to the flower show held here last

The Market.

The market is bound to have a good and heavy supply for the holiday business. The receipts continue to come in too strongly for market needs, and it will take the holiday demand to clear the accumulations.

Roses and carnations at present are not plentiful, but the heavy receipts of chrysanthemums continue. Easter lilies, too, are abundant. Valley, orchids and sweet peas have been somewhat scarce. Callas and Paper White narcissi are equal to present demands and a few excellent single violets may be had. Stevia now is in the market. The supply of greens is sufficient for all present needs.

Various Notes.

C. E. Critchell has been getting in large quantities of Christmas supplies of all kinds.

P. J. Olinger had an excellent cut of roses and carnations for Thanksgiving.

This seems to be the open season for removals and new flower stores. The R. G. Kootz Co. is removing to a store in the new Gwynne building, while Fanel & Co., a new concern, are opening a new store opposite the Kootz store, at Sixth aad Main streets. A. K. Davis is opening a store at Newport.

Charles Falkenheim, of the Basket Novelty Co., New York, was among recent visitors. C. H. H.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS.

"Not an idle moment," was the response of D. Horgan, of the Idle Hour Nurseries, Macon, Ga., to my inquiry. "Never saw business better. Funeral work is heavy, but orders for decorations show how the public taste is drifting." Artist W. Gibson, formerly of Philadelphia, says things remind him of the old town more and more. William Turner heads the chrysanthemums and is really monstrous. "It pays to grow a few such," observed Mr. Horgan, "but of course the medium-sized blooms are the most profitable and the best sellers." Carnations and roses are in fine crop; a full line of plants are grown.

Geny Bros., of Nashville, Tenn., find Mrs. Russell practically a perpetual rose and grow it for both summer and winter use. Chrysanthemums are, of course, preëminent just now and their stock is choice. The store disposes of the stock grown at the two ranges of glass.

"A rare old plant is the ivy green," observed C. H. Hune, of the Memphis Floral Co., Memphis, Tenn. "Our sales of rooted cuttings last season amounted to 110,000, and all through the medium of The Review's classified ad columns. We have commenced another season with one order for 20,000 from a well-known house and have many inquiries from other growers." The stock is obtained from plants growing on any old stone fence. "By the same means, The Review," added Mr. Hune, "we sold 50,000 rooted cuttings of vincas. Yes, it does pay to advertise. Our store is in a basement, but we are optimists, always looking up."

H. W. Cade, of Cairo, Ill., says one of the most attractive things he ever handled is the Randall Co. electric fountain. He has loaned it out for several social functions at $5 each time, the rentals soon paying for the article.

A look through the establishment of the St. Louis Wholesale Cut Flower Co., St. Louis, under the guidance of J. J. Beneke, showed the latest ideas in arrangements. Retailers can get points on store decoration while selecting supplies, the upper floors being arranged for that purpose. The mission wood furnishing is unusually choice and should add to the selling value of the goods.

BEGONIAS ARE WILTING.

We are having trouble with our Cincinnati begonias and should like to get a little advice in regard to them. Our begonias at first appear to be in a good, healthy condition; then a plant suddenly begins to turn pale and sickly and the leaves to get soft, and in two or three days the plant has lost its vitality. It does not seem to be dead, but simply quits growing and gets pale and spindly. We have lost a number of our best plants. We are growing them in a carnation house. The temperature at night is 50 to 52 degrees. The trouble is not caused by overwatering. Any help you can give us will be greatly appreciated.

E. F. C.—Kan.

As your temperature conditions appear to be correct and the watering has been carefully done, it seems most probable that there is something wrong with your compost. If you used too much manure in the soil, the plants would act in this way. Also, if feed was given in too heavy doses, similar results would follow. The use of nitrate of soda or any other chemicals would make the plants act as yours are doing. The soil should consist of two-thirds pasture loam, pretty well decayed, and one-third leaf-mold, not too much decayed, and old, well-screened manure; add some sand, especially if the loam is heavy. Feed with liquid cow manure once a week when the pots are well filled with roots, until the plants are nicely in bloom. If, perchance, your soil is too acid, lime should be added to it when it is stacked. Sourness at the root would in itself be sufficient to cause begonias to fail as yours are doing. Not knowing how your soil is or what feeding has been done, I am merely giving suggestions which possibly may help you.

NECESSITIES WITH GARDENIAS.

I grow a general line of stock and am successful with everything but gardenias. I have need for these and would like to know the essentials of their cultivation. My plants turn yellow as soon as given water.

J. T.—Mich.

Gardenias are grown in raised benches, preferaoly in four to four and one-half inches of soil. They need plenty of drainage and the soil should be somewhat rough, so that the water will pass through it readily. Fibrous loam, cow manure and some coarse sand make a good medium. Some Scotch soot may also be added with advantage. Some growers use partly decayed leaves with their soil, but others do not consider these of any benefit. It is a fact that one of two commercial growers use solid beds only and get a fine crop through the dead of winter.

Pot plants will be all right outside from June 10 to September 10 in temperate latitudes. For benched plants a temperature as low as 60 degrees will do no harm if other conditions are right.

The principal causes of failure in gardenia culture are: Improper soil, which holds water too long and becomes sour, not allowing the benches to dry out sufficiently between waterings; keeping the atmosphere too hot and stuffy, and erratic or careless ventilation.

Gardenias like a warm and fairly moist atmosphere, but do not want coddling. There are few days in the year when they need be without ventilation. They enjoy having their roots warm; if you have hot water pipes below the benches, all the better. A winter minimum of 65 degrees, except on severe nights, is suitable. Allow it to drop 5 degrees on zero nights. Anything approaching sogginess at the roots late in summer or early in the fall will cause the leaves to turn yellow and buds to drop. Maintain a nice, buoyant atmosphere and water with great care and moderation and the plants should flower well through the winter. If the soil is heavy, I would add some partly rotted leaves, broken charcoal and a fair amount of coarse sand to it. F. R.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.
President, Kirby B. White, Detroit, Mich.; Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

THE Tucker Seed House, Earl and J. W. Tucker, proprietors, Carthage, Mo., has acquired a large 2-story building as quarters for its rapidly increasing business.

ALFALFA seed growers of Custer county, Montana, recently met at Miles City to discuss, among other things, the matter of providing a better market for their product.

THIS is the time of year that many seedsmen devote their attention to handling Christmas greens, but in recent seasons it has not been an especially profitable side line.

THOSE who printed early price lists of gladiolus bulbs already have found it necessary to advance their quotations. Such standard sorts as America and King are among the stiffest.

THE man who omits the disclaimer from his 1917 catalogue, or the one who qualifies the standard form, will be acting against the general good of the trade according to the recorded belief of the American Seed Trade Association.

IN the 1917 catalogues there will be a pronounced trend toward the cental system, abandoning the old practice of offering seeds by the quart, peck and bushel. In many cities local laws compel the sale of a large variety of articles by weight.

SMUGGLING now is the order of the day. Not smuggling past the international boundary, but past the British blockade. It is related that certain lots of German flower seeds came over in trunks and it is said many passengers are carrying suspicious quantities of baggage. Probably by now the British are searching it.

WITH INDIANA CANNERS.

The Indiana Canners' Association held its annual meeting November 23 at the Claypool hotel, Indianapolis. Next to the Wisconsin meeting, it is the largest state meeting of the year and several seed houses were represented.

The seed question was an important issue in relation to increased costs. Peas, it was thought, are fairly abundant, but with no oversupply. Beans are bringing what the canners called "extortionate" prices: Valentine and stringless green pod were quoted at from $6 to $7.50 a bushel; dried beans were higher, bringing $7.50 to $8 at the present time, with indications that by spring they will bring $12. Sweet corn also is held at a premium, with Stowell's Evergreen and Country Gentleman in the lead. Several interesting seed displays were made by the following firms, which were soliciting advance orders: W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago; Livingston Seed Co., Columbus, O.; Jerome B. Rice Co., Cambridge, N. Y., and the Leonard Seed Co., Chicago.

HOW THEY DO IT.

The Review has received a number of complaints from a certain Australian seed house with regard to short postage on letters from American seedsmen. "A fine of 6 cents on nearly every letter counts up in the course of a year," say they. But in the latest letter a hint is dropped: "How does it happen that Thorburn and Burpee get the correct postage on their letters? Why can't others do it, too?'' So The Review asked Thorburn and Burpee. Here is what the former says:

We are following no intricate method in order to see that our foreign mail bears the correct postage. We have in our mailing department one bag marked "Foreign" and one bag for "Domestic." Of course the "Domestic" bag does not need to be assorted, while the "Foreign" lots do. The young man in charge of that department evidently uses his brain and concentration to see that the proper stamps are affixed.

And here is what W. F. Therkildson wrote for Burpee:

We have a great deal of foreign correspondence and the girls who handle the sealing of the mail are quite familiar with foreign addresses. They carefully read each address before placing the stamps, so that there can be no possible error. However, this is facilitated by each stenographer taking out her foreign mail, which is sent separately to the stamping table as foreign mail; thus it has a double check.

As a matter of fact, we have used no particular care in looking after our foreign mail, other than the usual careful attention to every detail that is characteristic of the business. We are not attempting to boast in the matter, but we watch carefully the small things as they in turn make the big ones.

So you see it is not so much superior system as it is pride in the accuracy of what you do.

MOTT-LY GLEANINGS.

McKay, Reece & Co., of Nashville, Tenn., anticipate one of the best seed seasons of years, according to Manager W. B. Ewing.

The Cumberland Seed Co. is going out of the retail business, though recently located in the best section of Nashville. Manager Wood says that the company will handle heavy seed in carload lots and retain an office only.

C. C. Waggoner & Bro. are pushing the retail seed end of their business and promise to become the leaders in Nashville. Both brothers are well posted and have already acquired an excellent reputation.

Henry Wright's Seed Store, of Macon, reports an increasing sale of cereal and vegetable seeds.

The Georgia Seed Co., of Macon, Ga., states that the new variety of cotton, Pride of Georgia, comes into crop before the boll weevil gets around. Several growers have grown it with success. While local conditions affect it, it is much earlier than any variety in commerce.

sonville, is preparing its new catalogue for the market gardening trade with extra care.

C. T. McIntosh & Son, of Charleston, S. C., report the largest seed season in their experience—"and the greatest difficulty to hold our trade," said Mr. McIntosh, "for, owing to the uncertainty of supplies, we could not guarantee a large quantity to a single grower, but had to give it to him as it was handed to us. Ofttimes he was hard to convince." A new pest has appeared this season in the form of a creature that works somewhat like a mole and causes much damage. It is given the local name of ground puppy.

The Mixson Seed Co., of Charleston, believes that next year will see the largest acreage under cultivation ever known in "the island," on account of the firm and continuous market. The company also handles large quantities of garden produce and supplies.

W. M.

A UNIQUE WINDOW DISPLAY.

Benjamin DelValle, manager of the foreign department of the Stumpp & Walter Co., New York, has arranged one of the most interesting window exhibits ever seen in a seed store in that city. The display has been on a week and will continue another one if the public continues to take the wonderful interest that now prevails. Crowds constantly are in front of the window.

The principal feature of the exhibit is Cuzco, the largest known variety of corn. George G. Stumpp says this corn will grow and yield enormously in high and cold sections of this country, even 10,000 feet above the sea level. The variety is said to have been grown by the ancient Peruvians and Incas a thousand years ago. Some of the kernels measure an inch in diameter.

The whole window is devoted to South American products and not the least interesting of the stage settings is a mummy 3,000 years old and valued at $3,000. There also are valuable carpets, portieres, rugs, furs, ancient vases from the tombs of the Incas, hats, cotton, crude rubber, maps of South America, Peruvian flags and many curiosities when seen in seed store windows. The company seems to have solved the problem of window decoration, as nothing more unique and impelling has been seen in a New York seedsman's windows in years.

Stumpp & Walter Co. is offering this Cuzco corn to its patrons and finds an increasing demand for it in this country.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

The weather has become colder and there has been a fair quantity of sunshine during the last week. Business in general seems to have picked up to some extent and Thanksgiving should compare favorably with last year's, as far as sales are concerned. Stock in general is not plentiful, but rather vice versa, at this writing, with the exception of chrysanthemums. These still are too plentiful and are hard to clean up. Chadwick and Bonnaffon are in good supply and in fine condition. These two late varieties are moving well, especially in out-of-town orders. They probably stand shipping better than any other variety of mums and are in great demand by the shipping trade. This week will probably see the end of the chrysanthemums, with the exception of the two varieties mentioned. It will have a beneficial effect on business and will help the late stock to a great extent. This surely has been a queer season for mums, as they all came in at the same time and fancy stock could not be handled for what it was worth.

Roses are in fine shape, but the supply is limited just now. The cut is smaller than the demand and it is hard to take care of orders satisfactorily, especially on the shorter grades. Russell and Ophelia are exceptionally short in supply and this stock is being cleaned up at fair prices.

Carnations have become scarcer during the last few days and the price has advanced accordingly. The quality is good and the demand is strong, despite the large supply of mums. Violets are fine, but the supply is not adequate. The demand is always heavy at this time of year and the receipts insufficient. The stock compares most favorably with last year's; in fact, it surpasses last year's stock.

Valley is at a premium, but even at that it is almost impossible to procure good stock. Lilies are about equal to the demand and sell fairly well. The supply of orchids is quite large, but so is the demand, and the entire cut is cleaned up easily at from $7.50 to $9 per dozen.

Various Notes.

A. H. McDonald, in charge of the Gimbel Bros. flower department, was in Chicago November 22 cleaning up the odds and ends of his purchases for the Christmas business. He says that he is ready to take care of the large volume of trade which he has every reason to expect will come for the holiday season. Gimbel's have a wonderful display of orchids in their window this week.

The Edlefsen-Leidiger Co., which opened an establishment at 419 Milwaukee street some time ago, is going to give up its store at 349 Third street December 4. This is an old stand and has done well, but there is no reason why the new place should not be even better, as it is larger and more suitable in every way.

Tuesday, November 21, H. V. Hunkel lost a perfectly good Hudson car. Someone helped himself while the car was standing almost in front of the store of the Holton & Hunkel Co. No trace of the car has been found as yet, though every effort has been made to locate it. Mr. Hunkel carried insurance, but would much rather have his car.

T. B. Coumandros, of the Golden Rule Flower Department, St. Paul, visited the city Wednesday, November 22. While here he did some Christmas business and looked over the stock in this vicinity.

I THANK The Review for good results. —Charles Taynor, New Carlisle, O.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

Seattle, Wash.—The Aabling-Boyce Seed Co. has added a new and extensive flower department to its establishment at 89 Pike street, where for many years the company has sold seeds and shrubbery.

SAN DIEGO, CAL.

The Market.

Business along all lines has been steadily improving of late, and the report that San Diego is to have the new railway has given everyone a more optimistic feeling. More stock is grown around the city than formerly; consequently retailers are less dependent on Los Angeles and San Francisco.

Some of the carnations are excellent and there are still a few mums left. Violets, locally grown, look pretty and fresh, but they are smaller, both bunches and flowers, than the northern-grown stock. Plants and greens are scarce.

Various Notes.

The parks and exposition grounds are splendid now, and just how Superintendent John Morley does it, with his more or less depleted force, is difficult to say. When one looks back over a few years and thinks of the wilderness that now is a magnificent park, it is to wonder at the skill and persistence of this clever and capable man, who makes two trees grow where there were rocks and gravel. Already signs of the end of the big show are near, the Utah building having already been emptied. The big wind-up celebration is to be New Year's day.

Boyle & Darnaud report fine business. The stock at the greenhouses is looking well. They grow most of the stock sold and are showing some beautiful cyclamens, orchids and other items, which come fresh from the nursery daily.

George Otto always has an attractive store and his large bunches of house-grown stevias are fine. While he says funeral work has been the mainstay, there also has been a good deal of transient business.

The seedsmen are making good showings of bulbs, but all say that a rain is needed to help business.

Miss A. Rainford has given up her store at the Coronado hotel, in order to center her whole force at the city place, where she reports business good.

H. R. Richards.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

It was an exceptionally busy week for high-class funeral work, several prominent people having died. There is not sufficient really good stock in the market to go around, though there always is plenty of third-rate stock. Indoor carnations were rough for a week or so, but now are much better. There are plenty of whites, pinks and reds, but good rose-pinks are scarce. Roses apparently become shorter all the time and everything is snapped up as soon as it reaches the market. Orchids are on the scarce side, not particularly good and in great demand. There is practically no valley to be had. Other flowers are about equal to the demand.

Mums are about over. A popular green called wild lemon is useful for backing up funeral pieces and for decorations. Plumosus is good, but not so plentiful as it has been. Common ferns and adiantum are plentiful and good. Plants are being more freely shown and it looks as though there will be plenty of stock for Christmas, even if the azaleas do not make the holiday.

Various Notes.

George W. Smith and Mrs. Smith were in Ventura during the week, attending the funeral of Mrs. Smith's uncle. Business keeps up well in the flower department at the store and there also is a large sale of Dutch bulbs.

C. F. Clausen, who grows those fine big gladioli for the E. C. Amling Co., of Chicago, is in the city on a business and pleasure trip. Mr. Clausen is more or less interested in vegetable culture out there.

The Abbey Flower Shop says that business has not been particularly good of late, but that it is picking up.

The windows of the Germain Seed & Plant Co. are always attractive and during the week they contained large bunches of fine cut roses from the nursery on the Whittier road. Well known indoor varieties that do well also outdoors were noted, Radiance, Mrs. George Shawyer and Christie-Miller being exceptionally good.

P. Matraia, of San Francisco, was a visitor this week, en route to San Diego.

At the funeral of an old inhabitant and pioneer F. Lichtenberg had a magnificent spray of Prima Donna roses that was the admiration of everyone.

J. Wallace, representing F. B. Pemberton, holly grower of Victoria, B. C., was in town this week calling on the trade.

The L. A. Floral Co. surely is keeping its reputation with regard to pompons and mums, really good shipping stock being noted here when other houses were short of it.

Among those going into greenhouse building are G. W. Smith and Fred Hills. Mr. Smith is erecting propagating houses at his new nursery in Hollywood, while Mr. Hills cannot grow enough of those splendid ferns of his to supply the trade and therefore has to extend his range. In these days of high prices of building materials this looks promising.

The trade is awaiting with interest the opening of Henry A. Siebrecht's new store in the Hotel Maryland building at Pasadena. Mr. Siebrecht, it is said, has the contract for five years for the decorations at the three big hotels here, which now are under one management. He also is going largely into high-class landscape work.

E. Rust, of this city and South Pasadena, will have a splendid lot of Lorraine and Cincinnati begonias for Christmas, the plants being large, healthy and full of buds.

W. Armacost & Co., of Sawtelle, say that they have the finest lot of cyclamens they ever handled. The long-stemmed roses coming to the market from this concern also are excellent stock.

S. Murata & Co. are making especially long shipments these days, one box going as far as northern Minnesota. They now are shipping an excellent grade of indoor carnations.

The Abbey Flower Shop had a good casket spray for the funeral of the ill-fated driver of the wrecked Marmon at the Santa Monica races.

H. R. Richards.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

For the first time in many weeks the supply of cut flowers is rather short. Some kinds are scarce and, taking the offerings all together, there are barely enough flowers to meet requirements. The present situation is largely the result of the unseasonably cold weather earlier in the month. It has developed that the frost practically put an end to the crop of large Japanese chrysanthemums. Few of these flowers are coming in now and all good stock cleans up quickly. The Chinese growers still have quite a heavy cut of the small bush mums, which are better than usual this year, and there are many pompons, but they are not sufficiently plentiful to offset the shortage in other lines.

Taking it for granted the offerings of large chrysanthemums would continue bountiful for some time longer, the growers had been pinching back their roses closely, and now that mums are scarce, there is only a limited cut of roses. All varieties of roses demand high prices. The market is particularly short on American Beauties, as there has been a strong demand in Los Angeles and many have been shipped there. The recent dry wind hurt the violets to a certain extent, but a fair supply of good stock continues to arrive. There is a good cut of gardenias and these move well in the absence of valley and the scarcity of orchids. Potted plants are more in evidence, there being a good many cinerarias, begonias, cyclamens and primroses. Paper White narcissi are beginning to attract more attention than they did on their first appearance. The outlook for flowering plants for the holidays is considered good.

Various Notes.

Richard Lohrmann, of the West End Nursery, San Rafael, has issued a new dahlia and German iris price list that includes a collection of fourteen dahlias of his own raising, most of which were planted and exhibited at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition.

The flower store at 488 Haight street has undergone a change in management, the new owners being David Avansino and John McDonald. Both are well known in the local trade. The former is a brother of John B. and Henry Avansino, who recently opened a store on Geary street under the name of Avansino Bros., and the latter has been with MacRorie & McLaren. The business which they are taking over was formerly operated by the late Martin Petersen, and since his death has been under the supervision of his widow. Messrs. Avansino and McDonald plan extensive improvements in the place.

MacRorie & McLaren sent a large truck of flowers over to Oakland for the opening of a new theater in that city, November 23.

H. R. Darling, of Los Angeles, was a recent visitor. He reported business good with him since he improved his store some time ago.

Mrs. R. E. Darbee has been shipping

SPOKANE, WASH.

The Market.

Unusually severe weather, with some dark days, has had its effect in some degree on stock in the greenhouses, perhaps most noticeably on the Killarneys. Ophelia and Russell roses seem to be strong enough to withstand at least the first siege of cloudy weather. These are of unusually good quality and, with Hoosier Beauty, are sure to be the most widely grown roses in the west. A fact frequently commented on is the superiority in coloring which our Washington-grown Ophelia roses have over eastern-grown stock. The depth and richness of color which Ophelia attains under our climatic conditions are both amazing and gratifying.

Carnations are showing up much better in quality and are in good quantity. More than the usual quantity of sunshine this fall has helped to develop the plants to a point where most growers are looking forward to a record-breaking Christmas crop. Mums, however, have been greatly advanced by the bright weather, but, despite this, there should be an abundance of good blooms for Thanksgiving.

Various Notes.

A visit to the Manito park greenhouses was well worth the trip, Park Superintendent John W. Duncan and Assistant Low having the conservatories in their customary spick-and-span condition. William Turner mums have been exceptionally good and, though beginning to age, they still are the best variety on exhibition. Considerable space in the exhibition houses is given to pompons and the single varieties. Mensa and Dorothy Dugan are the reigning favorites.

Imus & Klaffenbach were among the latest growers to start business in Spokane, but notwithstanding that this is their first experience with Russell, Ophelia and Hoosier Beauty, they are leading other growers a merry chase for first honors. Their Russell roses, especially, have been and are of fine quality.

Among the "friends of yesteryear" which one occasionally sees is a rose now being grown to perfection by P. Garginlo—the old red rose, Liberty. Mr. Garginlo is having splendid results from it, excellent color and good strong stems. His Ophelia roses are exceptionally good.

Bernson & Halle soon will have sweet peas on the market, judging by the appearance of their plants. They are promising stems twelve to eighteen inches long and expect to surpass their record for prize peas established last winter.

The retailers are busy. Funeral work seems plentiful. Parties are frequent and some good-priced decorations are turned out by florists who specialize in that line of work. L. B. H.

SEATTLE, WASH.

The Market.

Business, as usual just before Thanksgiving, has been somewhat quiet. Stock of most varieties of cut flowers is plentiful and a little in excess of demand. Chrysanthemums are cheaper than ever before. Pompons, which usually are in heavy demand, do not seem to be much called for. Carnations are holding up fairly well in price; there is not any oversupply so far and now the quality is all that can be desired. Roses are arriving in good shape, as the recent unusually bright weather has been much in their favor. A few local double violets are offered, but the majority of the single ones come from the south. Cyclamens are plentiful, and potted mums sell fairly well. There are quantities of ferns, but they do not sell any too briskly.

Various Notes.

The mother of H. B. Slauson, after being an invalid for some time, entered into her rest November 15. She was 84 years of age.

Henry Benthien & Son, Louis Tschunko and George Seaverns, Tacoma florists, have been visiting their friends in the trade here.

The Aabling-Boyce Co. has installed a cut flower and plant department, using the front part of the seed store for that purpose.

Charles Malmo has taken over the salesyards at Fourth and Virginia streets and is selling the usual lines of nursery stock. He has also opened a seed emporium in the new Westlake market.

Announcement of the death of H. B. Burdett, who was fighting for the Allies in France, has just been received. Further particulars will be found in this week's obituary column. T. W.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

Although last week was close to Thanksgiving, business held up well. The principal floral feature was the opening, November 20, of the new marble palace of the First National bank, which used all the available first-class stock. Carnations and locally grown violets were scarce. The demand for violets was met by shipments from California, but the supply of carnations was greatly short of the demand. Several carnation growers have cut but few flowers, and it is likely that the shortage will continue until after the holidays. Changing from Enchantress and other early-blooming varieties to those which come in later accounts, to some extent, for this condition.

In mums, Eaton, Dr. Enguehard, Mrs. Jerome Jones and the pompons are in their prime. A few Maud Dean have come in. The cut of roses is normal for the season, Hadley, Ophelia, Hoosier Beauty and Mrs. Chas. Russell leading. Cattleya labiata is producing well and furnishes a supply sufficient to meet all demands.

It Pays

To Pacific Coast Florists:

What stock have you for sale to the trade? Is it moving as it should? No?

Then tell the trade about it by using the Pacific Coast Pages of The Review.

Pacific Coast advertisers almost invariably report good results. Like this:

Say! That ad's a humdinger for getting the business.—Everett Floral Co., Everett, Wash.

I sold all the Mum cuttings advertised, and you will not hear from me again until I can get some more stock ready. Shall root 100,000 Carnation cuttings for next season, as I know The Review will sell them for me.—Frank Wilhelm, Los Angeles, Cal.

Please cut out of our advertisement in The Review the cyclamen seedlings. We sold all our surplus cyclamen seedlings as a direct result of our advertisement in your paper.—Spokane Greenhouses (Inc.), Spokane, Wash.

We want to say that our last advertisement in The Review brought us orders from both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts. We had, strangely enough, on following days, orders from Salem, Ore., and from Salem, Mass.—State Floral Co., North Yakima, Wash.

We are well pleased with the results obtained by advertising in the Pacific Coast Department of The Review. We sold out clean and refused many orders. The Review surely gives results. —Van Slyke & Seamons, Tacoma, Wash.

The transient rate for space is $1.25 per inch per insertion. Those who have stock to offer all or a considerable part of the year around should write for contract rates.

their employees and families and friends, November 21, with a program and banquet at the society's headquarters in the Masonic Temple. About 175 attended and enjoyed the entertainment.

The program was as follows:

Brief remarks by President Walker.
Songs by Austro-Hungarian male chorus, led by Professor Stebinger.
Zither solo by Professor A. O. Miller.
Alpine songs by Mrs. J. G. Bacher and Miss Amacher.
Duet by Jos. Hora and H. Pfeifer, accompanied by Professor Stebinger.
Vocal solo by Mrs. H. Meier.
Bavarian folk dance by Mr. and Mrs. H. Meier, accompanied by two zither players.

The banquet tables were tastefully decorated with vases of pink pompons, donated by the Holden Floral Co. and arranged by L. W. Scott. F. A. Van Kirk, the "caterer," as he was officially called, outdid all his previous efforts in getting up a banquet. Music, cards, dancing and social chats filled out the evening to a late hour. August Zitzewitz had charge of the program.

Various Notes.

The home of Wallace Garside, of Clarke Bros., was entered by porch climbing burglars last week while the family was away. Fortunately, Mrs. Garside was wearing some of her best jewelry, for the burglars took everything of value that they could find. Mr. Garside estimates his loss at about $100.

T. Miles, a Newberg grower, and M. C. de Wreede, representing Holland bulb growers, were recent visitors.

Clarke Bros. showed some excellent Dr. Enguehard mums last week.

The Holden Floral Co. is bringing in some high quality Cincinnati begonias.

W. Clancey, formerly with the Floral Studio, has taken a position as store manager for Carl Ruef, of Salem.

Due to the illness of their wives, both B. and C. Tonseth were unable to attend ladies' night.

Wilson-Crout-Gehr Co. is putting the finishing touches on its heating plant, cross-connecting the piping, so that in case of failure of any one of the boilers the houses can be heated from one or more of the remaining ones.

Niklas & Son have put a tasteful carrier body on their delivery car.

Edward Boyse, of the Martin & Forbes Co., has recovered his health and is back at work. He has arranged an attractive display in the store's windows.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

President, John Watson, Newark, N. Y.; Vice-president, Lloyd C. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Secretary and General Manager, Curtis Nye Smith, Boston, Mass.; Treasurer, Peter Youngers, Geneva, Neb.

THERE is an increasing call for Polish privet, Ligustrum Polishi.

WM. A. PETERSON, of Peterson Nursery, is treasurer of the committee planning the big Billy Sunday revival for Chicago next year, intended to be the biggest thing of its kind that ever happened.

THE officers of the California Association of Nurserymen have taken time by the forelock by shaping a tentative program for the seventh annual convention of the organization, which is to be held at San Jose, Cal., October 11 to 13, 1917.

EIGHT million trees will be available for next spring's reforesting operations from the stock of the Pennsylvania state nurseries. More than half of the trees are white pines. Many are furnished free of charge to individuals, but the restrictions are that free trees must be used for reforesting and not for shade or ornamental planting.

THE Oklahoma Nursery & Seed Co., of Muskogee, Okla., has purchased all other nurseries in Muskogee county and has opened a sales office and seed yard at 614 West Broadway. The incorporators of the company are: W. D. Hume, T. Miller, E. Hastain, E. C. Greisel and G. W. Irwin. Every piece of stock that goes out of the nursery is guaranteed, and the company expects to push vigorously prosecutions against fake nursery peddlers who travel through the country and unload on unsuspecting purchasers.

PYRAMIDAL YEWS.

Is there a Japanese yew of pyramid form in cultivation? D. H.—O.

I do not know of a pyramidal Japanese yew. Taxus baccata Hibernica, the Irish yew, is the best columnar-habited form of yew we have, but it is less hardy than the Japanese yews. If protected a little, however, it has stood a temperature several degrees below zero in the east without injury. C. W.

WINTERING BOXWOODS.

I would appreciate your expert advice on the following method of handling boxwoods in winter storage: Our boxwoods have grown in our nursery since spring. I propose to dig them with an earth ball attached, burlap them, soak them in water and pack them in moist shingle tow. Paper will be tied loosely around the tops; then they will be packed lightly in straw in a slightly reclining position. Our storage house is brick, lined with paper and sheathing. Plenty of light and air can be admitted, but there is no heating device. Do you think that by this method I can successfully bring this stock through the winter, or must there be more light, air and heat? Your opinion on this matter will be much appreciated. E. B. S.—Ill.

Your boxwoods should winter perfectly if stored as described. Artificial heat is unnecessary and would even be harmful. Provided the balls are moist and are not allowed to become dry before the stock is planted out in the spring, I feel sure your stock will come through in fine shape. A subdued light for winter storage is preferable to a strong one for all evergreens, including bay trees, Irish yews, aucubas, English yews, hollies and other plants that are more or less tender in our climate. Ventilate abundantly during all favorable weather. C. W.

year old or 2 years old from the bud," and delivery to be made between 1909 and 1911, inclusive. A separate clause gave the plaintiff an "option to purchase 25,000 additional standard trees as above described, upon the same terms and conditions as provided for the purchase of the first 25,000 of such standard trees." After the contract was made, the plaintiff gave notice of his selection of varieties for budding, as follows: "Twenty per cent Thompson improved navels; twenty-five per cent Valencias; forty-five per cent Washington navels; ten per cent Eureka lemons." Still later the plaintiff served notice that, according to the contract, he would "buy 25,000 standard trees, 1 year old from the bud, for delivery in April, May and June, 1909, and 25,000 standard trees, 2 years old from the bud, to be delivered from January 1 and July 1, 1910."

The defendant denied that there was a valid exercise of the option and refused to deliver the additional 25,000 trees.

Under these circumstances, the court holds that the plaintiff's specification of varieties above mentioned applied to the additional trees as well as the first 25,000, and that the second notice mentioned constituted a sufficient exercise of the option. And it is further decided that the option was exercised within a reasonable time, the notice having been given March 13, 1909, before any of the trees had become 1 year old from the bud. There was nothing to show that the defendant was prejudiced in any way by the plaintiff's delay in giving the notice that he would take the additional trees. S.

Vinton, Ia.—Urice Bros. are forcing an unusually large quantity of stock for Christmas sales. Many improvements were made at the range during the fall.

Watertown, N. Y.—As usual, the annual mum show at the F. A. Bennett range this month made a hit with the public. Automobiles provided free transportation from the Bennett store to the range. Fred Bennett, Jr., was the show manager.

Newcastle, Ind.—The "city beautiful" movement, which resulted in good work and undoubtedly good business for the local greenhouses, is to be continued on a larger scale next year. Local florists were liberal contributors to the prize fund and donators of flowers to the sales conducted by the federated clubs.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

The executive committee of the American Rose Society held a special session in Horticultural hall, Philadelphia, November 22. There was an attendance of twenty-three persons, representing the Florists' Club of Philadelphia and the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society.

A full discussion took place relative to the best place for the spring exhibition of 1917. The discussion was finally brought to a head by a motion by Joseph Heacock, recommending holding the meeting and exhibition in the First Regiment armory, March 20 to 23, 1917. The motion was unanimously carried. It was moved that a committee be appointed to engage the armory, with George Burton as chairman.

The matter of a manager for the exhibition was gone over with care and it was moved that the secretary cast one vote for Adolph Farenwald as manager. It was further moved that a local secretary be appointed and Fred Cowperthwaite was designated for that position. A committee on the exhibits of private gardeners was appointed, with William Kleinheinz, Ogontz, as chairman. As a committee on commercial exhibits the following were designated: George Burton, Chestnut Hill, Pa.; Wallace R. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn.; George Asmus, Chicago; E. Allan Peirce, Waltham, Mass.; T. P. Langhans, Pittsburgh; Frank A. Friedley, Rocky River, O.; Robert Simpson, Clifton, N. J.; J. A. Peterson, Cincinnati; William F. Gude, Washington; Leo Niessen, Philadelphia. Other appointments were: Advertising committee, W. F. Therkildson, Philadelphia; committee on tickets, E. J. Fancourt, Philadelphia; decorations committee, John P. Habermehl, Philadelphia; treasurer for local expenses, Alfred Burton, Philadelphia; schedule committee for cut flowers, Harry O. May, Robert Simpson, Adolph Farenwald.

Official headquarters will be at the office of S. S. Pennock, 1612 Ludlow street, Philadelphia.

The matter of complimentary tickets to the members of the Florists' Club and the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society who assist in the work of the exhibition was referred to Geo. Burton, the distribution of tickets to the press to be left with Mr. Therkildson. It was resolved that florists, merchants or seedsmen who wish to buy tickets for distribution shall pay at the rate of 25 cents each in lots of 100 and that the regular ticket of admission shall be 50 cents. Benj. Hammond, Sec'y.

Lincoln, Ill.—Gullett & Sons say their first carload of azaleas arrived in fine condition, but that many cases in the second car, which arrived two days later, were badly frozen. They have similar reports from other importers.

Milwaukee, Wis.—C. C. Pollworth has returned from his annual trip into the Wisconsin woods. He reports an unusual quantity of snow early in the season, which seriously curtailed the picking of bouquet green, with the result that this commodity is extremely scarce in some sections of the state.

FORT WAYNE, IND.

The Market.

Business last week was rather quiet, according to reports, but this was not considered unusual, as there generally is a lull before the rush of Thanksgiving. The weather has been cold, and thereby the quality of cut flowers is much improved. Chrysanthemums are of much better quality. The earlier varieties are over and the best on the market now are Eaton, Chadwick, Golden Wedding, Dolly Dimple and Bonnaffon. Prices are holding up well. Pompons still are arriving in excellent shape and are popular. Mum plants continue to sell well. American Beauties are on the scarce side, but the demand is light. Roses are arriving in much better condition. The leaders are Russell, Hoosier Beauty, Ophelia, Shawyer, Killarney Brilliant and Sunburst. The miniature varieties are selling well. Carnations are larger and the demand is improving. Lilies are coming nicely; valley is in excellent demand and of good quality. Orchids are plentiful and of good quality. There are some sweet peas on the market, of fine quality.

Orders for Thanksgiving came in well and all indications pointed to a record business. A good supply of mums, roses and carnations for the holiday is assured. There also were several good wedding orders booked for the day.

Various Notes.

W. J. & M. S. Vesey cut 400 orchids November 20 for shipment to all parts of the country. This firm now has six houses devoted to orchids.

The Doswell Floral Co. is receiving some excellent Spencer sweet peas and single violets from its greenhouses at Lindenwood. The carnation crop also is coming on nicely. Miss Doswell reports business quiet, but orders are coming in splendidly.

The Flick Floral Co. has received a large shipment of Scotch heather plants from the Knight & Struck Co., New York.

The December meeting of the Fort Wayne Florists' Club will be held Friday evening, December 1, at the store of A. J. Lanternier & Co. A report of the last meeting and of the flower show will be read by the secretary. R. F.

Wittbold's Selected Stock of Choice Boxwoods, Laurels and Aucubas

Large and well selected stock of Boxwoods, English Laurels, which are much hardier than bay trees, and Aucubas, the semi-hardy evergreen shrubs noted for their golden-leaved, laurel-like foliage, spotted with bright yellow.

These stately and decorative shrubs are always in ready demand by the customers wherever they are displayed by progressive florists.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The Market.

Prices were higher last week than for some time, a condition due primarily to the dark weather. Carnations, roses and violets have been much higher-priced. Paper Whites are here, but there is not much demand for them. A few Easter lilies of fair quality are to be had. Mums are still quite plentiful, but the demand for them has diminished.

Various Notes.

William H. Davenport had a week of good business.

William P. Pierce reports business as being steady. Funeral work has kept the force busy.

Frank L. Gray, employed by the Peckham Floral Co., of Fairhaven, is still on the sick list and has had to go to his home at Lynn, Mass.

Edward M. Pierce has about finished his fall bedding work. Mr. Pierce reports a strong demand for beds of tulips. W. M. P.

AMHERST, MASS.

The floricultural classes of the Massachusetts Agricultural College visited the A. N. Pierson, Inc., establishment at Cromwell, Conn., November 18. Tom Beers acted as guide to the students, pointing out the special features and the varied crops grown. The trip was most enjoyable and the students left tired but much impressed by the magnitude of the business done by this firm.

The students are engaged in the planting of bulbs and trenching of sweet peas this week.

The M. A. C. Florists' and Gardeners' Club met November 23 for a discussion on the publication of an annual. Great plans are being laid for this enterprise and it is hoped a valuable booklet will be the result.

Jens Jensen, of Chicago, spent the week end at the college. He addressed the landscape gardening students, explaining some of his work.

Zanesville, O.—Says C. L. Humphrey, owner of 50,000 square feet—"Where Fine Flowers Grow:" "When I read in The Review what the Chicago growers who supply the city markets received for their mums, I realize that I have done well—Chrysolora, $2 per dozen; V. Poehlmann, $2.50 per dozen; Turner, $4; Chadwick, $3. Our pompons are in larger demand each year. We grow Alma, Sylva Slade, Golden Harvest, Baby, Diana, Souvenir d'Or and Helen Newberry.

SAN FRANCISCO NOTES.

many brakes and woodwardia ferns to eastern wholesalers. These evidently are meeting with favor, as she has standing orders on file from several concerns. One large fern in particular, which shows remarkable keeping qualities, is most popular. Mrs. Darbee procures this stock mostly from Humboldt county, large bales of it arriving at a time. She is preparing to handle a lot of red berries early in December.

The Growers' Cut Flower Co. reports having already received several orders for pompons as the result of its ad in The Review.

Manager J. A. Axell, of the E. W. McLellan Co., says that all roses clean up readily in view of the light cut and the reduced offerings of other varieties of flowers. He reports heavy shipments of violets and baby roses for Thanksgiving.

Frank Pelicano is bringing in good stock of his new violet, Quaker Lady, and says that it cleans up readily.

T. Mosco reports a big demand for fancy baskets at his store on Geary street.

Alfred Lundberg has been putting on the finishing touches at his new store at 1440 Polk street, where he has facilities for showing his stock to excellent advantage. He is gratified to note a substantial increase in business since moving from the old location about three blocks up the street.

T. A. Burns, president of the California Dahlia Growers' Association, has completed arrangements with the Palace hotel for next year's dahlia show, which will be held September 4 to 6. Double the space utilized for the show this year has been secured, and plans are already well under way for making the 1917 show the most comprehensive event of the kind ever held in this section. The next bulletin of the association will be ready in about three weeks.

A. O. Stein, of 1150 Sutter street, says fall business has given no grounds for complaint, counter sales having been good and the number of large decorations above normal. He was planning a big decoration at the St. Francis hotel. At this establishment the demand for fancy table baskets is reported unusually brisk.

The California State Floral Society discussed the growth of flowers and fruits at the monthly meeting held November 24.

It is understood that shippers are charging a little more for violets than in former years, on account of the high price of paper. S. H. G.

NEW VARIETIES YOU NEED

NEW POMPONS

Hilda Canning. A bronze seedling from Baby, raised by the Mount Greenwood Cemetery Association. The finest distinct novelty offered in years. It is one which every chrysanthemum grower should include in his planting.

Romaine Warren. In the class with Frank Wilcox, a commercial sort that will be profitable. Orange-bronze in color. Strong grower, making nice sprays. Stiff-stemmed, and needs almost no tying. It is a worthy companion to Golden Climax as a money-maker and will flower between Golden Climax and Frank Wilcox.

Delphine Dodge. Light pink in color, making large, full sprays. Flowers small. It is a big producer per square foot of bench.

Price of above, $2.00 per doz., $15.00 per 100

NEW SINGLE VARIETIES

Katewood. If you grow fancy stock for a high-class trade, Katewood will prove the finest single you have ever grown. It is clear, bright pink in color. A tall, strong grower, and makes the finest individual flowers of any of the Singles.

Virginia Holden. The finest deep crimson ever offered. As deep as Harvard in color and one of the easiest varieties to handle. Makes good sprays and good-sized plants.

Jessica McMurray. A soft rose-pink that follows Mrs. Buckingham into flower. Good for a select trade.

Pink Simplicity. Shell pink, medium dwarf in growth, strong-stemmed. A very choice variety for any grower to handle.

Jane Ingalls. A semi-dwarf seedling from Brutus. Comes into flower for Thanksgiving. Reddish bronze in color. Will make excellent pot plant.

Price of above, $2.00 per doz., $15.00 per 100

BARBARA DAVIS

A. N. Pierson, Inc.

CROMWELL, CONN.

LARGE-FLOWERED CHRYSANTHEMUMS

Barbara Davis. The finest novelty of the season for the commercial grower. A reddish bronze, strongly reflexed with orange reverse to the petal. It is medium dwarf in growth, making strong stems and good foliage. It is a color that sells on sight, being distinct from all other varieties, and there is always a market for good bronze varieties. 2¼-inch, 50c each, $5.00 per doz., $35.00 per 100.

Alice Day. Sent out last season. Has proved to be our best second early white. It follows Oconto. Big, pure white flowers. Strong, sturdy grower, making good stems. The best white in its season. 2¼-inch, $3.00 per doz., $20.00 per 100.

Josephine Foley. A big, pure white that will follow Alice Day, and will, with us, replace Naomah. It is the best white to precede Chas. Rager and White Chieftain. 2¼-inch, $3.00 per doz., $20.00 per 100.

NEW CARNATIONS

Arawana. A crimson seedling of our own raising. Just a good commercial crimson sort that will please you and your trade. Rooted cuttings, $12.00 per 100, $100.00 per 1000.

Nebraska. A fine new scarlet. Large flowers, strong grower, good producer. Rooted cuttings, $6.00 per 100, $50.00 per 1000.

Aviator. Very intense scarlet in color, very free-flowering. Rooted cuttings, $6.00 per 100, $50.00 per 1000.

Nancy. A new light pink that looks good with us. Perfectly formed flowers, of good color. Rooted cuttings, $6.00 per 100, $50.00 per 1000.

Alice Coombs. Strong grower, making large flowers. Light pink in color. Rooted cuttings, $6.00 per 100, $50.00 per 1000.

The Market.

Last week the market was well stocked with nearly everything in season. Mums continue to come in, but they are nothing special in quality. Bonnaffons are good and sell readily. The pompons also are satisfactory and plentiful. Roses are stacking up a bit, all growers shipping in rather heavily. Ophelia and Hoosier Beauty roses of best quality may be had. American Beauties continue about the same in quantity—enough for the demand. Valley now makes $7 per hundred sprays.

Carnations are in oversupply, but of best quality, and bring as high as $4. Lilies are greatly in oversupply and the demand is light. Sweet peas, hyacinths and narcissi have made their appearance in the market; also bouvardias.

Various Notes.

Some good cyclamen plants are to be seen at B. Schroeter's Broadway store.

Frank Smith, in charge of John Breitmeyer's Sons' greenhouses, reports that he will have a good batch of azaleas for the Christmas trade.

The mum show at Belle Isle this year was well worth seeing, and drew a good attendance.

E. V. Sullivan reports that business at the new store is good. H. T.

Department of Registration.

Public notice is hereby given that W. Atlee Burpee & Co., of Philadelphia, Pa., offer for registration the dahlias described below. Any person objecting to the registration, or to the use of the proposed names, is requested to communicate with the secretary at once. Failing to receive objection to the registration, the same will be made three weeks from this date.

Peony-flowered Dahlia — Parentage, seedling from Mrs. Hugh Dickson. An early and profuse bloomer. Flowers large; color salmon pink, heavily flushed with yellow and amber. The central twisted florets are clear yellow, with suffusion of salmon and amber. Height four and one-half to five feet. Name, Mrs. John Gribbel.

Decorative Dahlia—Parentage, Flora crossed Baron G. de Grancy. Flowers of medium size, pure white, of good depth and produced on long, stiff stems. Height four and one-half feet. Name, Jean Kerr.

Peony-flowered Dahlia — Parentage, seedling from Mrs. Hugh Dickson. Flowers of large size. An early and continuous bloomer. Color, salmon-buff, with pinkish salmon suffusion. Reverse of petals, reddish salmon. Height four and one-half to five feet. Name, John D. Rockefeller.

John Young, Sec'y.

November 25, 1916.

Webb City, Mo.—O. C. Moore has moved his greenhouse from Gravette, Ark., to Webb City, and is reërecting the house seventy-five feet long instead of fifty feet, as it was at the old location.

USINGER'S UTTERANCES.

John Paul, of Cumberland, Md., had an exceptionally good supply of stock displayed in his neat store when I called.

The Flower Shop, of Cumberland, had a splendid display of novelties suitable for favors and parties.

John A. Bopp, of Cumberland, must look for a new location for his greenhouse before spring, as manufacturers have purchased his land for a new factory.

H. F. Wissing, of West Newton, Pa., in commenting on business, said that it was vastly better than that of any previous year.

James E. Schell, of South Connellsville, Pa., is building an addition to his greenhouses.

P. R. De Muth & Sons, of Connellsville, Pa., have a fine crop of about 10,000 mums, and a large cut is scheduled for Thanksgiving.

William Steele, of Uniontown, Pa., has discontinued business.

Stenson & McGrail, of Uniontown, have had their share of funeral work. Business shows an increase over that of former seasons and a good holiday trade is anticipated.

L. R. Collins, of Meyersdale, Pa., recently installed a large icebox, which is calculated to make for better display and easier sales.

G. L. Graham, of Bradford, Pa., was getting out several large funeral orders when I called.

Clarence Gunton, also of Bradford, is on a hunt for pheasants and foxes, hitting the trail the first day of the season. W. T. U.

Greenhouse Heating.

LOCATION OF RETURNS.

I wish to be informed whether underbench heating is practical, with two feed lines and one return line on each side and under the gutter, in a range of two houses, each 18x100. Each bench would have one feed line and its return. I am using steam. F. L.—O.

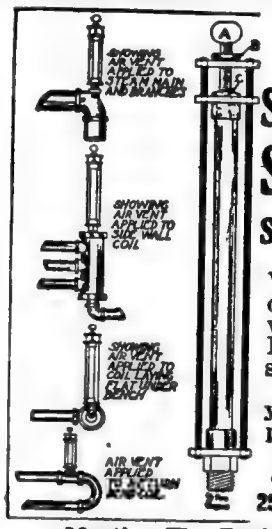
The question does not give any idea of the number or width of the benches, but we would say that it is a good plan to have at least a part of the return pipes under the benches, as in that position they not only help to dry off the soil, if it has become too wet from drip or other causes, but by furnishing bottom heat they hasten the growth of most crops. Ordinarily, when there are walks along the walls, it is a good plan to place a part of the returns on the walls, and two or three pipes under each of the benches. To heat the house described, to 60 degrees in zero weather, we would run a 2-inch flow along under the ridge, and six 1¼-inch returns could be placed in coils of two pipes under each of the benches. F. R.

POOR CIRCULATION.

We have just installed a new boiler, in a shed at the west end of our greenhouse. It stands on a level with the ground and there are two flow pipes running from the boiler to the east end of the greenhouse, one flow on each side, on a line with the purlins. There are four lines of pipe under the bench on each side, running a distance of 108 feet from the east end to the boiler, with a fall of one foot in that distance. The bottom of the expansion tank is even with the top of the flow pipes and connects downward with the return.

For some reason, we get hardly any circulation. We cannot put the expansion tank any higher without putting it outside, above the roof of the shed. If we enlarge the expansion tank, will that answer the same purpose as raising it? The piping throughout the system is 2-inch. The smokestack is eighteen feet high and twelve inches in diameter. We shall appreciate any suggestions that you can offer us in regard to any defects in the arrangement of the piping. We do not wish to put the boiler in a pit if we can avoid doing so. A. & G.—Kan.

The principal reason for the trouble is because the return pipes are so near the level of the bottom of the heating surface of the boiler. Increasing the size of the expansion tank will not improve the circulation. Unless you can drop the boiler at least two feet—and four feet would be better; or, which amounts to the same thing, unless you can raise the return pipes, it will be necessary to put on a mercury generator, or in some way place the system under pressure.



When used as an open system it will not be possible to obtain satisfactory results with 2-inch flow pipes supplying four returns of the same size, 108 feet in length, and they should be replaced with 2½-inch pipe, unless a closed system is used. F. R.

The Market.

Trade was slow for the greater part of the week; in fact, the whole month's business has been poor. However, Thanksgiving trade promises to be good and a large quantity of orders were placed early. According to the growers, there is plenty of stock, in first-class shape. Large quantities of chrysanthemums are in the market and move nicely. Funeral work has consumed a good share of them and few have gone to waste. Some of the stores dye the whites to make them more salable. Among the large varieties are Golden Wedding, Bonnaffon, the Turners, Enguehard, Queen, the Eatons and Patty. A large quantity of pompons are offered and these sell fast. Baby is a favorite.

The supply of roses meets all demands and includes all grades in the Killarneys, Ward and Ophelia. Fancy stock in Francis Scott Key, Sunburst,

Russell and Stanley clears fairly well. American Beauties do not move any too easily. Orchids have been plentiful. Valley is in fine shape and meets the demand. Carnations have been checked a little, the growers holding them back for the holiday trade. They are in fine condition and quite large. A few sweet peas reach the market and sell quickly. Violets are selling well, with prices higher. There is quite a demand for straw flowers at this time. Christmas greens have made their first appearance this week. Green and brown leucothoe sell satisfactorily.

"DETROIT" RETURN TRAP—the heart of the "Detroit" Systems for handling condensation.

He Wants Another "Detroit" System

A prominent florist writes:

> "I have been using a steam trap of your make these last four years, and it has given entire satisfaction. Now I have built another greenhouse, this trap is not large enough to handle all condensation. * * * Please write size and price by return mail."

"Detroit" Systems will pick up every ounce of condensation in your steam lines and turn it back to the boiler without loss of temperature—100 to 150 degrees hotter than pumps can handle it. This means a saving of from 10 to 15% in fuel alone.

Various Notes.

A good display of outdoor-grown chrysanthemums was made at the first annual flower show held in the Westminster church, November 23 and 24. John Dunbar, M. J. Keller and Horace J. Head acted as judges.

Among the recent visitors to the trade were: Milton Selinka, of Schloss Bros., New York; R. W. Pierson, of Cincinnati, who had a sample cyclamen with him; W. J. Smart, of the Knight & Struck Co., New York.

W. Addison Burnham, of the Lord & Burnham Co., New York, accompanied by Mrs. Burnham, visited his brother,

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Business last week was good and a heavy Thanksgiving trade is looked for. The glut of mums has receded somewhat. The retailers report business excellent. Social affairs have begun and decorative orders are much in evidence. The late-flowering mums, Eaton, Chadwick and Frick, now are in the market and in fine shape. There still are some late pompons in the market. Carnations are arriving in fine shape and show a big improvement in both stem and flower. White and yellow narcissi arrive in large quantities, but they are cleaned up daily. Violets and valley are plentiful and of good quality. Violets have improved considerably during the last two weeks and better prices are obtained. Roses slackened up a little in supply last week and those now arriving show an improvement in the quality of flower. Stevia is coming in heavily. Sweet peas still are scarce.

Various Notes.

Eric Frandsen, of Independence, Mo., last week lost about 35,000 chrysanthemum blooms. His mums were growing in an old house and when the temperature dropped suddenly the plants were frozen. It seems that bad luck strikes this place almost every year.

Jacob Tobler, proprietor of the Bunker Hill Greenhouses, had a misfortune last week, when a leak occurred in the boiler. He suffered a loss of all his ferns and soft-wooded stock by the gas and low temperature.

E. D. Ellsworth had the order for a large decoration at the Country Club last week. The decorations were quite unusual, bay trees and boxwoods being used with cut roses. Over 700 chrysanthemums and a number of decorative plants also were used.

Mr. Drummond, of the Kansas City Tobacco Products Co., reports that he now is receiving orders from coast to coast. Business greatly exceeds his expectations.

A visit to the greenhouses of Adolph Mohr found everything in good shape. He has a fine house of cyclamens in 5-inch and 8-inch pots, which will be just right for the holidays. A batch of poinsettias in 10-inch three-quarter pots and begonias in 6-inch pots are hard to beat for their sizes.

T. J. Noll & Co. reported that they had already booked a large number of orders for Thanksgiving. Mr. Noll was in St. Louis last week. This concern has received a new line of baskets for the holiday trade.

The George M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co. had a number of big funeral orders during the last two weeks. Mrs. Fred Lamb will resume her position as manager of the store January 1. She held this position about five years ago.

W. J. Barnes did the largest part of the decorative work at the convention hall last week for the Masonic charity ball. This line of work has been good with Mr. Barnes this fall.

John Stevens is sending in fine Eaton and Bonnaffon mums. His carnation crop for the holidays is going to be heavy and the best he ever had.

Henry Kusik reports business good, with plenty of stock at present. He is the father of a 12-pound baby boy, who arrived November 22.

Miss Jennie Murray now is able to go to the store and help with a few things. The trade hopes she soon will be as strong as ever.

Visitors last week were H. C. Neubrand, of A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn.; Thos. M. Fagan, representing A. Henderson & Co., Chicago, Ill.; Ernest F. Hoehl, of S. S. Skidelsky & Co., Philadelphia, Pa. W. J. B.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

Business improved last week. There was plenty of stock with which to do a good business; at the same time there was no glut in any one item. November 25 seemed to give everybody a taste of the Thanksgiving rush to come.

Beauties are about the same as last recorded. They meet a fair demand, and prices have taken a jump in some instances. Other roses are quite plentiful and have also advanced in price. Mums, which were more or less scarce during the first of last week, have increased in quantity. Some extra fine Dolly Dimple and Eaton mums are reaching the market from local growers.

Carnations are increasing in supply and the quality in some instances is at its best. Ward carnations as yet are few, but they are of special merit. Violets, both single and double, are in heavy demand. Orchids and valley have gone up in price; it is rather difficult to procure good valley at $7 per hundred.

Paper Whites are of good value and clear rather well. Marigolds, too, are selling rapidly; some extra fine stock reaches the market. Greens are sufficient and seem to clear rather satisfactorily.

Various Notes.

It is with regret that we report another freeze at the establishment of Jerry Brookins, of Orchard Park. The extent of the damage done runs rather high, as nearly every house was hit. It will be Christmas before Mr. Brookins will ship much to the market. His sweet peas were coming along finely.

S. D. Greene, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., called on the trade last week.

W. J. Palmer has purchased a new touring car. Emil Stuntz, of Palmer's, was on the sick list last week.

Tuesday, November 28, the management of Stroh's Quality Flower Shop opened its new store at 379 Main street, almost directly across the street from the old location. This new store has a frontage of twenty-five feet and is seventy-five feet deep. A refrigerating machine has been installed, as well as an indirect lighting system. An exceptionally fine display was made for Thanksgiving.

QUALITY IS ECONOMY

Especially is this true in the buying of Fertilizers to use as a feed for either Flowers or Vegetables.

That's why so many growers now insist on Magic Fertilizers, knowing they always get the very best.

Magic Fertilizers contain more natural plant food than other brands, because—

They are manufactured solely from Animal Blood, Animal Bone and High-grade Animal Tankage. And Pure Humus is the make-weight, or filler.

Why not buy the Best Fertilizers at Factory-to-Consumer Prices? Write today for our price list.

Also ask for booklet "Fertilization and Methods Adaptable in the Modern Greenhouse," and the famous Fertilizer Charts.

SOMETHING NEW

In presenting our newly patented Self-locking Dirt Band and Pot, we are pleased to offer something worth while. The many objections to the ordinary plain paper or glued bands urged us to produce something better. In producing the we have reached perfection. They are easy to set up, are self-locking and contain no glue to become sour and invite fungous or insect pests. They are strong and substantial and can be used wherever a pot is needed. Both the bands and pots are made of cardboard, in sizes for every requirement, and are priced as low as the paper market will allow. Send a postal for free samples and prices. We are manufacturing bands and pots at the rate of two million a week, and prompt shipments are guaranteed.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

Conditions in the Washington flower market last week showed a change for the better. The wholesalers and growers were able to clean up more closely each day. The prices did not show an advance, although on an average the returns have been better. In some lines the supply has kept pace with the demand. Chrysanthemums have lost a part of their hold on the market. Prices, which have remained fair, now have a tendency to advance.

The sale of violets has improved greatly and these are being marketed in larger quantities than heretofore, with singles the most popular. Cypripedium has made its appearance. Cattleyas have been scarce and the price has advanced slightly.

The price of roses has gone up a little, although wholesalers and growers claim that they are not bringing their actual worth. They are beginning to sell better now that chrysanthemums are nearing an end. American Beauty roses have been selling well, with the supply slightly in advance of the demand. The colored roses are showing up fine. Valley is scarce and poor. Carnations have improved both in quantity and quality and longer stemmed stock in white and colors is obtainable. The number of Paper Whites on the market is not large, but these flowers are not taking well as yet. There is practically no demand for Easter lilies.

Various Notes.

The next regular meeting of the Florists' Club of Washington, D. C., will be held Tuesday evening, December 5, at 1214 F street, northwest.

A number of Washington florists have signified their intention of entering their automobile delivery cars in the monster parade which, with appropriate pageantry, will inaugurate "America's electrical week," beginning December 2. George C. Shaffer will have two handsomely decorated cars in the parade. The Gude Bros. Co. and Fred H. Kramer also will have a number of automobiles that will measure up well as prize-winners.

A new member of the "Order of the Fordowners" is Otto Bauer, manager of the Washington Branch of the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co.

Washington's growers have been somewhat handicapped by the vagaries of the weather. New records were made last week when on one day the temperature climbed 30 degrees in five hours. The following day found the mercury dropping and there have since been several heavy frosts with light coatings of ice in the low country.

Louis E. Hoover has received his handsomely decorated delivery automobile. The body of the car is green, with the lettering and ornamentation in gold. C. E. Brooks also has had a new delivery car come out of the works this week, and this has just made its appearance.

PLANT TUBS

EVERLASTING VIRGINIA WHITE CEDAR

EVERYBODY agrees that Plant Tubs made of everlasting Virginia White Cedar will best resist rot or decay. The "Keystone" brand of White Cedar Plant Tubs are made of this celebrated wood, and these goods are painted inside and out with best oil paints, a rich green.

They are bound with heavy steel hoops for the large size, and electric-welded wire hoops (galvanized) on the small size. The large sizes are trimmed with handsome drop handles and metal feet, and have perforated, removable bottoms.

These Cedar Tubs are made in all sizes, from 24¼ inches top diameter down to 6 inches, amply large for a Bay Tree and small enough for a Hyacinth. Every one guaranteed. Booklet in colors, with prices, furnished upon request.

The Market.

Compared with that of the week preceding, business for the week ending November 25 was rather dull. There were a few social functions and funerals that provided work for some, but not enough to make anybody step lively. The retailers are well supplied with cut flowers and plants, and, according to preparations made, a good Thanksgiving is expected.

There is a perfect flood of mums—glorious yellow, pink and white flowers they are, of premier quality. Pompons, too, are in profusion; a call for any particular color or variety of these could be quickly satisfied. Roses are arriving nicely, Ophelia and Milady being particularly good property on account of their perfect blooms and long stems. Lilies are scarce, and the prices steep. The valley situation remains the same—the receipts small, with 100 sprays worth $7. Violets are more plentiful and enjoy a good sale. Desirable cyclamens are more conspicuous and there is a growing demand for other good plants.

Ample preparations are being made for a banner Christmas business, many of the retailers this year making use of artificial flowers in attractive arrangements, baskets, etc.

Various Notes.

The annual festival and dance of the Florists' Club was held Friday night, November 24. A good crowd came out and enjoyed the evening.

Last week was a busy one at the park board greenhouses. At the close of the mum show 4,000 blooms were cut and distributed to various institutions in the city.

The Fifth street store of the Whitted Floral Co. last week had a splendid window display of dinner and luncheon table decorations.

As usual, Thomas S. Lynes had a unique window of fine stock last week. Mr. Lynes does a large business in cut flowers. E. M. P.

Waukegan, Ill.—One of the dailies last week said a lot of nice things about L. Potter & Sons, who are entering upon their twentieth year in business here.

If we should build a greenhouse for ourselves we would put the best material we could into it, but it would not be any better than we put into the houses that we build for our customers.

Yes, it would be an easy matter to skimp here and substitute there, and gloss over in another place to save a little and meet the lowest bidder. We do not do business that way. Why should we cheat ourselves in order to cheat a customer?

The Sign of Superiority

The success of your greenhouse depends largely upon the results previously shown by the builder you employ.

Therefore, every grower should investigate the capabilities of the greenhouse-builder he selects for the job.

The above full iron frame, patented curved eave Metropolitan greenhouse was erected by us for Mr. W. W. Fuller, at Briar Cliff Manor, N. Y. This house is 26x100 feet, with an absolutely waterproof cement boiler cellar. It is divided into three compartments, which are separately heated and ventilated, and, being glazed with 24x24-inch glass, is extremely light. We also did the masonry.

NEWARK, N. J.

The Market.

There has been no rush among the Newark florists during the last week, although for the most part business has been fairly good. There were some flowers sold for Thanksgiving, but on the whole this did not add to the aggregate of business, as it was counterbalanced by the fact that everyone was thinking of Thanksgiving and its festivities, to the neglect of weddings and other social events. Flowers are plentiful and in large variety. Chrysanthemums continue to rule the market, while other flowers act more as fillers. Indications are, however, that chrysanthemums are at their height and that it will not be long before they will begin to wane. The flowers that now come into the market are, however, of fine quality. Carnations and sweet peas are coming into the market, but as yet there is comparatively little demand for them. Some fine violets have also been in the market during the last few days. There has been a good sale of bulbs for fall planting during the last week. A few potted geraniums for winter use have appeared.

Various Notes.

Venders of flowers are still on the street with their push carts, which is later in the season than they have been seen here before.

The S. A. Rogers Nursery Co. has a window display that is appropriate to the season. In the center of the window are some of the large varieties of chrysanthemums and at the side cornstalks nearly ten feet tall with the partly unhusked corn showing the ripe corn. In the front part of the window is a collection of fall bulbs.

Henry A. Strobell has sent out the first number of Strobell's "Floral Magazine," which is to be issued monthly hereafter. R. B. M.

Syracuse, N. Y.—The firm of Russell Bros., at Baldwinsville, has been refinanced and incorporated at $50,000, of which $30,000 is common and $20,000 preferred stock. New greenhouses have been erected and it is planned to add a nursery. Associated with W. H. and J. H. Russell, who have conducted the business for the last fifteen years, are W. F. Morris, L. R. Failing, Stephen King and William Ellis. Of the preferred stock, $17,000 will be offered for public subscription.

THE ONLY PERFECT

Liquid Putty Machine

Will last a lifetime.
$1.25 EACH

Adjustable—can and frame separate — easily cleaned. Frame all one piece, of malleable iron. More practical and more easily operated than any other.

SEAL-TIGHT LIQUID PUTTY at $1.25 per gallon

MASTICA

FOR Greenhouse Glazing

USE IT NOW.

F. O. PIERCE CO.

P. O. Box 294
NEW YORK

Mastica is elastic and tenacious, admits of expansion and contraction. Putty becomes hard and brittle. Broken glass more easily removed without breaking of other glass as occurs with hard putty.

LASTS LONGER THAN PUTTY.
EASY TO APPLY.

PELARGONIUMS.

PELARGONIUMS.
Remember we are the real distributors of Easter Greeting; the first one to advertise it,—now look at 'em. Wide awake florists know a good thing when they see it. Some are a little slow at first, but that isn't to be wondered at when one considers the "new frauds." But listen! Get in the swim for 1917. We have over 25,000 coming for November and December sales and hope to have 50,000 coming a little later, $7.50 per 100. We are making them by special machinery and the war hasn't changed the price. Our guarantee covers everything.

WOOD LABELS.

LABELS FOR NURSERYMEN AND FLORISTS.
Benjamin Chase Co., Derry Village, N. H.

Carthage, Ill.—"Trade is good, weather fine, stock never better, demand robust—that," says Robert C. Crum, "is the way conditions stack up at old Carthage at present." It would seem that Mr. Crum has considerable grounds for satisfaction and pretty good prospects for a busy as well as merry Christmas.

Mansfield, O.—Stuhldreher Bros., who have devoted their facilities to both vegetables and flowers, have expanded their business by opening a retail store on Fourth street. Clarence Stuhldreher has been taken into partnership with George and Leo Stuhldreher, and he will have charge of the store. A. C. Gardner, a decorator and designer of many years' experience, formerly of Chicago, has become associated with the firm. Instead of shipping their flowers to wholesalers in the large cities, as has been the case in the past, the firm will endeavor to dispose of its entire output here. The production of vegetables will be discontinued and a specialty made of cut flowers and plants.

NEWPORT, R. I.

A hearing was given a few days ago to Henry J. Hass on his claim of $375 for damages to his wagon and contents by a collision with a piece of the city's fire apparatus. The matter has been held for further consideration.

Charles Matley, for many years in charge of the greenhouses and grounds of the Bennett estate, has resigned to engage in the greenhouse business for himself.

Arthur W. Potter has been summoned for grand jury duty and Thomas J. Dugan and Henry S. Kesson for petit duty.

William Gray was a recent business visitor to New York.

Mr. and Mrs. William MacKay have returned from a trip to New York.

Albert J. Smythe, of Wadley & Smythe, had an exciting experience a few days ago. A horse attached to a delivery wagon belonging to the firm ran wild on Broadway. Mr. Smythe and another man started in pursuit in an automobile. As the machine was passing the horse Mr. Smythe stepped out to seize the animal, but on missing his footing he was hurled heavily to the ground. The wheels of the auto passed over his left leg and the wagon then struck the prostrate man. Mr. Smythe, although badly shaken up and bruised, escaped with no broken bones. The horse was stopped a short distance from where Mr. Smythe fell. W. H. M.

OYSTER BAY, N. Y.

The regular meeting of the Oyster Bay Horticultural Society was held in Firemen's hall, November 22, President Walker presiding. The committee having in charge the fifth annual dinner of the society made its report. It was generally agreed to hold the feast at the Oyster Bay Inn, December 12, at 7:30 sharp. D. Beaton, James Duckham and John Sorosick acted as judges of the exhibits and awarded the society's blue ribbon to Joseph Robinson, for fifty violets. A. Andrews, Robert Wright, George Hale, William Eccles and John McCulloch were elected to membership. Applications were received from William Ford, Jr., and F. F. Ayer.

Several members addressed the society on timely and instructive subjects. Exhibits scheduled for the next meeting are: Six poinsettias, twelve sweet peas and twelve narcissi. The steward sprung a surprise on the crowd in the form of eats, drinks and smokes.

John T. Ingram, Sec'y.

Terre Haute, Ind.—Living models adorned with anklet bouquets and other conceits in corsages and sprays—an idea recently exploited by The Review as material for publicity—were the means by which the management of the Rosery Flower Shop recently "put over" a most successful fall opening. Favors of roses and mums were presented to the callers, who formed a throng during the morning and afternoon. The affair was in the nature of a mum show and a miniature Japanese pagoda in ivory occupied the center of the store. K. G. Drayton now is manager of the store, having acquired a half interest. E. Reiss, the president of the new formation, calls attention to two long write-ups of the fall opening in the daily papers.

ALL questions of greenhouse water supply are solved with perfect satisfaction to the florist when he installs a

Greenhouses That Pay

The constant success of Jacobs' Greenhouses for a period of over 45 years has not been caused by any trick of fortune. It should be attributed to the efficiency of our methods and our constant endeavor to reach the point of perfection.

WE KNOW WHAT TO DO AND WHAT NOT TO DO

WHAT'S MORE—we can save money for you.

S. Jacobs & Sons
GREENHOUSE BUILDERS
1363-1381 Flushing Avenue
BROOKLYN, N. Y.

YOU MAY WANT TO SELL. BUILD SO YOU CAN SELL.

Suppose, Mr. Greenhouse Man, you want to sell your property after a few years—how about that? If it is built of Cypress, the recognized wood for greenhouse construction, you will not have to meet the objection of the proposed purchaser that the building will not last—that it is not standard-built. You will not need to go into an argument to try and convince him that the substitute wood is as good as the recognized standard wood—CYPRESS.

In other words, Cypress is so firmly established as the definitive greenhouse wood that a structure built of it is as standard as gold dollars. A Cypress greenhouse will sell—it is an asset. Everybody knows what Cypress stands for in greenhouse construction; if anybody knows what the substitute woods stand for, we would be glad to hear from him.

It seems to us worth while for you to accept the verdict of time, test and all worthy experience in greenhouse work and build of Cypress, the greenhouse wood. That is your only course for securing a real asset in the undertaking.

If you built with anything but Cypress and ever want to sell, you would need to hunt around and find some purchaser who was wholly ignorant of the universal standard practice in greenhouse construction—which is Cypress from ridge-pole to foundation, with "Pecky" posts, benches and standards. You wouldn't be able to sell to anybody who knows Cypress or who knows anybody else who knows. These suggestions are worth while, even though you don't expect to sell out. They simply mean making the most of your investment, for your own sake.

Think them over.

STIR UP THE ANIMALS

In the meantime, you will do well to send us your compliments regarding the Cypress Pocket Library, and draw on these 42 free volumes for what you can use. They're tremendously free—a postal or letter to our office will be followed by a noise that sounds like somebody sending the booklets you ask for—in a hurry. Try it pretty soon. Vol. 1 treats of the wood in general and contains a list of the 42 volumes. Vol. 3 is the GREENHOUSE BOOK. Vol. 36 is a book about home Carpentry; Vol. 37 is the big Silo Book.

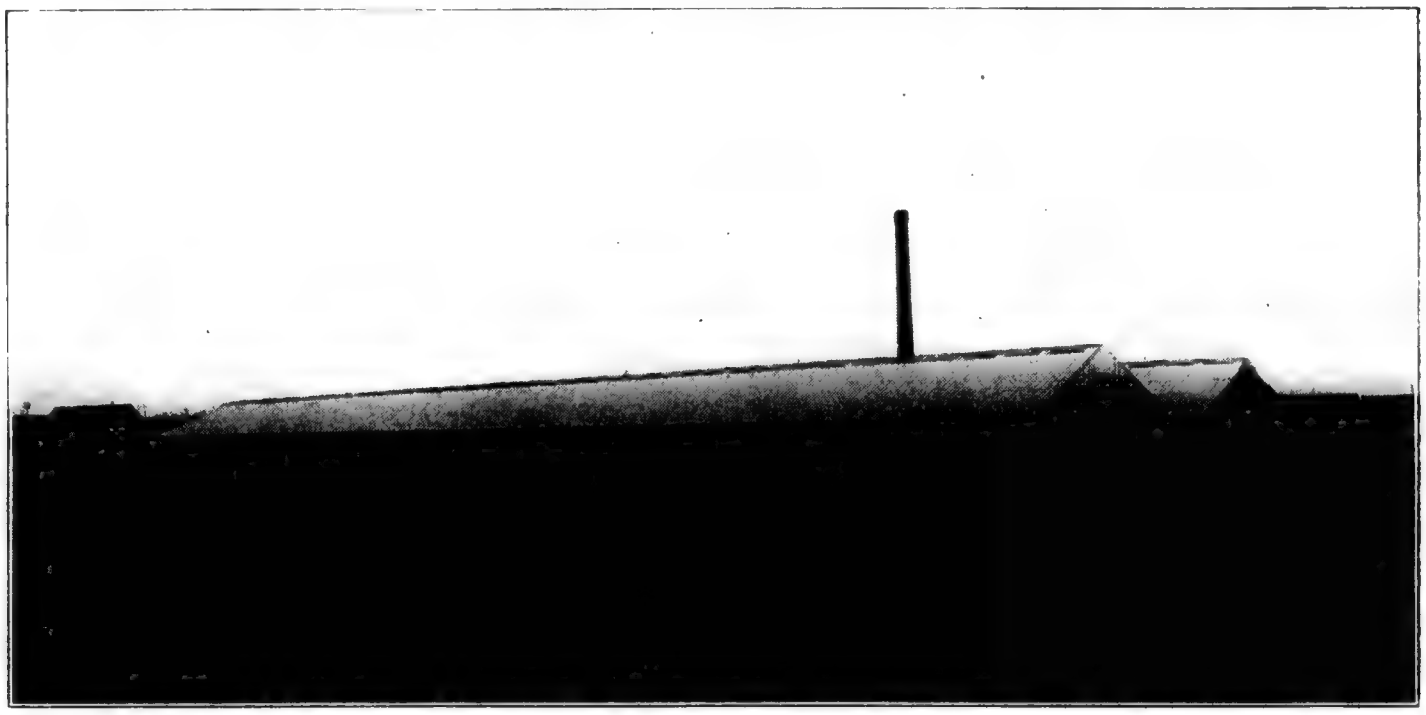
You Won't Guess Wrong

This is the new AGMCO range of the Albert F. Amling Co., Maywood, Ill.

You know half-way measures find no favor in the eyes of the alert, progressive business men and growers that compose the corporation of the Albert F. Amling Co. They will not touch a proposition unless they are thoroughly satisfied it is the best they can buy with a brainy use of good money. But when they are satisfied they go at it with a will. That's how the Company attained to its present enviable position in the trade, and why it gave to the American Greenhouse Mfg. Co., last year, the largest single order in the history of the trade—an order for the erection of 300,000 square feet of glass.



You keen growers know what this means—you, too, are alert, progressive business men. You will select your houses as you do your stock—select the best.

How about the AGMCO catalogue? Did you get it? No? Then just say the word and the book is yours!

WIDE GREENHOUSES

Furnished by us for D. F. Harrison Co., of Kankakee, Ill.

It is only a little over a year ago that the site of this greenhouse range was nothing but a big cornfield.

There are now two 65 x 450 ft. greenhouses and a large concrete boiler and packing room.

Think of these two mammoth greenhouses filled with cucumber vines the year around, and think of the fine prices you get for cucumbers in the winter season.

When it comes to building big greenhouses substantially and economically, we certainly can show you how to do it, and we are always willing and anxious to co-operate with you.

Just drop us a line and let us give you sketches and estimates, free of charge.

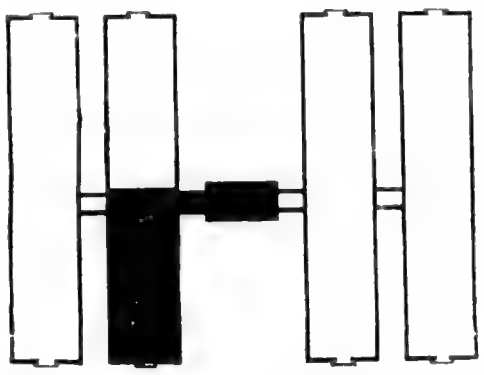
INDEX TO ADVERTISEMENTS AND TABLE OF CONTENTS—PAGES TWO AND THREE

This grower started with one house, 40 x 100 The plan below shows how future houses will be added.

Building with an Eye for the Future

WHEN Cyrus McCormick came up out of Virginia, 70 years ago, and built his first factory in Chicago, he had an eye for the future.

He saw that the great West was bound to be a vast wheat and corn growing section, and that the harvesting machinery that was made at a point where distribution was most central, would get the most business.



The mammoth International Harvester Company is the present-day result of Mr. McCormick's looking ahead.

When you plan your first greenhouse, or start a new range, plan it with a far-seeing eye to the future.

Picture in your mind how you will build your houses to economically take care of ten times your present needs.

Based on ten, you can make it one hundred times the size and still preserve operating economy.

In the last ten years the greenhouse business has moved with tremendous strides. So fast, in fact, that it's been a bit difficult to keep pace with its changes.

The dark part shows the present houses. The light parts as it will expand into a perfectly balanced layout. Several more houses could be added on each side and still be economical.

The meeting of conditions in different parts of the country differs widely.

That's why we have established six branch offices and three factories to best meet them.

Each branch manager is a trained greenhouse expert, who with his assistants is continually making a careful study of conditions in their territory.

Constantly are these branches kept in touch with the main office, and the experts at the factories.

In addition to their immediate knowledge, they have the advantage of this concern's half century in business, to back up their recommendations to you.

Their help should be invaluable to you in planning with you for the future.

Through them our entire organization of experts is at your disposal.

Let us urge you to take every advantage of it.

MAGNOLIA FACTS

¶Yes, Mr. Florist, be particular as to what kind of Magnolia Leaves you buy now, under the present conditions.

¶Dye colors have advanced from 1000% to 2000%; preparing chemicals have exactly doubled in prices since the war began, as have also the paper cartons. In spite of this, we are in position to furnish you with first-class Magnolia Leaves through your wholesaler at a small advance in comparison with the above.

¶We guarantee that the quality of our leaves is as good now as they were before the war, and that they are prepared fully, regardless of the above-stated high prices of the materials.

¶You fool yourself if you buy the cheaper grade of leaves, as they will become mildewed and they will dry out shortly after the boxes are opened. Our goods are sold by every leading wholesale florist in the United States and Canada, and they have stood the test for the past six years.

¶A magnolia leaf is only worth using if it has been fully preserved, but NOT by a cheap process, which enables others to sell the leaves cheaper by a few cents. You pay these few cents about ten or fifteen times over, when you consider the poor value of these goods.

THE MOST REMARKABLE VALUE EVER OFFERED

50 HANDLE BASKETS $10.00

This is a Special Christmas Offer we shall never repeat—it is made only to introduce the Johnson line and awaken the entire florists' trade to realize the wonderful values we are giving.

This "Best-of-All" assortment contains 50 Handle Baskets such as every florist needs for Christmas sales—50 Baskets, complete with liners. The height averages 14 to 22 inches. Some are staple styles, can be used the year around; others are finished in the best Christmas effects—just the thing for Ruscus, Boxwood, Holly, Statice and other Christmas stock. Ten of the 50 are open work. Altogether it is a value we believe no florist will feel he can afford to overlook—it will be our greatest ad.

PLANT BASKETS

Our Plant Baskets have been so well received that they are now a very important feature of our Christmas business. Last year we offered only one style in three sizes. This year we have about twenty-five different numbers. All are first-class, both as to style of basket and filling.

Nothing but highly-colored well-grown stock is used, such as Dracaenas in variety, Crotons, Pandanus, Ferns, etc. On account of being filled early and becoming established, they are bound to give you and your customer satisfaction. We cannot recommend them too highly.

Many of the baskets and window boxes are in two-tone effect.

All baskets have zinc (not tin) liners.

NEPHROLEPIS JOHN WANAMAKER
Introduced August, 1915

The Wanamaker Boston has more than made good. Everyone who has received early shipments from us has been greatly pleased with the variety and repeat orders have been coming in daily. We have a very large stock.

A "sport" from Nephrolepis Scholzelii, with longer, narrower, gracefully drooping fronds. It is not so compact in growth as Scholzelii, and therefore does not decay in the center, and is a durable house fern. It is a rapid grower, making an abundance of fronds, and is quite distinct from any other Nephrolepis.

The following prices are for immediate and spring delivery:

2¼-inch pots, strong plants.....$8 per 100; $75 per 1,000
4-inch pots, strong plants.....$25 per 100; $225 per 1,000
6-inch pots, strong plants.....$50 per 100
8-inch pots, strong plants.....$12 and $15 per doz.

CAN CREATE CALL FOR CALCEOLARIA

Next to novelty, variety is most sought for by the public in plants and flowers. It is the part of policy, as well as the path to prosperity, to revive old favorites rather than to kill off present ones by making them too common. People often get "too much of a good thing," even in flowers. Here is a good plant that is deserving of greater popularity.

PLANTS, like people, have their ups and downs in public estimation, their times of popularity and their times of obscurity. The varieties of plants that are now in great demand may be friendless and forgotten in the near future, and waiting in vain for a purchaser. The plants that now are the "ins" may soon be the "outs," and florists who would always have salable stock must be as watchful as politicians in regard to the ever-changing opinions of the public.

Sometimes it is easy to explain why a plant—or a person—has fallen into disrepute. The plant—like many persons—has been guilty of some sort of misbehavior, or some new favorite has rudely pushed it to one side and taken its place in the limelight. In the case of some other plants—the calceolaria, for instance—the reason for their downfall is not so clearly apparent.

Has Seen Better Days.

For the calceolaria certainly is not so popular as it once was, and probably not so popular as it deserves to be, since it is both showy and attractive and seems to be well adapted for use as a decorative plant in the show house, the conservatory or the home. There may be various reasons for its dethronement; a combination of circumstances may have acted against it, but one well-informed grower says the chief reason is that the calceolaria, though not really difficult to grow, is easily ruined by neglect. That statement may not mean that the plant is especially sensitive and peevish about the treatment it receives, but may mean simply that there are certain reasonable attentions which it absolutely demands, as any self-respecting plant would.

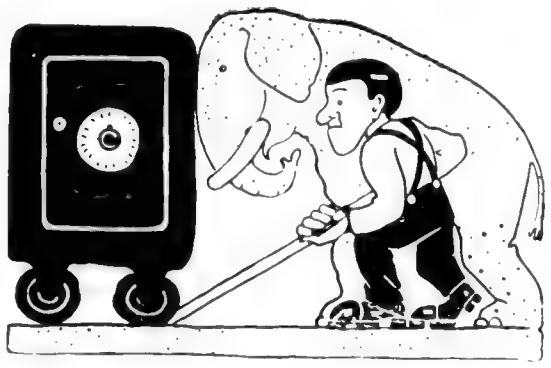
But, though the florist, in trying to select the best sellers, must be largely controlled by the public whims, he may also do much to control those same whims, like the woman who skillfully manages her husband, or thinks she does, though outwardly pretending to obey his slightest wish. It is frequently profitable for the florist thus to exert an influence on the market. Why, then, should he not aid in creating a market for calceolarias, if at the same time he would help, rather than hinder, the sale of his other plants? Why should he not grow a batch of calceolarias from seed, or purchase a few of the young plants for retailing, since he would thus increase the variety and attractiveness of his entire stock and stimulate the market?

Great Variety, But Few Varieties.

In this matter of introducing greater variety and relieving monotony the calceolaria is peculiarly serviceable, because it is odd and unique in appearance and because a package or two of the seeds, if obtained from a reliable firm, will produce many different types of beautiful, pocket-like flowers, richly and variously colored, spotted and blotched. Perhaps it would have been proper to say "slipper-like" flowers, instead of "pocket-like," since the name of the plant is formed from the Latin word "calceolus," meaning a "slipper."

In this connection it may be interesting to note that present-day calceolarias, though so diversified in appearance, are not easily divisible into separate varieties or species, and modern growers make little or no attempt at such division. In other words, calceolarias, as commonly grown, show great variety but few distinct varieties. They have been hybridized and hybridized, accidentally and intentionally, in the greenhouse and in the garden, until all clear trace of their ancestry has been lost. They are an inextricably mixed race. Perhaps you have known of some dog which, though an excellent and lovable animal, belonged to no particular breed, but was "just dog." Likewise, many of the best calceolarias are just calceolarias.

A Place in the Family.



Botanically speaking, however, there are, or were, about 200 distinct species of calceolarias, the progenitors of the present commercial sorts. Hence the botanist who tries to classify calceolaria plants correctly, both scientifically and practically, is sure to find himself in a maze of difficulties. So, also, the person who would undertake to state just what kind of calceolaria is shown in the accompanying illustration, and would attempt to give it an exact name and place in the calceolaria family, would only be courting trouble. Still, if the plant in the picture had a string of high-sounding names stretching four or five inches in length, and if its genealogy could be traced directly to a plant that was brought over in the Mayflower, it could scarcely bear a denser mass of blooms.

As an Attractive and Showy Pot Plant the Calceolaria is Not Easily Surpassed.

The calceolaria family comprises a shrubby section as well as a herbaceous one, but only the herbaceous plants are cultivated to any extent in America. The shrubby forms, though great favorites in many European gardens, do not flourish outdoors in the hot American summers and are less orna-

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

CAN CREATE CALL FOR CALCEOLARIA

Next to novelty, variety is most sought for by the public in plants and flowers. It is the part of policy, as well as the path to prosperity, to revive old favorites rather than to kill off present ones by making them too common. People often get "too much of a good thing," even in flowers. Here is a good plant that is deserving of greater popularity.

mental in the greenhouse than are the herbaceous sorts.

Growing the Plants.

As already intimated, the herbaceous kinds are generally grown from seeds. The seeds are extremely small; therefore, after being sown, they may be gently pressed down into the compost, but should either be left uncovered or covered only slightly. A piece of glass may be placed on the top of the seed pan, and afterward removed by degrees. Opinions differ widely as to the best time to sow the seeds. They may, indeed, be sown any time from early spring until late summer, but the seedlings are easily injured by the hot midsummer weather. Hence one grower asserts that even if the seeds are sown as late as September, the plants can be bloomed the following May and with less risk of failure than from earlier sowings. Another grower advises sowing not later than April, so as to give the seedlings a good start before the scorching heat arrives.

A temperature of about 60 degrees is favorable for the germination of the seeds. During the summer and early fall the plants may be grown in coldframes or in a cool greenhouse, preferably with a northern exposure. In winter a greenhouse temperature of 40 degrees at night, with a rise of 10 or 15 degrees in the daytime and with little or no shade, is suitable. They dislike strong heat at any stage of their growth.

The seedlings should first be transplanted into 2-inch or 3-inch pots. In early winter the plants should be removed to 5-inch pots, and about March 1 they may be placed in 7-inch or 8-inch pots, for flowering. The compost for the seed pans and for the first potting should be extremely light, consisting of equal parts of fibrous loam, sand and leaf-mold. For the later pottings the soil should be a light, somewhat lumpy loam, with a fourth or fifth of well decayed manure; some sand must be added if the soil is at all heavy. One practical grower recommends a soil consisting of equal parts of fibrous loam, fernroot, leaf-mold, sand and dried cow manure. The plants may be fed with manure water after they are well rooted in their flowering pots.

RETAIL STORE MANAGEMENT

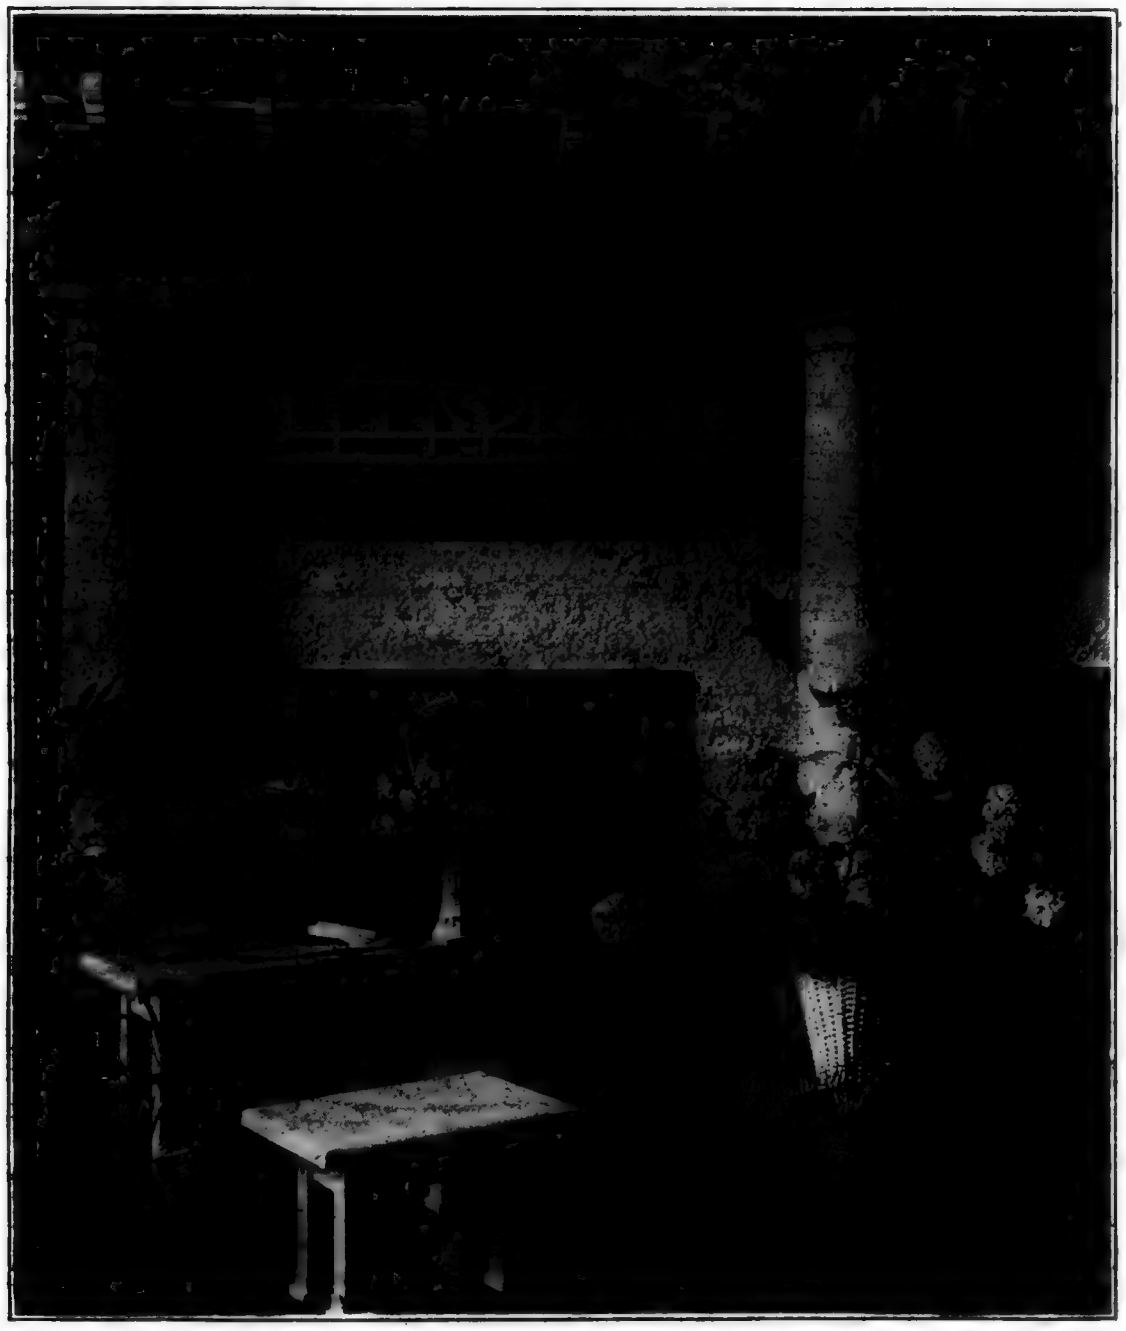
WHAT THE LEADERS IN THE TRADE ARE DOING

"PLEASE OMIT FLOWERS."

Every now and then the "Please omit flowers" agitation breaks out, but usually it is short-lived and dies all the quicker for lack of opposition. Occasionally, however, a champion of flowers appears, as in the following instance, a clipping from the Macon News sent in by the Idle Hour Nursery Co.:

SENSE AND SENTIMENT.

In a recent issue of the London Times the following advertisement appears:



"By the special desire of the late Clement Leigh Watson-Smith friends are requested not to send flowers at his funeral, but in lieu thereof a donation to the Faversham Cottage hospital would be appreciated by his family."

The obvious comment which the average person would be inclined to make with regard to this unusual request would be that the money undoubtedly would do more good if donated to the hospital instead of being spent for flowers. But is there not another side to the question? Are we becoming so utilitarian in these latter days that our criteria of values are to be thus weighed and measured with such nice calculation?

The custom of bringing a few flowers to the bier of our beloved dead is one which, whatever its origin, expresses a sentiment which finds echo deep in the common heart of man. The parting from a loved one through death is a universal experience, one which sooner or later brings us face to face with the one insoluble mystery of life. Faith alone solves it in keeping with the longings of the human heart. Faith upholds and strengthens the fragile and tender hopes of love when love faces the cold and lifeless form of one beloved. Somehow there is an involuntary groping after some tangible expression of all this, and what more beautiful and appropriate form could it take than the bringing of an offering of a few fragrant blossoms to his grave? And why should such a perfect expression of love be marred by the utilitarian consideration as to whether the pittance spent might not be put to better use?

So, in spite of the apparent good sense of the gentleman's "special desire," we shall bring to the bier of each departing friend, as in turn they leave us through the coming years, an offering in keeping with the tender sentiment which prompts it—whether it be good sense or not.

This not only is an excellent answer to the "Please omit flowers" propaganda, but it is a splendid boost for the use of flowers at funerals, for there is nothing could take their place.

Customers' Corner in the New Circle Flower Store, Indianapolis.

THE CIRCLE FLOWER STORE.

The Circle Flower Store, one of the finest flower establishments in Indianapolis, as shown in the two accompanying illustrations, was opened to the public Thanksgiving day. This was a pleasant holiday surprise, as the announcement had been for December 2. Thousands of people showed their appreciation and to the visitors were presented clever little folders, in which were printed poetical descriptions of flowers.

Upon entering the store, one steps into a veritable garden, with flowers, birds and convenient garden seats. There is a background of palms and ferns, a pergola and a delicate blue overhead, all of which make realistic the scene interpreted. One becomes aware, on looking around, that the owners of the store love beauty for beauty's sake; that they strive for no display, but let the simplicity of the natural work its own effects. The appointments were selected with discriminating taste and the appeal is that of simple elegance and refinement.

In addition to flowers, the store will carry a complete line of baskets, vases, bouquet holders, ribbons, pottery, garden furniture and novelties. The offices on the second floor, as tastefully arranged as the store below, will be shared by the G. M. McDougall Co., landscape architects.

A. P. Reynolds, the manager and owner of the Circle Flower Store, said:

"In completing this store, we, Mrs. Reynolds and I, are realizing an ambition we have had for a long time. We have wanted a shop that was not a shop—just a beautiful place—as nearly like nature as human hands could make it, where people could come and wander and admire as in some old-fashioned garden in days gone by. We shall be well pleased if the people will like it for what it represents in flowers—beauty."

E. E. T.

FLOWERS FOR THE SICK.

It is quite common to see in florists' stores such signs as "Tokens of Sympathy," "Emblems of Condolence" and similar suggestions in floral offerings for the departed, but seldom is attention called to the idea of sending flowers to the sick, who rarely, should they be fortunate enough to recover, forget the kindly act. On the other hand, if the sick pass away their last moments may be cheered by the presence of a few flowers.

From a practical viewpoint this item of business can be made profitable. While the first cost may be small compared with that of a funeral piece, the flowers may remain vivid in the memory of the patient after recovery, whereas the obituary token is soon forgotten.

This reminds me of a dialogue I once read purporting to be held between an American sailor, who was on his way to deposit a wreath on the grave of a comrade in the cemetery at Shanghai, and a Chinaman, whom he met in the cemetery. The Chinaman was carrying a pot of rice.

"Hello, John," said the tar, "where are you going with that?"

Ruth.

"I takee put on glave of my flien," said the Chinaman.

"Ho! Ho!" laughed the sailor, "and when do you expect your friend to come up and eat it?"

"All time samee your flien come up and smellee your flowers," replied John.

In the course of my experience I have witnessed some remarkable returns to convalescence, often, I am sure, through the presence of a bunch of flowers, which possibly recalled to the sick some happy recollections and inspired the hope and determination to join the donor at the earliest possible moment. Not every sick person has thoughtful friends who can afford to brighten up the sick room with flowers, and here the far-seeing florist has splendid opportunity to advertise his business and name by sending his surplus stock to the local hospital, instead of consigning it to the garbage barrel, a dead loss. He can send it to the hospital with his card, a living reminder, for it would invariably find its way through the proper channel and fulfill a twofold mission. No one is more appreciative and reciprocative than the average patient. There are exceptions, true, but I am convinced that in the sick chamber many lasting resolutions are made, many of which could be the continued use of flowers.

THE ULLRICH STORE.

The illustrations on page 19 show the store of the Ullrich Floral Co., Tiffin, O., as it appeared on the day of its second annual chrysanthemum show, November 25. E. J. Ullrich describes the affair as a great success and it got a column of write-up in the local daily.

mental in the greenhouse than are the herbaceous sorts.

Growing the Plants.

As already intimated, the herbaceous kinds are generally grown from seeds. The seeds are extremely small; therefore, after being sown, they may be gently pressed down into the compost, but should either be left uncovered or covered only slightly. A piece of glass may be placed on the top of the seed pan, and afterward removed by degrees. Opinions differ widely as to the best time to sow the seeds. They may, indeed, be sown any time from early spring until late summer, but the seedlings are easily injured by the hot midsummer weather. Hence one grower asserts that even if the seeds are sown as late as September, the plants can be bloomed the following May and with less risk of failure than from earlier sowings. Another grower advises sowing not later than April, so as to give the seedlings a good start before the scorching heat arrives.

A temperature of about 60 degrees is favorable for the germination of the seeds. During the summer and early fall the plants may be grown in coldframes or in a cool greenhouse, preferably with a northern exposure. In winter a greenhouse temperature of 40 degrees at night, with a rise of 10 or 15 degrees in the daytime and with little or no shade, is suitable. They dislike strong heat at any stage of their growth.

The seedlings should first be transplanted into 2-inch or 3-inch pots. In early winter the plants should be removed to 5-inch pots, and about March 1 they may be placed in 7-inch or 8-inch pots, for flowering. The compost for the seed pans and for the first potting should be extremely light, consisting of equal parts of fibrous loam, sand and leaf-mold. For the later pottings the soil should be a light, somewhat lumpy loam, with a fourth or fifth of well decayed manure; some sand must be added if the soil is at all heavy. One practical grower recommends a soil consisting of equal parts of fibrous loam, fern-root, leaf-mold, sand and dried cow manure. The plants may be fed with manure water after they are well rooted in their flowering pots.

RETAIL STORE MANAGEMENT

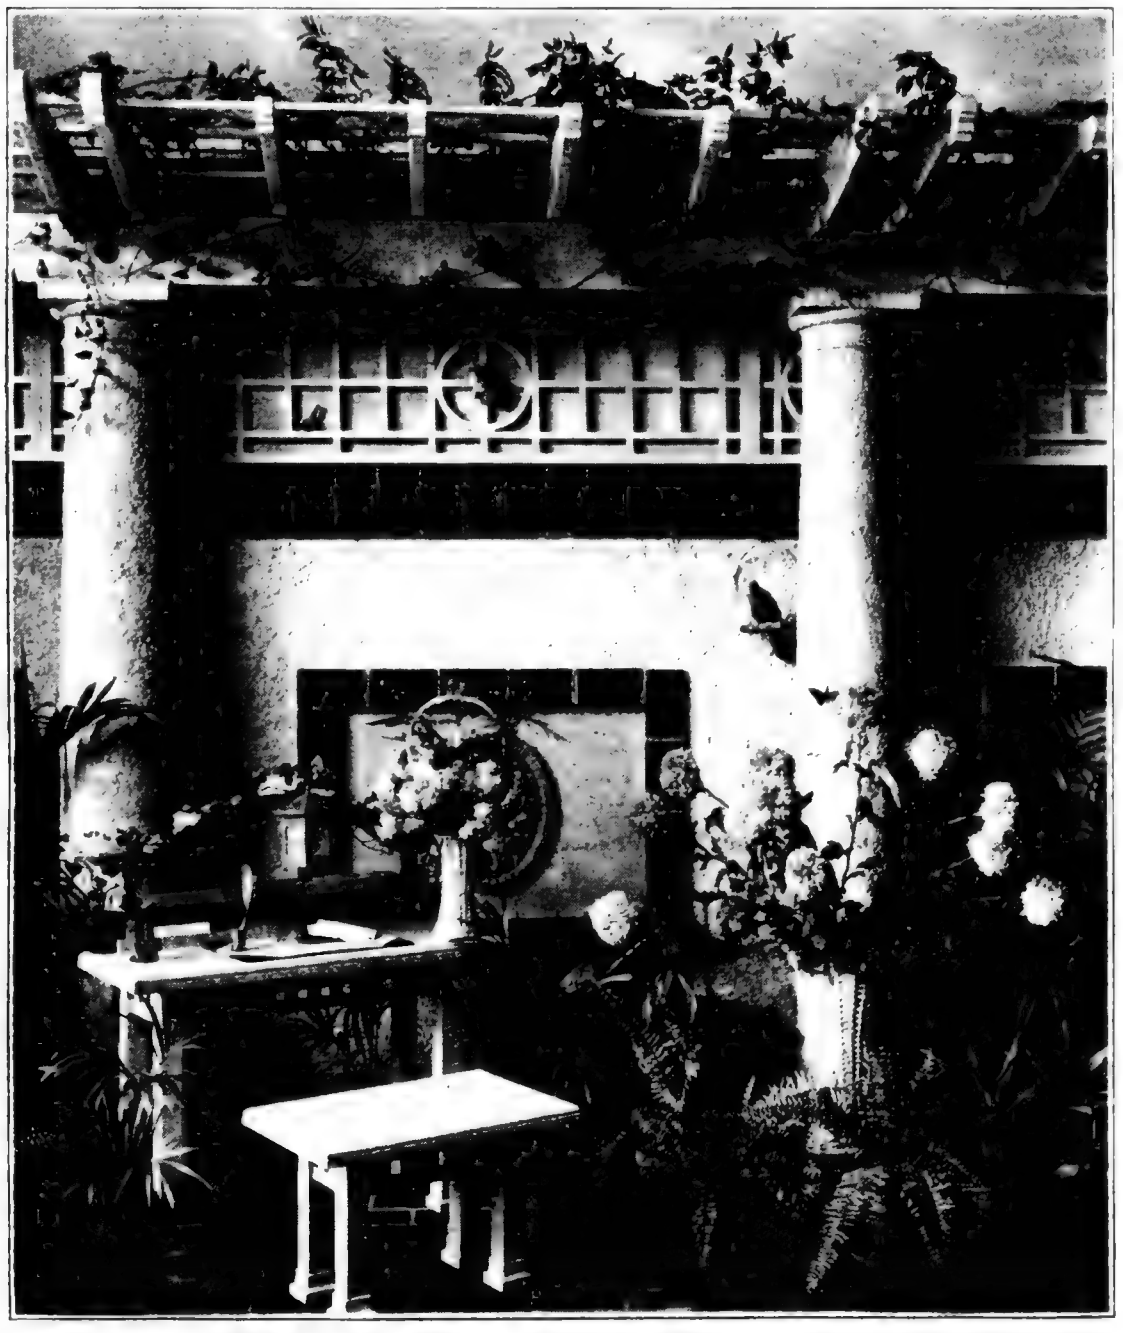
WHAT THE LEADERS IN THE TRADE ARE DOING

"PLEASE OMIT FLOWERS."

Every now and then the "Please omit flowers" agitation breaks out, but usually it is short-lived and dies all the quicker for lack of opposition. Occasionally, however, a champion of flowers appears, as in the following instance, a clipping from the Macon News sent in by the Idle Hour Nursery Co.:

SENSE AND SENTIMENT.

In a recent issue of the London Times the following advertisement appears:



"By the special desire of the late Clement Leigh Watson-Smith friends are requested not to send flowers at his funeral, but in lieu thereof a donation to the Faversham Cottage hospital would be appreciated by his family."

The obvious comment which the average person would be inclined to make with regard to this unusual request would be that the money undoubtedly would do more good if donated to the hospital instead of being spent for flowers. But is there not another side to the question? Are we becoming so utilitarian in these latter days that our criteria of values are to be thus weighed and measured with such nice calculation?

The custom of bringing a few flowers to the bier of our beloved dead is one which, whatever its origin, expresses a sentiment which finds echo deep in the common heart of man. The parting from a loved one through death is a universal experience, one which sooner or later brings us face to face with the one insoluble mystery of life. Faith alone solves it in keeping with the longings of the human heart. Faith upholds and strengthens the fragile and tender hopes of love when love faces the cold and lifeless form of one beloved. Somehow there is an involuntary groping after some tangible expression of all this, and what more beautiful and appropriate form could it take than the bringing of an offering of a few fragrant blossoms to his grave? And why should such a perfect expression of love be marred by the utilitarian consideration as to whether the pittance spent might not be put to better use?

So, in spite of the apparent good sense of the gentleman's "special desire," we shall bring to the bier of each departing friend, as in turn they leave us through the coming years, an offering in keeping with the tender sentiment which prompts it—whether it be good sense or not.

This not only is an excellent answer to the "Please omit flowers" propaganda, but it is a splendid boost for the use of flowers at funerals, for there is nothing could take their place.

THE CIRCLE FLOWER STORE.

The Circle Flower Store, one of the finest flower establishments in Indianapolis, as shown in the two accompanying illustrations, was opened to the public Thanksgiving day. This was a pleasant holiday surprise, as the announcement had been for December 2. Thousands of people showed their appreciation and to the visitors were presented clever little folders, in which were printed poetical descriptions of flowers.

Upon entering the store, one steps into a veritable garden, with flowers, birds and convenient garden seats. There is a background of palms and ferns, a pergola and a delicate blue overhead, all of which make realistic the scene interpreted. One becomes aware, on looking around, that the owners of the store love beauty for beauty's sake; that they strive for no display, but let the simplicity of the natural work its own effects. The appointments were selected with discriminating taste and the appeal is that of simple elegance and refinement.

In addition to flowers, the store will carry a complete line of baskets, vases, bouquet holders, ribbons, pottery, garden furniture and novelties. The offices on the second floor, as tastefully arranged as the store below, will be shared by the G. M. McDougall Co., landscape architects.

A. P. Reynolds, the manager and owner of the Circle Flower Store, said: "In completing this store, we, Mrs. Reynolds and I, are realizing an ambition we have had for a long time. We have wanted a shop that was not a shop—just a beautiful place—as nearly like nature as human hands could make it, where people could come and wander and admire as in some old-fashioned garden in days gone by. We shall be well pleased if the people will like it for what it represents in flowers—beauty."

FLOWERS FOR THE SICK.

It is quite common to see in florists' stores such signs as "Tokens of Sympathy," "Emblems of Condolence" and similar suggestions in floral offerings for the departed, but seldom is attention called to the idea of sending flowers to the sick, who rarely, should they be fortunate enough to recover, forget the kindly act. On the other hand, if the sick pass away their last moments may be cheered by the presence of a few flowers.

From a practical viewpoint this item of business can be made profitable. While the first cost may be small compared with that of a funeral piece, the flowers may remain vivid in the memory of the patient after recovery, whereas the obituary token is soon forgotten.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Buddleia Asiatica.

Buddleia Asiatica, the white, sweet-scented buddleia, commonly called the white winter lilac, now is opening its flowers. It makes a most welcome addition to the list of Christmas-flowering plants. It may be true that scarlet plants are preferred at the holidays, but no other Christmas plant has the delightful fragrance of this buddleia, a fragrance which equals that of Olea fragrans and Daphne odorata. Unlike these two plants, however, the buddleia is of easy propagation and a rapid grower. Plants from spring-rooted cuttings now are in 8-inch pots and are bushy and three to four feet in height, each carrying scores of white racemes. A temperature of 50 degrees at night brings this into flower for Christmas, but it can be kept 10 degrees cooler and flowered as late as mid-February.

Propagating Begonias.

It is about the right time now to get in a good batch of leaves of any of the popular winter-flowering begonias. Place clean, sharp sand in the cutting bench. If too fine, add some fine coal ashes, coal or charcoal to give porosity. Either break or cut off the leaf stalk—it makes little difference which. Water well as soon as benched and give the necessary shade. A steady bottom heat is necessary for successful propagation and this should be 80 to 85 degrees. Plants propagated from leaves are much more vigorous than those raised from cuttings later in the season. In addition to Gloire de Lorraine, Glory of Cincinnati, Melior and Mrs. Peterson, the large-flowered English hybrids, which far outclass all other begonias in size of flowers and brilliancy, can also be increased from leaves in the same way. Of these latter Mrs. Heal, optima, Apricot and aureana are a fine quartet.

Early Tulips and Narcissi.

I doubt whether there is any money in tulips and narcissi for Christmas, as so large a percentage will come short, stemmed or blind, but in January they sell well. The present is a suitable time to house a batch of any of the earliest tulips and narcissi, but be sure they are well rooted and have made two or three inches of top growth. Draw the tulips up in a warm, dark case, but give the narcissi a position below a bench in a warm house. La Reine and White Hawk are the best early tulips for forcing, while the French-grown narcissi force much earlier than the Dutch stock, although they carry smaller flowers.

Freesias.

Christmas freesias are always splendid sellers. To have them on time, the plants will now need 55 degrees at night. Give them a light bench or shelves, if possible, and an abundant water supply. Our plants showed flower spikes before Thanksgiving. They are grown in 8-inch and 10-inch pans and average thirty inches in height.

Speciosum Lilies.

Speciosum lilies have just come to hand from Japan and should be planted outdoors or potted with as little delay as possible. When planting them out, cover the bulbs to a depth of nine inches, placing some sharp sand above as well as below them. A common blunder is made in planting lilies too near the surface. Such bulbs speedily fritter away their strength when hot, dry weather sets in, unless well watered. An ideal manner of planting hardy lilies is to dot them in rhododendron beds. The soil in these suits them and the leaf mulch prevents the soil from drying out.

If wanted for indoor work, the bulbs may be planted in boxes six to eight inches deep, or in pots. I prefer to use 8-inch pots, which will hold four, five or six bulbs each, according to the size of the bulbs. Place the pots in a coldframe, under a bench in a cool greenhouse or in a cellar. It is well to state that these lilies cannot be flowered for Easter or even for Memorial day, but will be of great value from the end of June until September. For earlier bloom cold storage bulbs, which start more quickly, must be used.

Deciduous Shrubs for Forcing.

No time should be lost in lifting and potting carefully any field-grown stock of lilacs, deutzias, laburnums, malus, prunus, etc. While it is customary to depend on imported pot-grown plants of these shrubs for forcing, any stock which has been forced and planted out a couple of years in the field, if lifted carefully with good fibers and some ball, will force just as well as the Dutch-grown, imported pot plants and will often give better results. As this stock should not be started for some time yet, store it in a cold, frost-proof pit until it is wanted.

CARNATIONS

STEMS SLENDER AND WEAK.

Kindly inform us as to the advisability of using bone meal for our carnations. They are growing nicely, but something seems to be lacking in the soil, as the stems are slender and weak. We are applying plenty of liquid cow manure, but that does not strengthen the stems sufficiently.

T. B. A.—N. C.

Liquid cow manure is not the proper thing for producing strong stems on your carnations. If your plants had good stems, the liquid manure would increase the size of the blooms and promote a strong growth, but in your case there is something lacking either in your soil or in your cultural methods. Possibly your soil is too light and is deficient in potash. In that case an application of wood ashes or ground limestone might remedy the trouble. Perhaps you have run your houses too warm and neglected to ventilate sufficiently, or you may have kept too much shade on the glass. Any of these things would have the result of which you complain. Cut out the liquid manure for a while and work along the lines suggested.

A. F. J. B.

MAY BE ESCAPING GAS.

I have a strong, healthy-looking batch of Enchantress carnations. The plants have received the usual care, with a night temperature of 45 to 50 degrees. Now, while the blooms are large, they take on a wrinkled, sleepy appearance when open. Sometimes the flower looks well on the plant, but as soon as it is cut it goes to sleep. Moreover, the stem could be stronger. Will you please advise me as to the cause of the trouble and how to avoid it? A. S.—Ill.

If your carnations are making a strong growth and are growing in a temperature of 50 degrees or less, they should have good keeping qualities. The stems should be stronger, unless your soil is deficient in lime. A light dressing of lime, watered in, should correct that. See if you can find escaping gas around the place. That would have the effect you complain of.

A. F. J. B.

YELLOWS YET UNCONTROLLABLE.

Please identify the disease on the carnations enclosed herewith. When the plants were benched a few of them showed yellowish spots, which later spread and sometimes formed white spots. Some of this trouble appeared last year, but this year it is spreading over the entire house. The soil is a clay loam and sod, with about one-fourth well rotted cow manure. I have maintained an even temperature and the ventilation has been good. I have sprayed the plants with nicotine extract and Bordeaux mixture, but this does not seem to have checked the disease. G. E. Y.—Okla.

The disease you complain of is the carnation yellows, formerly known as stigmonose, bacteriosis, etc. There is a great difference in opinion as to the cause of this disease. It is under investigation at the present time at one of the experiment stations as well as on commercial places. You cannot effect a cure by external applications; that is why the Bordeaux and the nicotine had no effect on the disease. Keep the soil a trifle on the dry side and avoid fertilizers that will tend to produce a soft growth, such as liquid cow manure, sheep manure, nitrate of soda, etc. Use more lime and bone meal, if your plants really need feeding. Toward spring you can use a liberal manure mulch without harmful results.

A. F. J. B.

CATCH SNAILS AT NIGHT.

Large snails have made their home in three or four of our carnation and sweet pea benches. They chew everything in sight. We have tried nicotine extract, Slug Shot—in fact, everything we could think of—without results. Do you know of an effective exterminator?

D. & S.—O.

If you have tried all the forms of poisoned bait without effect, the only remedy left is to pick the snails by hand. As they feed at night, you will have little difficulty in catching them, if they are the large kind. Get a strong bull's-eye lantern and go along the beds where they are in the habit of feeding, and you will be able to pick them up and destroy them. Before resorting to this, I would suggest that you try spraying the plants thoroughly with arsenate of lead.

A. F. J. B.

CASE OF CARNATION YELLOWS.

I am sending you some carnation leaves that seem to be badly affected with some disease. The trouble started several weeks ago and is spreading rapidly. Kindly inform me what the disease is and give a remedy for it.

F. F. O.—O.

Your carnations are troubled with the disease called carnation yellows. The cause of this disease is not definitely known and no effective method of control as yet has been worked out. The American Carnation Society has taken the matter in hand and a solution no doubt will be reached in due time. For the present, I suggest that you follow a moderate course in your culture. Avoid anything that will tend to produce a soft growth. Run the soil just a trifle drier than you ordinarily would and give the plants plenty of ventilation, along with a cool temperature. Avoid those fertilizers that are high in nitrogen until the sun gets stronger, towards spring.

This disease always is worse during the dull winter months than in the early fall, when the sun is stronger. When propagating avoid those plants which show much of this disease, because, while the young shoots may not show much of it and the plants may seem to outgrow it in the summer, the disease surely will reappear the next winter.

A. F. J. B.

ROSETTE, WONDER, BEACON.

I am sending you under separate cover some carnation blooms and would like to have you tell me the cause of their condition. The flowers have the appearance of being burned around the edges. Some of them open fully, but others appear sleepy and do not expand completely. The plants are grown under the approved treatment and seem healthy and strong. Rosette is affected more than any of the other varieties, with White Wonder next and then Beacon. Enchantress Supreme seems to have escaped the trouble.

G. I.—Ill.

I regret to say that I cannot tell you positively what is the cause of the blooms coming in that crinkled condition. We have always held that it is caused by a loss of vitality in the stock. You usually will find that a plant which throws one of these blooms will give no perfect blooms. All will have that same crinkled appearance to a greater or less degree, and one of these plants may stand among a lot of perfectly good ones. Rosette showed this fault all the time we grew it and White Perfection developed it during the last year or two. White Wonder has never shown it with us, nor has Beacon, except when a plant was badly affected with the yellows. I would suggest that you change your stock of the varieties thus affected, as the simplest means of escaping the evil.

The Ullrich Store at Tiffin, O., Ready for the Annual Fall Opening.

PRIMULA FOLIAGE WHITE.

Can you tell us what causes the foliage of our Primula obconica plants to turn white? We have changed the soil and location in the greenhouse, but as yet have been unable to find out what causes this condition. We have one bench of these plants on which the foliage is almost white.

M. F. C.—Colo.

The fact that a whole bench is affected in the same way would go to show that some soil condition is the cause of this trouble. Probably the soil is too sour. Without knowing just what your compost is, it is hard to give an opinion. A compost of well decayed, fibrous loam, two-thirds, and equal parts of leaf-mold, not too much decayed, and well rotted manure, with a little sand added, makes an ideal mixture for Primula obconica. If your plants are heavily rooted and perhaps starved, try weak doses of nitrate of soda or Clay's fertilizer in water, at intervals of a week.

Legislation and Legal Decisions

LEGAL VALUATION OF TIME.

A Suit for Time Lost.

A Philadelphia florist was injured when a wagon in which he was riding was struck by a street car. He sued the street railway company and was awarded judgment for his physical injury, etc., but appealed to the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, claiming that the trial judge committed error in his rulings on the injured man's right to recover damages for loss of time from his business, on account of the accident. The Supreme court affirmed the action of the lower court, saying:

"The plaintiff was a florist and the major portion of his business was wholesale; it was conducted on a range covering ten acres of ground, with 5,650 square feet under glass and more than 1,000 square feet of coldframes. His annual expenses amounted to about $2,500, and before the accident he employed one man to assist him. Afterwards he kept this man, and also placed his minor son at work in the business, which continued under the plaintiff's general supervision. He estimated the personal labor performed by himself before the accident at $480 per annum, and testified that since his injuries he performed probably twenty per cent of his prior work, giving in detail just what kind of work he had done and now was able to do.

The Plaintiff's Argument.

"The plaintiff offered to prove his receipts and expenditures 'covering the period of years immediately anterior to his injury * * * and for the years subsequent thereto, in order to show decreased earning power.' This was accompanied by a further offer to show that the plaintiff leased the premises occupied by him in his business; that he had no capital invested other than the money required to purchase seeds, etc., 'which he matured * * * and sold by his own labor, with the assistance of a hired employee,' and that he had no other business or occupation. These offers were refused. He then offered to show, by qualified witnesses who 'knew Mr. Blank's business,' that 'the work performed' by him in connection therewith was worth between $1,500 and $2,000 per year. This also was refused.

"It will be observed that the original offer was not to contrast a defined period of time before the accident with one of like duration thereafter, and that there was no specific offer to prove that the alleged decrease in the earnings of the plaintiff's business was due exclusively to his impaired physical condition. Furthermore, there was no contention that the plaintiff was so enfeebled that he was entirely unable to work in or superintend his business, or that it had come to a stop. On the contrary, it appears that, while the plaintiff was in a bad nervous condition, he was otherwise physically fit, and that the business remained a running concern. On this state of facts the trial judge instructed the jury as follows:

Other Factors Besides Labor.

"'A man's business which goes on after he is hurt may have success or it may have disaster for other reasons than the accident. If he has a range, no matter if it is a small range, in which he raises flowers, it involves the buying of stock, and it involves the question of freeze-out in winter and blight and other things which sometimes make a season disastrous, although otherwise it would look promising. A man's labor enters into that business as well as his stock, and the fact that in one year he has a good year and in another year he has a bad year may be the result partly of bad business conditions and partly of conditions affecting his health. It is impossible to split them, and the law wisely says that we cannot consider the results to the man's business, if it is a business that goes on and if it is a business in which he could employ somebody else to do his work. In my view of the case, owing to the fact that Mr. Blank carried on his business until today, and could employ help to do what he could not do himself, the cost of the help would be something which could be considered, and not what was the effect ultimately upon his business as shown by yearly statements.

No Additional Expense Caused.

"'As I say, I struck out that evidence, and therefore the only thing you could consider would be what expense he was put to in his business, if any. There was evidence that, for a time, if not all the time, before the accident he employed a man to help him, at a cost of $50 per month, and he employed a man to help him after the accident at the same price. If the accident caused no change in his business, he was not put to the expense of the man as a result of the accident, and hence he lost no money on that account.'

"In certain instances where one, as the result of injuries received through the negligence of another, had been entirely deprived of the power to carry on a business in which his personal labor and superintendence were the major assets, or where one had died as the result of his injuries, and the evidence showed regular sums given his family which were earned in a business that consisted principally of his labors and management, we have permitted evidence concerning the net earnings of the injured or deceased person, on the theory that it was the only way, under the peculiar circumstances of the case, satisfactorily to show earning power.

Profits Don't Fix Labor Value.

"But those were exceptional cases in which we said that 'profits derived from an investment or the management of a business enterprise are not earnings.' Therefore 'the profits of a business with which one is connected cannot be made use of as a measure of his earning power. Such evidence may tend to show the possession of business qualities, but it does not fix their value.' Under the circumstances of the case at bar, we see no error in the rulings and instructions called to our attention in the assignments just discussed." S.

OPEN LETTERS from READERS

THAT POT FAMINE.

I noticed an article in another trade paper last week which states the pot situation is causing men to be laid off on account of a shortage of pots. There is a shortage, but let's be fair and place the blame where it belongs.

I know there are potteries enough throughout the country, each well equipped with sufficient kilns and machinery, to make pots in plenty if men could be obtained to run them. There has been, and is, many dollars' worth of idle machinery because of labor scarcity and on labor alone I place the principal reason for the pot shortage. The advance in wages has been met each time and no doubt will have to be met again soon. The total number of pots used is no greater than in former years, nor is the demand larger, but long delayed shipments make it appear so and one good reason for delay is the freight embargoes placed upon the eastern cities by the railroad companies.

The grower must understand that during all last spring and summer the potter was fighting for him, while running with depleted labor force, trying to get the additional labor necessary to make up the stock of pots needed for the fall trade, and that he is still trying hard to fill his fall orders and making stock for the coming winter and spring trade, hoping to have enough for all when needed. As far as the Whilldin Pottery Co. is concerned, we are now working to full capacity and gradually catching up with our fall orders. Our trouble at present is the freight embargo. J. G. Whilldin, Pres.

THE TRADE'S FAMILY SKELETON?

I have read with interest the articles in your worthy paper about the injury done the trade in general by the "rotten" way the cut-rate flower shop and department stores sell flowers. The first question is always this: Who is to blame? "Not me!" says the one; "Not me!" says the other. It is the overstocked market, most of them say. That may be true, but, in my estimation, this is not the only cause of the trouble. Now, we florists, here in the Twin Cities, might form a union and get them all—growers, wholesalers, retailers and so on—to join and make every member take the pledge not to sell to department stores, unless he can get the right prices.

Let me tell you, Mr. Editor, it wouldn't do us a bit of good. There are hundreds of growers in the country towns who are too willing to ship carloads of stock any minute. The wholesale houses in other cities, when overstocked, will sell flowers at any price, roses as well as rat-tails, as long as there is money in sight. I do not want to ventilate this most serious question any further. I just say this much: It is a shame that roses must be sold at prices as low as 15, 20 and 25 cents per dozen. It is not the money we lose every day, oh no! What bothers me most is the cheap opinion the public, especially the women of the less affluent classes, have about flowers. They talk about roses, carnations, mums and other stock as if flowers were on a par with weeds and as easy to grow as weeds.

Twenty years ago rose growers grew long-stemmed, first-class flowers and received a good price for them. Today seventy to eighty per cent of the stock is short-stemmed, weak-necked, inferior looking and it is this stock that the department and cut-rate flower stores do business with. These stores ruin prices and make the people think nothing more of flowers than they do of a bushel of potatoes.

If every grower would make it a principle to grow long-stemmed, good flowers, all complaints about this disloyal trade would vanish in air.

TESTING CANNAS IN TENNESSEE.

[This is the second of four articles containing a record of the results of canna tests conducted near Nashville, Tenn. The first article was published in The Review of November 9. The remaining two articles will appear in early issues of the paper.]

The first of this series of articles treated of white and variegated cannas. This article is devoted principally to pink varieties, but closes with a reference to one canna that is excellent when used as a foliage plant.

A few years ago there were no good pink cannas, and it was deemed almost impossible that any would be produced. Now there is no color that is better represented by first-class varieties, and they are becoming more and more prominent every year.

Among the Pink Varieties.

Hungaria was one of the first really high-class pink cannas, and many like it the best of all even yet. We have grown several thousand roots this year, and can say that it is good in every way. But it is not pure pink, being bordered and more or less mottled with cream. No one can go wrong on this variety.

Maid of Orleans is somewhat similar to Hungaria in size and color, being a purer pink where it is pink, but also having more of the cream. It has one point of superiority over Hungaria, and in fact over almost all other green-leaved cannas; namely, its matchless foliage. It will become one of the most popular of its color when generally known.

The variety Mrs. Alfred Conard has always appealed to us as the best pink until this year. It is just as good as it ever was, but its descendant, City of Portland, beats it.

Excels Its Parent.

City of Portland was introduced this year. We have grown 500 or 600 roots, and unhesitatingly pronounce it the best pink canna on the market today. It has a solid color of a better shade of pink than either Hungaria or its own parent, Mrs. Alfred Conard. And it is a stronger grower and a freer bloomer, with better foliage than either.

Rosea gigantea continues to be the best canna of its color, a deep rose-pink. It cannot be said to be a pure pink, for it is too nearly red, but it is a great canna and will long be one of those that give satisfaction to all buyers.

Arc-en-ciel, a new foreign variety, is the only rival to Canna rosea gigantea, which it most nearly resembles in color, though it has a yellowish cast. This would be a great canna were not C. rosea gigantea better.

True to Their Indian Names.

In Pocahontas we have the perfection of a large, free-flowered pink canna, with an abundance of good bronze foliage. This year it developed, along with the pink, a delightful, tawny, Indian shade which it did not show last year. This adds greatly to its beauty. When this is cheaper it will be one of the best dozen commercial cannas, we believe.

About the variety Wabash we would repeat all that we said a year ago. It is a bigger and better C. rosea gigantea, on good bronze foliage. What more could be asked for it?

Minnehaha is a variety that appeals to us strongly, having almost a white ground, clouded and shaded with pink, creamy copper and all of the shades that we usually associate with Indian coloring. It will never be a popular bedder, even though it has excellent bronze foliage, for the reason that it is not "loud" enough, but to those who grow flowers for their quiet beauty it will fill a large place.

Yes, there are plenty more pinks, and good ones, too—some so decidedly good that they would be highly praised were it not that those already mentioned are the best, and there is not space enough to tell of them all. We have a seedling of our own that is hard to beat, but a pink canna, to merit introduction at this time, must be "some" canna. Another year will tell whether ours is one of that sort.

Effective as a Foliage Plant.

A second year with the canna named Greenback only convinces us more fully of its wonderful merits as a foliage plant. Where tropical effects are desired, such as are usually sought by the use of bananas, there is no other plant we have ever seen that can compare with it. The plant resembles a banana so far as the leaves go, and it produces four times as many of them. The plant multiplies as rapidly as most kinds and grows to a height of fully eight feet, with good cultivation. We have never had a bloom on it.

Floyd Bralliar.

Owosso, Mich.—M. A. Herrick, proprietor of the Sunnyside Greenhouses, has completed the erection of a house 50x100, which will be planted to Ophelia roses. Another addition, 20x50, will be used for violets.

White Marsh, Md.—Richard Vincent, Jr., has had a busy lecture season, which he closes for 1916, December 9, before the students of the Sparks high school of Baltimore county. November 29 he lectured before the students and faculty of the Maryland Agricultural College and Experiment Station.

Hamburg, N. Y.—C. T. Guenther has a pure white sport of Chrysanthemum Maud Dean with which he has been extremely successful for several seasons. The variety is of special interest because it can be had in bloom in December, or even in January. Mr. Guenther has made arrangements with the Wm. F. Kasting Co., of Buffalo, to distribute the variety next spring.

PRICES UP AND DOWN

EFFECT ON FLORISTS.

Better Retail Prices.

There are evidences that the trend of prices is turning a little more in favor of the average florist. The rise in commodity prices throughout the country has been so sharp that practically every florist has realized the necessity for asking the public to pay more for plants and flowers. The result has been that there has come to pass a considerable improvement in the retail prices charged by florists. There has been no skyrocketing, such as has occurred in many other lines of business, but there has been a general improvement. At least, there has been an end to price-cutting.

In towns where it has been impossible to make any material increase in prices because there was no leader, or because not all would follow the leader, it nevertheless has been realized that this is not a season for trying to get business regardless of the profit in it. This has had an appreciable effect in improving the state of the business where, as Ralph M. Ward says, florists are like cabbages, because they do not do well when planted too close together.

The public has become so accustomed to finding prices advanced that florists actually have heard surprise expressed that their prices were not higher. There has been no trouble at all in making moderate advances, and even small advances have aggregated a sufficient sum to make the retail end of the business decidedly easier.

On the Buying Side.

On the buying side conditions also are relaxing to at least a moderate degree. The fear of pronounced scarcity of merchandise in nearly all lines of trade has subsided since the rush of fall buying; there are few lines now in which there is any fear of not being able to secure the goods. The panicky conditions therefore have subsided. Buyers either have obtained a sufficient holiday supply of the goods they wanted or they have found an acceptable substitute, so they no longer are bidding up prices on themselves.

These statements relate principally to general lines of merchandise, but the fact has the effect of making it easier for the florist to buy and it has a tendency to stop the rise in prices, if it has not actually caused any worthwhile decline.

Florists never have found business better than it is at present, considering the season of the year, and the indications are that this will be the largest season in the history of the trade. There is some shortage in certain lines of plants on which the trade is more or less dependent on imports from Europe, but cut flower production has struck its stride and there is no likelihood of any scarcity for the balance of this season. Also, plant propagators never were busier and the spring supply of bedding stock will exceed anything known before. The number of places closed because of the scarcity of fuel will not equal the additional producing capacity resulting from the erection of new greenhouses this season.

With prices on a more stable basis the trade is in position to regard the future with confidence.

BEST TIME FOR PRIMULAS.

Is there any sale for 2¼-inch primulas along about January and February?
L. K. M.—Pa.

I presume you mean young seedlings of Primula Sinensis or P. obconica. There would be a better call in March and April for primulas from small pots. Seeds sown from the middle to the end of January will give plants of sufficient size at the time named. C. W.

PROPAGATION OF CALENDULAS.

What treatment should be given calendulas from seed to have blooms for decorations, in a carnation temperature? A. A. S.—Mass.

Sow the seeds in small pots, several seeds to a pot, and thin them out to one. Set the plants in rows two feet apart and allow a foot between before they become potbound. Do not let the temperature exceed 50 degrees at night. The same soil in which mums and carnations thrive will answer well. You can disbud and reduce the number of shoots when you want fancy flowers. Calendulas will flower profitably for several months. Feed them well once they are growing sturdily. C. W.

BEGONIAS COME BLIND.

We are sending you a sample of begonia plants. The plants were taken from cuttings and have come blind. We would like to know why this happened.
H. & C.—O.

A percentage of shoots on Chatelaine and some other begonias naturally will come blind and care must be taken not to propagate from such. Often if cuttings of this type of fibrous-rooted begonias are left too long in the propagating bench, the tops of the shoots will become hardened and blind. As a preventive be sure to pot all the cuttings as soon as they are nicely rooted.
C. W.

EARLY-BUDDED PAPER WHITES.

Our Paper White narcissi were started in the soil November 6. After showing green two to four inches, they are throwing buds. They have had a temperature of 50 to 60 degrees at night and as high as 70 degrees in the daytime. Please tell us why they are showing buds so early. Do you think they will make plenty of foliage before the blooms expand? V. F. C.—Tenn.

The bulbs referred to doubtless were partly ripened after they were dug; this would cause them to bloom earlier than bulbs that were not dug until thoroughly ripe. They should produce fully as good flowers and just as many of them as any bulbs. A few degrees more heat and a light shade, or either one of these alone, will give more foliage. If they are in flats and the benches are so piped as to allow it, set them under the bench for two or three days. I do not like to give too much heat, as it may cause the buds to spoil. Floyd Bralliar.

Hillegom, Holland.—The firm of F. Rynveld & Sons, which some time ago established a French branch under the name of Rynveld & Cie, at Ollioules, is preparing to establish an American branch in New York. Two of the sons and some of the travelers at present are in the United States.

Ghent, Belgium.—Plant diseases are becoming extremely prevalent. Sulphur for treatment against mildew realizes six times pre-war prices. Tobacco for nicotine compounds is scarce, and although some have tried to grow their own supplies, they have not met with much success. Insect pests are spreading, and notably red spider, no chemicals used as specifics being available. Consignments of coal from the Liége district have been stopped. Repairs to glasshouses can hardly be thought of, as oil for paint or putty is unobtainable. Where glass is broken or blown out it is put in again with cement. Boxes are expensive, too, and the supply insufficient since the local sawmills were destroyed.

Paris, France.—L'Horticulture Francaise, the journal of the national organization of nurserymen, still is issued as a quarterly. It is well filled with the general line of ads, but the text largely relates to the death and injury of members of the trade who went to war; also to steps to protect the trade after the return of peace.

Woking, England.—A visitor to the W. C. Slocock nursery here finds business with America is particularly good. Many thousands of roses and other subjects were being lifted for export, and a big shed was entirely devoted to grading and packing Manetti stocks for America. Lads and lasses, who usually do this work, could not be secured this season, but a number of local ladies of leisure came to the rescue and were seen tackling their task with energy. In order to avoid possible criticism, the ladies accept the wages their work entitles them to, handing over their earnings to the Red Cross, thus rendering service both to commercial and military interests of their country.

PLANTING INDOOR SWEET PEAS.

I have a greenhouse 28½x90 and eight feet high at the sides, running north and south, in which I intend to grow sweet peas. Which way would you advise planting the rows and how many rows would you plant? It would be most convenient to run them lengthwise of the house. I thought of planting six rows. What is the best method of supporting the vines? Which do you consider the best variety of tomato for forcing? I want a variety that will not require artificial pollination.

C. G. J.—N. Y.

While on some accounts we prefer to run the rows of sweet peas across the house, it is even more desirable that the rows run north and south, and we would adopt that course in the house described, particularly if there are other special reasons that apply. It is advisable to have the rows four feet apart, which would permit running six rows in a house twenty-eight feet six inches wide, and leave ample room for walks along the walls and also through the middle of the house, if desired.

The vines may be trained upon trellises made by stretching medium-weight "wool" twine horizontally lengthwise of the house, with the strands six to eight inches apart, the upper ones being farther apart than the lower ones. The twine should be supported every eight feet by ½-inch gas pipe or wooden stakes, eight or nine feet high. These stakes should be held in place by running along the row a No. 12 galvanized wire, to which the tops of the stakes should be fastened, and two other wires should be run farther down, to stiffen the stakes and assist the twine trellis in carrying the weight of the vines.

The Marvel is a good variety of tomato for greenhouse forcing, but, like all other sorts, it will set more fruits and they will be noticeably larger if some attention is given to hand-pollinating. T.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

The florists of Buffalo perhaps never experienced a better Thanksgiving trade than this year's. There was an abundance of stock in nearly every line. Beauties were of good quality and the supply was just about equal to the demand. Other roses, too, experienced a good demand at good figures. All chrysanthemums and pompons cleared rapidly at good prices, regardless of color. There were some reports of a shortage of pompons, but even if it were so, there was plenty of other stock to fill the vacancy. The Chadwicks are the chief varieties in the mum line today.

Although there was a heavy cut of carnations, much more than many expected, these were soon sold out entirely. Now that mums have diminished in supply, lilies have resumed their former activity. The supply of these is about normal.

There was a fair supply of orchids and valley. Cypripediums were in demand; also gardenias. The demand for violets has picked up somewhat, in both doubles and singles. Paper Whites and stevias are more plentiful daily. Calendulas continue about the same and some extra nice snapdragons reach the market occasionally. Sweet peas as yet are few. Greens are quite sufficient for all present demands and Christmas greens are arriving in small consignments.

Various Notes.

The William Scott Co. reports an extra fine Thanksgiving business, far superior to that of any previous year, in actual figures.

Edna Boettger, daughter of R. E. Boettger, of Eggertsville, was married to Edwin H. Evans, also of Eggertsville, Thanksgiving evening.

Business with A. J. Reichert has been satisfactory. From now until Christmas the force will be on the go.

We no more than get through with the Thanksgiving rush when we look Christmas in the face. All predictions are for a most prosperous Christmas business.

Palmer's report a large increase in their Thanksgiving business. A. E.

THE LOSSES.

An indication of the severity of the losses sustained this season on plant importations is seen in a notice of a sale of abandoned shipments announced by the collector of customs at Chicago. The sale took place at 10 a. m. December 7. The following was the official description:

Marks and Nos. Description	Original Foreign Value	Present Home Value

DEMURRAGE GOES UP.

The Interstate Commerce Commission and various state utilities boards, in an effort to relieve the shortage of coal cars, have ordered a change in demurrage charges, expected to prevent the recent practice of holding cars while the contents is traded in between brokers. The new charges will be as follows: Cars held in railroad yards awaiting reconsignment, first twenty-four hours, free; first day thereafter, $1 a car; second day, $2; third day, $3; fourth day and each succeeding day, $5.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

Stock in all lines is scarce, following a satisfactory Thanksgiving day business. December 1 to 3 it was impossible to get any quantity of flowers and this same condition continued early in the present week.

Everything sold well on the holiday and prices were satisfactory from the growers' standpoint. Valley was extra high, at times bringing $8 per hundred for stock that in the days before the war would have been passed by at $4 per hundred. Violets sell well; the Hudson river variety moves at $1.25 and $1.50 per hundred. The demand for singles exceeded that for doubles. The single violets have always been the more popular here.

With the general shortage the prices of roses jumped materially. Retailers had difficulty in getting stock at $12 and $14 per hundred. The miniature roses were almost unobtainable and orders for quantities as small as fifty could not be filled. Carnations sell readily at $4 to $6 per hundred. Paper Whites, the sale of which had been dragging, sell readily at $4 per hundred. The price of narcissi will take a heavy drop, as the supply is rapidly increasing. Stevia made its appearance last week. There were not enough sweet peas to go around, and the demand was heavy. A considerable part of this difficulty was due to the fact that the growers are troubled with buds dropping. This is the first time this year that all of the growers and wholesalers have been compelled to turn down orders.

Various Notes.

Among visitors last week were F. Sitterding, Jr., with Ratcliffe & Tanner, Richmond, Va.; Roger W. Peterson, of Cincinnati, O.; James Meiklejohn, representing W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J.; Joseph J. Goudy, representing H. A. Dreer, Philadelphia; L. J. Seiger, representing the Robert Craig Co., Philadelphia.

Mrs. Nettie Supper, who for some time has been in the employ of George C. Shaffer, has returned to her old position with the Gude Bros. Co.

William F. Gude was one of the judges in the window display contest of electrical week. All of the florists have attractively decorated windows.

Among the merchants who announced their intention of participating in the electrical parade are a number of florists, but these will meet with difficulty in decorating their machines because of the shortage of stock. The members of the trade are opposed to the use of artificial flowers for any purpose and rather than this they will withdraw their entries. C. L. L.

VEGETABLES AND FRUITS DEPARTMENT

APHIS IN COLDFRAMES.

Please tell me how to control or destroy green aphis on lettuce plants in coldframes. We cannot fumigate the frame. Would fluid nicotine be expensive? How often should it be applied and how strong should it be?

H. S.—Mo.

Fumigation would be the most simple method of extermination. Since you cannot fumigate, I would advise against using any nicotine spray, owing to its powerful properties. You could, however, use a spray of kerosene emulsion—Ivory soap, one pound to five gallons of water, slicing the soap finely and dissolving it in boiling water before adding cold water; or one of the other soap or soap and oil sprays. These sprays would be likely to impart some flavor to the lettuce leaves if applied a few days before the leaves are used.

TOMATOES AND CUCUMBERS.

When should cucumbers and tomatoes be planted to be ready for June 1 ripening of the tomatoes and cutting of the cucumbers? How far apart should the rows be and how far apart should the plants be in the hows? As I am running my first greenhouse, this information will be greatly appreciated.

A. E. S.—Ia.

Sow the tomatoes January 15 and the cucumbers February 15. Tomatoes want a dry atmosphere and 60 to 62 degrees at night; cucumbers a moist atmosphere and 62 to 65 degrees at night. Allow tomatoes trained to single stems eighteen inches of space and cucumbers twenty-four to twenty-eight inches apart in the rows. A house thirty feet wide could have seven to eight rows of cucumbers. Tomatoes, if trained erect and not to wires, could go twenty-four to thirty inches between the rows.

C. W.

CUCUMBERS FOR FORCING.

I am sending a sample of my cucumbers, which were planted in pots September 6. The soil consisted of one-third well rotted cow manure and two-thirds good loam. The temperature was between 60 and 65 degrees, with little ventilation. The vines are about three feet high and are trained on wires, but the cucumbers all seem to be about the same as the one I am sending—short and thick. Can you tell me the cause, and do you think this is the variety known as Turkey Long Green, as the seed was supposed to be? What would you advise as a good-bearing green cucumber? Last season I was successful in growing Arlington White Spine, but the trade here seems to call for the all-green cucumber. My house is 35x100 feet and there are eight rows of cucumbers, with a space of two feet between the plants.

W. P. B.—Mass.

I am not acquainted with the cucumber you forwarded. It is far too short to be of any great commercial value. Your treatment for cucumbers has been all right, but the best of culture will not materially change the size and length of cucumbers. Arlington White Spine and improvements on it are the best market varieties I know of. There are several hybrids between the White Spine and English-forcing varieties that carry long fruit and bring fancy market prices.

BUSINESS EMBARRASSMENTS.

Columbus, O.—John W. Cassaday, of 237 South Richardson avenue, last week filed a petition in bankruptcy in the Federal court. His liabilities are placed at $4,031.40 and assets $3,366. Mr. Cassaday is represented by J. L. Bachman.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

The Market.

The Thanksgiving business in general was splendid. There was a robust call for yellow mums, but the other colors also shared in the honors of the day. Pompons proved to be useful for table decorations and roses, as ever, were the favorites, running close to mums for the lead.

Valley continues alarmingly scarce and the price is almost out of reach. Violets are more in evidence and experience a good market. At present the leaders in the roses are Ophelia, American Beauty, Killarney, Milady and Richmond, which sell satisfactorily, at reasonable prices. Easter lilies, which are in heavy demand for wedding decorations, remain in short supply. Narcissi are here and serve largely in funeral pieces. Carnations are more abundant and in lively demand, particularly the red varieties.

Various Notes.

Frank McCabe, representing the A. L. Randall Co., of Chicago, put up at one of the local hostelries a few days this week.

The Whitted Floral Co. last week had several large wedding decorations in addition to a splendid Thanksgiving business.

Max Kaiser is going after some of Uncle Sam's elusive greenbacks this Christmas with a good quantity of cyclamen plants.

E. M. P.

WESTERLY, R. I.

Mrs. Mabel V. Chapman, of the Hillcrest Dahlia Gardens, on Granite street, has purchased two estates adjoining her property. There is a considerable acreage of land, which will be utilized in connection with the dahlia culture.

Conrad Schulz was in Providence last week to place his stock of azaleas for Christmas. His stock is looking exceptionally fine.

Louis J. Reuter, of S. J. Reuter & Son, Inc., was a business visitor to New York last week.

W. H. M.

Paulding, O.—Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Hawkins, well known florists of this city, celebrated their golden wedding here December 4. Mr. Hawkins is 86 years old, while his wife is 73.

Belvidere, Ill.—S. H. Long, superintendent of the B. Eldredge establishment, has had excellent success with Chrysanthemum Helen Frick this season and his carnations also are giving exceptional results.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS

"We put in a strenuous summer," said the late Thomas C. Joy, of the Joy Floral Co., Nashville, Tenn., whom I called on a few days before his sudden death. "With our own men we rebuilt ten houses, each 100 feet — Moninger material, Advance Co. ventilating machinery, pecky cypress for benches and concrete walls all around. A mixture of eight parts cinders and one part cement makes firm and inexpensive concrete. We think our stock looks good, considering the disturbing features." The stock certainly did look well. Of carnations, White Wonder appears to have fully as much vitality as when first sent out. It is the staple white. Matchless is good, but not nearly so free here. Philadelphia, Alice and Enchantress Supreme are a trio of pink. In reds Belle Washburn is first in color; Nebraska first in floriferousness; Aviator, above all for all points of merit. Chrysanthemums lead with Turner and Yellow Turner, a few only being grown, for local exhibition use. Odessa, a noble bloom, pale yellow, is larger than Turner. Henry Smith, the grower, has a sport, an incurved Chrysolora, that is most promising. About sixty plants of this were grown this season and it is as solid as Bonnaffon. Roman Gold is considered the best medium season yellow, followed by Yellow Eaton and Chadwick, with Dolly Dimple last, but not least. Golden Gleam, a late introduction, is highly thought of. Chieftain is grown for a quantity flower. Wells' Late Pink and Mrs. Seidewitz about complete the list. A pure white Patty is promising. In pompons Quinola heads the list. Disbudding the side shoots makes a fine, bushy head. White Doty is another excellent variety. The pompons are grown under sashes. Totty's Cap family are grown as pot plants and sell as fast as sent into the store. Roses are in perfect health—Beauty, Richmond, Mrs. Russell, the Killarneys, Ophelia and Mrs. Shawyer. The last-named is doing so well that more will be planted next season, its greatest enemy, mildew, having been conquered. Three varieties of polyantha roses are grown for corsage purposes. Among pot plants poinsettias in pans, made up with nephrolepis, look good for Christmas. There is a large batch of cyclamens in pans, full of vigor. The usually large assortment of bulbous stock required for store sales is good and is being rapidly handled.

Business is booming, is the report of Manager W. H. Englehart, of the Idlewild Greenhouses, whose store is most attractively arranged with a fine display of bulbs and cut flowers.

OBITUARY

Peter Anderson.

News of the death of Peter Anderson, better known to the trade as "Jimmy" Anderson, which took place December 2 at his quarters in the Stock Exchange hotel, at Cottage Grove avenue and Thirty-ninth street, Chicago, was received with sorrow by his many friends in the trade.

Mr. Anderson was born in Sparta, Greece, in 1879. While still a young man he left his native country and emigrated to America, coming directly to Chicago. Here he soon entered the employ of Peter Reinberg, with whom he remained for a good number of years, leaving finally to establish himself in business as a commission florist, buying for his brother, M. Anderson, Dayton, O.; James Lasky, Uniontown, Pa., and various other houses, besides his own store at Terre Haute, Ind.

Jimmy Anderson was well beloved by all who knew him. He was a man of upright character and honest dealing, upon whom any confidence could readily be placed. His sound business principles and pleasing personality assured him of success in whatever he undertook. His death was unexpected and was due probably to an ulcerated tooth which caused blood poisoning. Burial took place December 6 from the rooms of the Western Casket Co., to Elmwood cemetery.

Mr. Anderson is survived by four brothers, Michael, Harry, Emanuel and James. He never married.

W. E. Roberts.

W. E. Roberts, a member of the Enid Floral Co., of Enid, Okla., formerly of New York city, met death November 21 by drinking a mixture of nicotine and Paris green, with which he intended to spray the plants. It will be recalled that Mr. Roberts joined A. D. Zimmerman and J. Brand in a partnership to operate the Enid Floral Co. Mr. Roberts was in charge of the growing end of the business.

Fred Newell Strail.

The trade will receive with sorrow news of the death of Fred Newell Strail, who was for many years associated with the florists' trade and whose demise occurred November 30, at his home at 4147 Gladys avenue, Chicago.

Mr. Strail worked at various times for many of the leading retail florists in Chicago, his last position in the trade being with A. Lange. He also operated several stores of his own at different intervals. He was an excellent designer and a first-class man in the retail store. His never-failing good humor won for him many friends and left him without an ill-wisher on the Chicago market. He was 57 years old.

The funeral took place December 3 at 2:30 p. m. from Central Masonic temple, 912 North La Salle street, to Rosehill cemetery. Mr. Strail is survived by his wife, Sarah A. Strail, and his brother, Chester A. Strail. Mrs. Strail is the daughter of W. D. Chandler, one of the pioneer Chicago florists, and has been a member of A. Lange's forces since failing health compelled her husband to give up his occupation in the trade.

Oliver Pherson.

Oliver Pherson, a member of the William Murphy Co., of Cincinnati, died November 27. His death was sudden and a shock to his many friends in the trade.

John Baldinger.

John Baldinger, who had been employed in various stores at Pittsburgh, Pa., for the last twenty-five years, died December 1. He had been ill for some time and his death was expected. Mr. Baldinger was a most genial character, so even-tempered that those who knew him best and worked with him never saw him angry. The funeral was held Monday, December 4, from the residence of his sister. Besides his mother, he leaves two sisters and several brothers.

NOTICE!

To Subscribers whose address labels carry an expiration number higher than 995 (Dec. 21, 1916).

EVERY florist knows through his own purchases what has happened in the paper market the last few months—prices have doubled all along the line.

And it takes more than four tons of paper each week to print The Review!

Many readers have been so kind as to write that The Review is worth considerably more to them than its subscription price. Well, the tremendous rise in the price of paper makes it no longer expedient to sell The Review at $1.00 a year.

The subscription price, therefore, will be advanced January 1, 1917, to $1.50 a year.

Until December 31, 1916, any member of the Trade may subscribe for one or more years at the old rate of $1.00 a year.

Readers whose present subscriptions do not expire until after January 1, 1917, may renew for as many years as they like at $1.00 per year, providing that such renewals are sent during 1916.

Send $1.00 and your subscription will be extended one year from the present date of expiration, whenever that may be.

Send $2.00 and the subscription will be extended two years from the present date of expiration.

Send $3.00 for three years, $5.00 for five years.

No renewals for a full year will be accepted at less than $1.50 unless they are mailed by December 31, 1916.

The Canadian subscription price will be $2.50 a year beginning January 1, 1917. Canadian renewals mailed on or before December 31, 1916, will be accepted at $2.00 a year.

NASHVILLE, TENN.

The Market.

The Thanksgiving weather was most favorable. Vanderbilt and Sewanee universities fought out their usual battle on the gridiron before thousands of people, who waved yellow and white chrysanthemums. This annual event cleans up more mums every year in this city than any other happening. There had been a good demand for mums since the season started, and this, coupled with a small production this year, meant that there were not more than two-thirds as many mums in the city three days before Thanksgiving as there were last year. When it was over most of the growers were able to say that they had no mums go to the dump this season. True, there now are a few needed to meet the demand; it has been years since mums were so completely cleaned up at this date.

Business was as good as anyone expected, which meant that it was much better than in most years. Yet no one had any record-breaking rush. There were plenty of good roses and they sold out closely. Carnations were also plentiful and sold well.

Most of the azaleas have been received, but many of them are in bad condition and have dropped their buds. Good valley pips are coming in from Holland; perhaps they grew there. The counter trade in Dutch bulbs has not been so good this year as usual, but much of the business comes late in this city, as late-planted bulbs do best.

Various Notes.

Haury & Sons are offering a fine line of pot mums at present. They have made a specialty of these for several years. Their roses are good, as usual.

The Joy Floral Co. sold its mums out closely for Thanksgiving.

Geny Bros. made a fine showing for the Thanksgiving trade. Their roses were as good as their mums, and sold as well.

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

THE messenger boy is the motor's only competitor in the delivery of flowers. The horse is long since out of it.

THIS is a good season for the introducers of novelties, but someone should wake up the man who expects the buyers to elbow each other at his counter. It takes a lot of noise to attract attention even to the best of things in these busy times.

RUSCUS in the natural, imported from Italy for dyeing, is on the short side this year, but those who hold quantities of it say the higher prices, which are only about ten or twelve per cent above those of last year, represent only the higher ocean freights they had to pay this season.

THERE are so many named varieties of pompon and so-called single mums on the market that no man knows their number, but the testimony of wholesale and retail florists is that the list might be reduced to a score without loss to their interests. Not all the new sorts are an acquisition marketwise.

IN spite of the large number of fine new pompons that have come on the market in the last few years, there seems to be no more popular market variety than the bronze most commonly known as Mrs. Beu. The Chrysanthemum Society of America says this is correctly called Frank Wilcox, having been introduced under that name so many years ago that its origin is shrouded in the mists of antiquity.

IN printing this issue of The Review four and one-half tons of paper were consumed. It is only a regular issue. The Christmas Number comes next week.

IT seems quite possible that this season bouquet green may be scarce and high enough to keep it out of the grocery stores and turn the trade back to the florists, where it belongs.

SOME people may not have considered that the fluctuations in the price of steel are of importance to florists, but steel has become one of the principal materials used in a modern greenhouse—and the rise in price now has reached 100 per cent as compared with before the war.

VIEWED FROM AFAR.

Beginning January 1 the subscription price of The Review will be $1.50 per year, but prior to January 1 subscribers have the privilege of renewing at the old rate of $1 per year. The fact that large numbers are taking advantage of the opportunity to secure the paper at the old price for several years is an eloquent testimonial to the value of The Review and at the same time it is an assurance that the circulation of the paper in 1917, instead of declining on an increase in rate, actually will increase. This is a sample of the letters that come:

In sending my check for five years' subscription to The Review, I want to say it will be worth a hundred times this much to me.—D. H. Green, Boonsboro, Md., November 28, 1916.

With the readers holding such a view, is it any wonder that the advertisers get good results? Like this:

Kindly discontinue our advertisement in The Review, as the results have far exceeded our expectations this year.—Jones, The Holly Wreath Man, Milton, Del., November 28, 1916.

When you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising you can be pretty sure he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

RAISING THE RETAIL PRICES.

If florists who sell to the public do not raise their retail prices they are extremely short-sighted. In the first place, everything the florist buys, with the possible exception of cut flowers, has gone up in price and the florist must keep pace or lose his profit. In the second place, the increases in price have been so general that the public has become accustomed to it and the man whose prices are not advanced actually is regarded with suspicion; either he has reduced the quality of his merchandise or else he was overcharging under the old conditions.

The retail florist who makes a reasonable advance in his prices finds it actually is easier to sell at the new prices than at the old ones. It is a general experience in the business world that it has been so easy to sell goods since established price ranges were destroyed in retail channels that everybody engaged in trade is astonished that they ever allowed such habits to become part of their existence. It has been the common experience of sellers that sales have come easier since the circle of prices began to swing into higher ranges. Nothing save a study of human nature itself can explain the phenomenon. The average man whose wages are raised will at once buy the thing he wants or thinks he wants, and his wife and children will do the same. That is where the human equation comes in. Once a man is convinced that his wages are higher than they have ever been he ceases to balk at the habits of a lifetime, whereby he paid so much for a shirt and no more, so much for his shoes and not a cent over it and so much and no more for the dozen carnations he takes home of a Saturday night.

LOCK UP THE POISON.

In reporting several cases of accidental poisoning from drinking nicotine extract by mistake, The Review has cautioned its readers to keep the insecticide under lock and key. This week's issue contains an obituary note with regard to an employee who drank nicotine with, the coroner said, suicidal intent. Probably no amount of caution will put an end to these occurrences, but a greater degree of caution will reduce their number.

LOSSES ARE DISTRESSING.

Although the autumn has been marked by unusually mild weather, its very mildness appears to have been the undoing of the azalea importers, as the one cold snap which swept over the country about three weeks ago seems to have caused widespread loss. Almost every importer of azaleas who had shipments on the rail at that time reports more or less damage by frost. In many instances shipments ordered made in refrigerator cars appear to have been forwarded from New York in ordinary box cars, with the result that plants in cases placed near openings were frosted, while those in cases not so exposed escaped. Under the circumstances there is no uniform proportion of loss, the unpacking of practically every case being necessary to determine the condition of the plants in it.

Last year, also, the losses on imported plants were heavy and a serious condition has been created. The consignee cannot break even if he shoulders the loss and no more can the shipper, while the insurance companies in Holland withdrew from the field after last year's experience.

A more dependable system of handling plant imports is necessary for the extension of the business if, indeed, not for its existence.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Thanksgiving trade was this year, by general consent, the best the Chicago wholesale flower market has ever enjoyed. Large quantities of stock were disposed of and, although prices were not so good as some might have wished, a fair price for stock was nevertheless obtained. After the shipping orders were out there was no decline, as buying continued right up until closing time Thursday, by which hour every house in the market was practically cleaned out. Not a yellow mum could one find anywhere and only a few white and pink mums were left. All other stock also cleared well. It was evident that many retailers had underestimated the magnitude of the business which was in store for them, for many who had been down early to do their buying were back on the market again Thursday morning. That the retailers as a whole cleaned out their stock well is further proved by the fact that city buying December 1 and 2 was heavy. Indeed,

Fine Russells by the Thousands

RUSSELL is an exceptional Rose—your customers will buy it on sight—and, having bought it once, they will call for it again and again, because of its splendid keeping quality. retail reports from all quarters corroborate this statement, while some retailers even come with tales of having disposed of every flower they had in stock and having to turn away many good orders because of inability to fill the customers' demands. The bright, brisk weather which obtained November 30, also played a big part in disposing of poorer quality stock, which was eagerly sought after by smaller buyers.

On the whole business has held up well this week, with December 1 and 2 standing out the strongest. The general supply is just ample to meet the demand and prices are holding up well. Roses, however, are on the short side of the market, with a strong demand which it is at times difficult to meet. Carnations arrive in good supply and are clearing well at moderate prices. Chrysanthemums and pompons, being largely Thanksgiving and pre-Thanksgiving flowers, are rapidly disappearing and it is probable that by the end of the week only a few will be seen on the market.

Lilies are beginning to move again, now that the season for mums is past. The supply is ample to meet the demand, which as yet is not very large. Violets continue scarce and sell readily. Sweet peas also are in short supply and are selling at good prices. As pompons disappear, calendulas begin to accelerate. Paper Whites are plentiful; the demand is only moderate and low prices obtain. Stevia begins to move faster at improved prices. Snapdragons arrive in small supply and clear easily at good prices.

November Business.

November makes an excellent record for most of the wholesale houses in this market, but for that showing the last week of the month is to be thanked. There was no great cause for congratulation over the record for tne first three weeks of November. From the time the California chrysanthemums began coming in until the chrysanthemum season began to wane, prices were extremely low. This was true not only of chrysanthemums but of roses and carnations. While crops were large, prices were so low that the total of sales did not compare especially well with the record of the rather good November last year. Thanksgiving usually comes on the fourth Thursday in November; this year it was the fifth Thursday. Mums usually are pretty nearly at the end of their season when the fourth Thursday arrives. This year the heaviest demand was a week after the usual grand finale. This was especially important because many country buyers who usually use home-grown stock for Thanksgiving were compelled to order from Chicago. Also Thanksgiving eve was marked by a number of specially large coming-out parties that served to clear up a large quantity of the highest grade stock. The result was that the last week of November this year was far ahead of the last week of November last year and gave the month as a whole an excellent showing.

Ziskas Will Move.

The first of a number of moves which promise to take place as a result of the change of quarters which the E. C. Amling Co. will make shortly, is that of Joseph Ziska & Sons, who last week signed a long term lease for the entire second story of the Durand building, at 169 to 175 North Wabash avenue, just above the new Amling quarters.

The new location will be a decided improvement in every way over the quarters in the basement at 151-153 North Wabash avenue now occupied by the firm, giving them a greatly increased floor space, better light and improved facilities for carrying on their rapidly increasing wire design and florists' supply business. The lease runs from January 1.

Flowers for Miss Armour.

It may be that some debutante affair has called for more flowers than were used at the party for Miss Lolita Armour at the Blackstone hotel November 29, but for most of the stores that enjoy society trade it brought the heaviest orders of the season. The Fleischman Floral Co. decorated the rooms used for the reception and William Graham and his assistants had charge of the flowers sent as gifts. There were 176 different lots of these. The E. Wienhoeber Co., the Fleischman Floral Co., George Wienhoeber, C. A. Samuelson, W. J. Smyth, O. J. Friedman and John Mangel were most heavily represented. There were a large number of bouquets and the debutante carried them all, one after another, but many of the flowers were in basket arrangements and a surprising number were not made up at all, being merely one or more dozens of fine Beauties, Russells or other special stock put up in boxes in the same manner as would be done for delivery on any ordinary occasion.

Various Notes.

The Southern California Flower Market, Los Angeles, Cal., opened a branch office in Chicago November 29, at 30 East Randolph street. The company purposes to sell, through this branch, mainly flowers that are not grown in or around Chicago, such as cornflowers, centaurea, scabiosa, poeticus, strawflowers, etc. Sprengeri, smilax and plumosus in lengths up to twelve feet, especially suitable for decorative purposes, will be handled in quantity. Carnations, violets and miniature roses will also be received. The object of the company is, according to S. Kitasawa, the general agent, to bring to Chicago mainly those flowers which are not grown here, but which are grown in quantity in the fields of southern California. Mr. Kitasawa will be assisted in his work by Louis Ancolora.

November was a month highly favorable to the growers, except in the case of those who were trying to hold back chrysanthemums for Thanksgiving. The temperature averaged 4 degrees per day above normal and there was fifty-three per cent of the possible duration of sunshine, against forty-seven per cent as normal for the month.

One of the season's new stores is the Bruce Flower Shop, opened a few weeks ago at 6906 Stony Island avenue. Fitted up in the style typical of stores in the outlying business districts, a good show is presented to passers-by and business has been satisfactory.

Morton Grove dedicated a new bridge November 28, Mrs. A. F. Poehlmann, wife of the president of the village board, breaking a bottle of champagne at the proper juncture. The exercises were followed by a celebration at the Wayside Inn, Peter Reinberg, president of the county board; A. F. Poehlmann, A. H. Poehlmann, George Harrer and August Geweke being the members of the trade among those present.

That this will be one of the best Christmases in the history of the Chicago market is the belief of John Michelsen, of the E. C. Amling Co. Mr. Michelsen believes that the conditions through the country tributary to Chicago, both as to demand and supply, are specially favorable to Chicago this season, and that the largest shipping trade ever known will center here.

Frank Oechslin has thirty-one cases of azaleas on the way from New York. Three carloads have arrived and have opened up in condition that affords Mr. Oechslin much satisfaction in view of what he hears of other shipments. He figures it may be possible to make some money on azaleas this season.

The mail-order business always has had special attractions for A. L. Randall. "It is difficult to establish, slow to build up and requires more watchful care to see that the service really is what the buyers want, but after careful development a mail-order business is the steadiest and most permanent patronage any house can have," he said.

Perhaps there is no showier show house in Chicago than that recently built at the front of John A. Michal's range at 7045 Stony Island avenue. It is like staging one's display in the street, the house is so high and light.

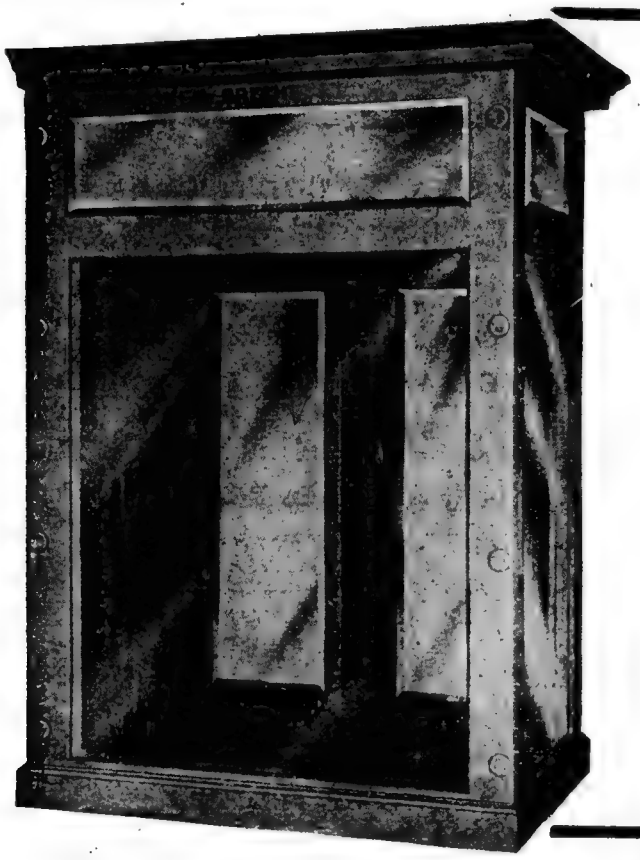
the John C. Moninger Co., says his concern never had so many contracts, or aggregating so large an amount, as at present for delivery after the new year.



To have a look at the newer roses, W. J. Keimel, of Wendland & Keimel Co., Elmhurst, is contemplating a trip to the principal growing centers in the east.

A Thanksgiving dinner table, tastefully arranged with a fruit centerpiece and floral decorations, was the main item of attraction in Friedman's window display last week. The front section of the window contained orchids, calendulas, pompons, mums, roses and miscellaneous flowers, and behind these, but in plain view, the table was placed. Victor Bergman reports good Thanksgiving business as well as several coming-out parties.

There are only two growers for this market who have the rose Lady Alice Stanley. One of these is J. A. Budlong and P. C. Schupp says it is well liked, both at store and greenhouses. The flower is fine, but in the east, where Lady Alice Stanley has had a more extensive trial, it has been found to flower so slowly that it can not be sold at the same price as other roses.

At Niles Center John Prochazka is starting his first season with a crop of cut flowers and potted plants, with excellent prospects for the Christmas season. He has two houses 40x250, one house 29x120, material furnished by the John C. Moninger Co., and erected by M. Winandy & Son.

John P. Degnan, of Winterson's Seed Store, comments on the steadily increasing popularity of the Christmas trees of table and basket size. He anticipates there will be another increase in the sales this year, not only because of general conditions but because the stock, judging by early shipments, is better than usual this season.

Alex. Henderson, president of the Florists' Club, will celebrate his forty-first birthday anniversary December 9.

The fishpond in the model store of H. N. Bruns attracts almost as much attention as the flowers.

If you listen to Fred Nelson he will tell you why the George Wittbold Co., with its new store, has the finest location in town. "To the east is one of the richest sections in town, with apartments that rent for $200 to $500 per month," he says, "while to the west is a business and middle-class section, so we get both kinds of flower buyers coming and going."

There are many visitors at the Union Grove establishment of French & Salm these days, attracted by what is said to be the largest crop of Russell in the history of that variety. They grow only the one variety, 33,000 plants of it, and though not all in full crop cut 20,000 flowers last week.

Miss Virginia Poehlmann and partner gave Japanese dances before the Dorothy Meadows Drama Circle December 4.

Guy Reburn started December 4 on his first trip for the new concern, Reburn & Co., intending to be absent until near Christmas.

Ed Hauswirth, formerly with the Central Floral Co., on State street, again is with A. C. Spencer, in the Atlas block.

Demosthenes Papatony is more than pleased with sales on Thanksgiving, both at his north side and Madison street stores. In fact, his north side quarters performed the remarkable feat of selling every flower there was in the store Thanksgiving day. Mums and violets were the best sellers.

It is announced William E. Fischer, formerly with the park department in Boston, has been appointed superintendent of the Cyrus H. McCormick estate, of Lake Forest, to succeed E. O. Orpet, who has removed to California. Frank Lambert, who was on the Kuppenheimer estate prior to the death of his daughter and the ensuing trial of young Orpet, still is living in the vicinity of Lake Forest, but all parties to the affair have suffered through the notoriety.

News has been received of the death of Mrs. Andrew McAdams, wife of Andrew McAdams, at their home at Jacksonville, Fla. Mr. McAdams was one of the pioneer florists of Chicago, a former president of the Chicago Florists' Club, and is well known to the trade. From the early days of the trade here, and until four years ago, he operated greenhouses and a retail store at Fifty-third street and Kimbark avenue, which upon his removal to Jacksonville went into the hands of Wm. La Grotta, under whose direction it is now being conducted. There is one daughter, Mae McAdams, who was brought up in the business and who is widely known in Chicago. She is at present completing a course in landscape architecture at the University of Illinois.

This week's obituary column contains notices of the deaths of two well known Chicagoans.

A. Miller has returned from another of his trips among bulb forcers. He says he finds a large number of usually prosperous florists are not sharing in the good times we read about in the daily papers. Many, he says, failed to realize their usual income during the summer, due to weather conditions, and now are forced to meet greatly increased expense because of the extremely high price of coal. Mr. Miller fears it will be a lean year for many florists.

A. T. Pyfer & Co. have a special man in Michigan who is making selections of winterberries for them.

Fred Longren is in Chicago. He expects to remain until after the first of the year.

The Leslie Floral Co., which recently opened a store at 6 East Monroe street, reports that business is even better than they had looked for. Among the novelties handled by the company are ankle bouquets, of which several have been sold.

According to A. T. Pyfer, Pyfer & Olsem, Wilmette, Ill., will have a nice lot of cyclamens, begonias and cherries for Christmas this year and are looking forward to a fine business.

Weiland & Risch have a large batch of poinsettias in their Evanston greenhouses this season, in unusually good condition.

Visitors.

C. G. Pahud, of Indianapolis, made the rounds of the market early this week, sizing up the sources of supply and placing orders for Christmas novelties.

Mrs. Lord, of Lord's Flower Room, Topeka, Kan., has been in the market this week, buying Christmas stock. She says conditions never were better in her city and she looks for banner business.

Edward Amerpohl, of Janesville, spent December 4 in the market on one of his periodical buying expeditions.

The presence of the following visitors was noted last week: Robt. Karlstrom, representing A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn.; Mrs. A. C. Rott, Joliet, Ill.; Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Washburn, Bloomington, Ill.; Mrs. J. A. Rovatzos, Minneapolis, Minn.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Last week surely was a busy one for growers, wholesalers and retailers. From all reports, the Thanksgiving day trade was better than for some years. The weather was ideal and much transient trade was done. The market was well supplied with all seasonable flowers and prices were within reach of all. There was a scarcity of violets, however, and these were in big demand. Stock cleaned up nicely, especially the fancy mums, for which there was a good demand. Nagoya, the Eatons and Seidewitz sold well at top prices. Bonnaffons, too, cleaned up nicely. In roses Russell and Ophelia had a big call and good prices were obtained for the fancy grades. Extra fancy Beauties cleared at $5 per dozen. Killarney was off crop and only a few of the fancy grade came in. Ward did not seem to take well with the buyers.

Carnations were plentiful during the week, but they did not seem to sell so well as usual. The top price for extra fancy was $3 per hundred. The demand

Various Notes.

Prof. H. C. Irish, president of the Missouri State Horticultural Society, left December 4 for Kansas City to attend the fifty-ninth annual meeting of the society, which was held at the Coates House, December 5 to 7. There was an exhibit of fruits and flowers. Alexander Lurie, of the Missouri Botanical Garden, who accompanied Mr. Irish, gave a lecture on tree surgery.

The annual Shaw banquet was held December 1 at the University Club rooms, Grand and Washington avenues. Professor White, head of the school of botany at Cornell University, was the principal speaker of the evening. The officers of the St. Louis Florists' Club and the twenty-two chairmen of the committees of the spring flower show were present. Dr. George T. Moore presided over the meeting and the affair was a most pleasant one.

The meeting of the St. Louis Florists' Club will be held December 14, at the Forest park greenhouses, the invitation of Superintendent Ernest Strehle and John Moritz, the latter in charge of the Forest park greenhouses, having been accepted. The officers of the club will meet this week and prepare an interesting program for the meeting. Secretary Windler says that special notices will be sent to members and a large attendance is looked for.

Paul Ahner and his father, A. G. Ahner, the Kirkwood florists, are sending in a fine cut of extra fancy Enchantress and White Enchantress carnations. These are consigned to the St. Louis Wholesale Cut Flower Co.

The florists' dance was scheduled to be held at Westminster hall December 6. This dance was in the hands of the younger folks and from the way tickets sold the attendance was bound to be large.

The west end florists say that Thanksgiving business was large. In the downtown district, Grimm & Gorly, the Mullanphy Florists, C. Young & Sons Co., Fred Foster and the Riessen Floral Co. had a brisk Thanksgiving day business.

They now are preparing for a big Christmas rush—only three weeks off. The south end and north end florists say that Thanksgiving trade was much better this year than last year.

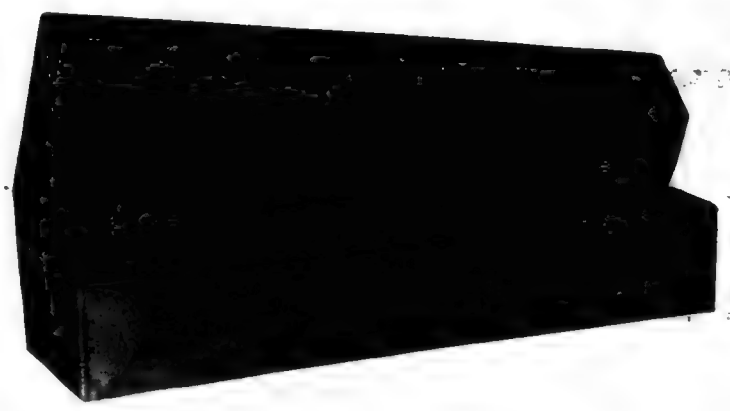
Business has exceeded the expectations of the St. Louis Wholesale Cut Flower Co. A second automobile delivery car was installed last week. The company's motto is, "Service 365 days in the year."

William H. Kruse, the Arsenal street florist, says he put in a busy week furnishing stock for several big weddings and club decorations.

Alex. Lurie, horticulturist at the Missouri Botanical Garden, is busily occupied delivering lectures. He recently spoke before the railroad branch of the Y. M. C. A. on "Flowers for the Home," and on "Winter Protection of Plants" before the Association of Collegiate Alumni of St. Louis.

The Bourdet Floral Co., as usual, will have a grand lot of Christmas plants for the local trade. The big range at Tower Grove and Magnolia avenues is ablaze with extra fine stock in this line.

Martin Reukauf, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia; Frank Farney, of the M. Rice Co., Philadelphia, and Julius Dilloff, representing Schloss Bros., of New York, were visitors here last week. J. J. B.



LA FAYETTE, IND.

The chrysanthemum show at Purdue University was held at the university greenhouses and attracted considerable attention from the townspeople. About 3,500 visited the greenhouses on the last day of the show.

The chrysanthemum exhibit consisted of a large collection of standard varieties, singles and pompons. A fine lot of William Turner grown in the bench and also in pots seemed of especial interest to the visitors. Most of these blooms were over two feet in circumference. Tape lines were fastened around some of the largest blossoms to satisfy the spectators' desire to know "just how large that flower is."

Other features of the exhibit which attracted favorable comment were an attractive display of baskets of flowers of various kinds and a special exhibit of table decorations by the students on a competitive basis. Another feature which attracted interest among the university people was a modern greenhouse erected by the students and embodying the latest ideas in greenhouse construction. PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The first seven days of the social season, including Thanksgiving day and the early days of December, have brought changes in the cut flower market. Chrysanthemums have virtually closed their season, a season that was better at the end than at any other period. The Thanksgiving demand cleared nearly all that were left, which were not a great many. Now Jeanne Nonin, a few Eaton, Chadwick, Mistletoe, Crane and some pompons are all that are left. The list sounds well, but there is not much to it.

The absence of the chrysanthemums and the short crops of roses have left a void in the market that makes the demand rather ahead of the supply of choice stock. Prices have not advanced much, but they are firmer, with a likelihood of soon going higher. So far Thanksgiving marked the high tide, which receded slightly afterward. There is a little more valley about and decidedly more orchids and gardenias. Easter lilies are in demand, while Paper Whites and stevia meet with favor. Sweet peas are getting more plentiful; they show a vast difference in quality. The low-price peas do not compare with the fancy orchid-flowered peas. The shipping demand is active, showing unmistakably that many sellers now are becoming buyers.

Club Meeting.

The regular meeting of the Florists' Club was held in the club room of Horticultural hall Tuesday, December 5. Harry Bates, J. M. Brown, G. G. Edmundson and Charles Niemann were elected members. Bartley J. Doyle, vice-president of the World's Salesmanship Congress, delivered a telling address. He urged the broadening influence of organizations, proposing that each member must contribute some ideas in order to get the most benefit from such associations.

The Florex Gardens, of North Wales, exhibited a handsome vase of Rose September Morn, a light pink sport of Prima Donna, which they will send out next spring. Montague C. Wright, who has made such a wonderful success of the Lord & Burnham Co. Philadelphia office, will take charge of his company's Chicago office at New Year's.

The Chrysanthemum Season.

Exception has been taken to the note that appeared in this column last week to the effect that William K. Harris considered the chrysanthemum season just closed the best in seven years. Phil had previously published his own conclusions on this point. These were gathered from many sources and were, in brief, that the season had been an uncommonly bad one, particularly so during the first three weeks of November. Mr. Harris differed from this view

Christmas Plants.

The importance of Christmas plants to the retail florist lies in their being there, so to speak. The price is known, the stock is seen, there is no uncertainty about it. The plant growers have been making greater efforts each year to meet the growing demand for stock suitable for Christmas—showy, colored flowering plants; hardy, graceful foliage plants; both in specimen and in combination. To afford Review readers an opportunity of knowing what is being done today the following notes have been carefully gathered this week:

The Robert Craig Co.

The company has grown at Norwood and Forty-ninth and Market streets a stock of Christmas plants that is remarkable. The poinsettias entirely fill a 300-foot house. The plants, both for quantity and for quality, rank high. The bracts are large, perfect and richly colored; the foliage is all there. Many of them are made up in large pans that present a shapely appearance. The cyclamens are probably the best the company has ever grown. They run through all the standard sizes. The brighter colors are gradually displacing those most in vogue a few years ago. Their cleanliness is an added attraction. A new addition to the begonias is Mrs. Peterson, a bright pink with extremely dark foliage that affords a striking contrast. Lorraine and Lonsdale are good; so, too, is Konkurent, the improved Cincinnati, which is believed to be more durable. The combination boxes so successful last season have been improved upon this year. They are filled with a charming assortment of colored foliage plants and ferns.

The crotons, always the feature of Norwood, are highly colored and in all sizes. They show advance in that the popular varieties are grown in increasing numbers. The dracænas are in fine form and show that bright coloring so much desired at Christmas. Areca lutescens in specimen sizes occupies more than one large house; it is going out rapidly. The ferns are well grown and show that particular attention has been given to the basket as well as to the specimen sizes. Oranges, ficus and pandanus add richness to the assortment.

Godfrey Aschmann.

Mr. Aschmann's place looks well. It is noteworthy for the close attention given to the preparation of the medium sizes of foliage and flowering plants. It is evident that the aim is to offer those varieties of plants most wanted at Christmas, in the sizes most used. Araucarias, kentias, ferns, rubbers are here in great numbers; poinsettias, begonias, cyclamens, too. The flowering specialties of the place are the azaleas —some are forced for Christmas—and the lovely little primroses. Begonia luminosa probably is considered far less important that its elegant sister, Lorraine. It is a charming plant that is particularly well done here.

Henry I. Faust.

This able grower's place at Merion will make its mark this year in the production of Christmas plants. A house of poinsettias made up with Pteris Victoriæ is highly creditable; flower and foliage evidence culture at a glance. Two houses of cyclamens in several sizes comprise 4,000 plants. The plants are beautifully finished, testifying to that skillful watering for which Mr. Faust is noted.

Teddy, Jr., considered the best of the Bostons, is the fern specialty. For its benefit the old term "pedestal-grown" is revived, as indicative of superiority due to increased space.

Aschmann Bros.

Azalea Vervæneana and Azalea Mme. Petrick are forced at the Aschmann Bros. place in numbers for Christmas. Despite the war, the plants have arrived from Belgium and promise well. The poinsettias are a joy. Made up with green, they present a most attractive appearance. Lorraine begonia is grown in good style for specimens; Begonia magnifica for smaller plants. Cyclamens have become an important factor on the place. They are grown in quantity, nicely grown in a good assortment of colors.

There is a great quantity of pretty primroses. The ferns are an important product of the place. From the glorious 11-inch tub specimens down to the little thumb-pot ferns for ferneries, all are well done. Perhaps one of the most unusual sizes is the 4-inch that affords material between the fernery size and the 6-inch. These 4-inch plants of Cyrtomium Rochfordianum, the holly plants, Pteris Wilsonii and so forth are extremely nice. There are araucarias, palms and so forth to make up a good assortment.

Various Notes.

The American Rose Society committee held an enthusiastic meeting at the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. store on the afternoon of December 5. The First Regiment armory was engaged for the week of March 20, for a rental of $1,000. There will be no trades' display. All the large floor space will be devoted to the exhibitors of plants and flowers.

Paul Berkowitz was taken ill while away from home last week and was obliged to return to this city. Mr. Berkowitz is improving, though still confined to the house.

Fred Dettrick, of Wyomissing, gave a turkey dinner and motor ride to some of his friends December 3. The party visited Charles Dudman, of Llanerch; Peter J. Vervaecke, of Media; William A. Leonard, of Lansdowne, and others. Mr. Dettrick showed some fine yellow and white narcissi, potted poinsettias, stevia, snaps and calendulas. Mr. Leonard's roses look promising, as do Mr. Dudman's carnations.

Frank R. Hastings had a handsome Thanksgiving day wedding that taxed his energies beyond the limits of the 8-hour law. A pleasant incident, which means so much to all of us, was the appreciation of the people for whom the work was done.

The Philadelphia Cut Flower Co. is receiving Ophelia of blue ribbon grade.

The proprietors of the Keeney Flower Store and the Cumberland Greenhouses, of Harrisburg, Pa., were with us recently.

J. Max Nitzschke has terminated his connection with the Forrest Flower Shop.

The Market.

In previous years Thanksgiving day usually has been cold and the ground covered with snow. But this year it was an ideal Indian summer day; not a plant was wrapped for delivery. Flowers were everywhere. No family gathering was complete without them; football enthusiasts bought liberally; the great dining halls were elaborately decorated; the leading retailers had large orders for out-of-town of boxes of mums, roses, violets and orchids. There was little left unsold the night before Thanksgiving. Most of the wholesalers remained open until after midnight. Prices were held firmly, but were not unreasonable, though the volume of receipts from the growers was not so large as anticipated.

Carnations made the only serious drop on the holiday, having been put on too high a pedestal to begin with. Mums, too, were held by many a little above their value, and those quick to realize this were the fortunate ones to clean up. Orchids were scarce and high. So were roses and violets, the latter going to $1.50 and $2 per hundred. Large gigas were held at $1 and over.

All the roses advanced to the highest quotations of the season, from 75 cents each for the best American Beauties down to $2 and $3 per hundred for No. 2 blooms of the hybrid teas. December 1 and 2 the arrivals of everything were light and good prices for all flowers were maintained. There was a marked shortage of American Beauties. Prices should hold well until after Christmas for Beauties, and also for Hadley, the only real competitor of Beauty. Of other roses there has been a light supply. Prices for the best of the teas are higher all along the line. Nothing under 3 cents was the rule at the week's end and from that up to $12 per hundred. Orchids have been kings for a day and for ten days, the advance being gradual; 75 cents seems to be top at present, though some have claimed sales at a much higher figure. Violets also have had a brief season of triumph, thanks to Yale and a general return of their popularity.

Since Thanksgiving carnations have been selling at from $2 to $4 per hundred. November 29 and 30 an effort to fix the top price at $6 met with serious objections from the professional buyers, and the drop was sudden and decisive.

The shortage in gardenias is abnormal. Good flowers are worth $4 and even $5 per dozen. Larger shipments are expected soon. Lilies of all kinds are higher, $8 per hundred being the average quotation for longiflorum. Valley continues strong, with $6 as the top price. Calendulas, callas, mignonette, narcissi, pansies and southern gladioli are abundant.

The supply men have hemlock, oak leaves, wild smilax, pine, mistletoe, red berries and unlimited stocks of wreaths, holly and southern and northern evergreens.

S. B. Wertheimer spent Thanksgiving at Havana, Cuba. He is away on a little pleasure trip, resting up after the heaviest season's business ever done by Wertheimer Bros.

At the November meeting of the Associated Retail Florists, Inc., the candidacy of George E. M. Stumpp for president of the New York Florists' Club was endorsed and a resolution urging his election was unanimously passed. Mr. Stumpp is one of the charter members of the retailers' association, its treasurer and a director. Among other business was the reëlection of the entire board of officers. Thirteen retailers were elected to membership: Herman Warendorff, William C. Mansfield, Henry Hart, E. J. Hession, John Curry, Wm. Kather, Charles A. Small, Harry Ramm, W. A. Blaedel Sons, Harry Gressner, Herman Kuhn, Robert C. Wilson and Paul F. Meissner. At the close of the business session, a large roasted turkey, a masterpiece by that floral and culinary expert, J. B. Nugent, Jr., was demolished. Included in the destruction were the proper concomitants. The next meeting of the association will be held December 19.

The Market.

The Thanksgiving trade was satisfactory to both retailers and wholesalers. All seasonable stock sold well. Many report an unusual increase in business for the day. Growers cut all the mums in bloom, as they sold well at good prices. Bonnaffon and Chadwick were the leaders. There was a good demand for pompons, especially for basket work. Pot plants of begonias and chrysanthemums sold well. Baskets, too, met with excellent demand, and vio-

GET READY

Festoon Winding Machines Improved

Fourth year on the market. Two types. Makes all kinds of Festooning. Type No. 1 will wrap on any size wire used for its center. One turn with handle gives two wraps on Festooning. Center wire is measured while Festooning is wound, which el minates measuring of Festooning. Type No. 2: Fine wire is used for the center, one turn with handle gives one wrap on Festooning. Does equally as good work as Type No. 1. We furnish machines ready to work, with enough wire to make 500 yards. Three days' trial allowed. Money refunded if machine is not what you want. Prices:

lets had a good run. Carnations are improving considerably. The demand for them is strong and the prices good. There was a strong call for red carnations, with only a light supply of this color. Russell at present is the best and most popular rose. The supply of Paper Whites and stevias has increased materially and the stock is clearing well. All green goods are scarce.

Various Notes.

W. J. Barnes had the largest Thanksgiving trade in his career. He sold a large quantity of cut stock, but a good number of chrysanthemum and begonia plants also were sold.

The Peterson Floral Co. had the decorations for the new Mid-Center theater. The store reports business good during the entire fall.

Samuel Murray reports Thanksgiving trade excellent. He sold heavily of Lorraine begonias.

A. F. Barbe disposed of all his mums. He cut more than 5,000 carnations last week.

Arthur Newell reports the business thirty per cent better than that of last Thanksgiving. Eaton and Chadwick mums were his best sellers.

The W. L. Rock Flower Co. had a heavy Thanksgiving day trade. Basket and corsage work was surprisingly good.

The George M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co. reports business up to expectations. The stock in the greenhouses is improving steadily.

Fred Fromholdt reports that, for a beginner in business, trade was far better than he expected. He sold out completely and had to buy more to meet the demand.

The Alpha Floral Co. made a clean sweep of everything. It was the largest business the company ever did at Thanksgiving.

T. J. Noll & Co. report the business doubled over that of last year at Thanksgiving. More than 8,000 yellow Bonnaffons were sold. The store was empty early in the day.

Henry Kusik & Co. moved more than 14,000 mums for the Thanksgiving trade. Orders for wirework are becoming heavier again.

C. H. Hartman says that the nursery business has been heavy this fall. He complains of lack of room in which to do all the business.

Visitors last week were P. M. Koontz, of the McGregor Bros. Co., Sprinfield, O., and William P. Ward, of the D. Hill Nursery Co., Dundee, Ill. W. J. B.

DAVENPORT, R. ISLAND, MOLINE.

The Markets.

The Thanksgiving trade was about up to the average of the same day of other years. Chrysanthemums were the principal sellers, with an increasing demand for pompons and singles. Roses, with the exception of Killarney, were in rather short supply. Violets are not so plentiful as formerly. Sweet peas, antirrhinums and Paper Whites are to be had. The sale of carnations is increasing and the supply is good. The demand for potted plants is not large, but is on the advance.

Various Notes.

William J. Westphall, one of Davenport's old-time and well known florists, passed away November 29, at the home of his sister. The decedent and Mrs. Westphall celebrated their sixtieth wedding anniversary a few weeks ago. For many years Mr. Westphall operated greenhouses on North Brady street and had a store in the downtown district. He retired from the florists' business in 1902.

Mr. and Mrs. William Knees, Jr., who recently returned from a wedding trip to Nebraska, were treated to a surprise by the members of the Tri-City Florists' Club Monday, November 26. The club members called on the couple in a body at the cozy bungalow in Moline and presented them with a handsome electric lamp. Lunch was served and a pleasant time enjoyed by all. W. G.

Greenford, O.—A disastrous fire which apparently originated in the heating plant last week almost entirely destroyed the range of Frank Knauf, whose establishment is located north of this place. The loss is estimated at $5,000. No insurance was carried and it is doubtful whether Mr. Knauf will rebuild.

FOR SALE—An old established wholesale and retail seed house, handling a full line of Field, Flower and Garden Seeds, Plants, Bulbs, Nursery Stock, Garden Implements, Sprayers, Poultry, Pigeon, Dog and Dairy Supplies, located in the heart of the down town retail district, in a city of 500,000 in the central part of the U. S., established over a half century, issuing an up-to-date catalogue, and doing the largest retail business in the city. New and modern fixtures, often being complimented by the traveling fraternity, good organization of young men, needing only an old experienced seed man with $20,000 to $30,000 to handle it properly to make big money. Business in good shape, but owner too heavily interested in other direction to give it the proper attention. Here is an excellent opportunity for some experienced seed man to get into business for himself. Just what you have been waiting for. Address No. 61, care Florists' Review, Chicago.

The Market.

Although flowers are a luxury and prices of foodstuffs and manufactured products are soaring high, there is an extremely large demand for cut flowers and potted plants, and the average receipts greatly surpass those of any previous year. The weather has been fair and all that could be wished to bring along the cut for the first holiday. The supply of roses was heavy, but the demand kept the market cleaned up every day. There was a shortage felt in Ophelia, Hoosier Beauty, Hadley and American Beauty roses.

and Killarney Brilliant sold for $4, $7 and $9 per hundred. Not nearly enough American Beauties could be obtained. These sold at $1 to $4 per dozen.

The local growers could not begin to satisfy the demand for chrysanthemums. There is room for other flowers now that the glut of chrysanthemums has passed. Carnations were scarce and nothing in addition to the standing orders could be filled. The demand was much larger than the supply, but the price remained at $2, $3 and $4 per hundred. Greens were plentiful, with the exception of smilax.

ket and meets with a good demand. The cuts of rubrum and Easter lilies are about over. Freesia Purity and Paper White narcissi are coming along fast and meet with a good demand, with the prices good. Violets and Cecile Brunner roses of good quality arrive in fair quantities. Orchids and valley are inadequate to meet the requirements.

Potted plants were good sellers for Thanksgiving, with the exception of chrysanthemums, which did not move quite so well this year, especially the pompons. Cyclamens, primroses, begonias, Boston and Whitmani ferns, Sprengeri and plumosus moved well at good prices.

Various Notes.

Coal this year became a serious question with the growers. The mines could not get cars enough to send the coal along and it looked as though several of the growers would freeze.

The new range of glass of the Miller Floral Co., at Farmington, is a big help to the trade this season.

Bert Gray, of the B. C. Morris Floral Co., is expected to report for work next week, after an illness of several months from typhoid fever.

George K. Uno, of the Willes-Horne Co., says that business has improved since election. Thanksgiving brought a fine demand for the more expensive plants and flowers.

The Miller Floral Co. is moving into its fine new office building. The building is a story and one-half high and built of red brick laid with black mortar. The interior is finished in birch, with maple floors. Manager Robert Miller reports an increase in business of thirty-three and one-third per cent over that of a year ago and that the stock is in splendid condition for Christmas.

The Huddart Floral Co. reports business better than ever before, especially BOSTON.

The Market.

Business for Thanksgiving proved to be exceptionally good, far ahead of what had been expected. Nearly all kinds of flowers sold well and the market experienced one of the best cleanups it has had for a long time. Roses were off crop with nearly everyone and sold out easily. The best Beauties made $50 per hundred, a few specials making 60 cents. Hybrid tea roses sold all the way from $2 to $20 per hundred, some fancy stock realizing a little more. Carnations did not move so well as had been expected, $3 to $4 being the average rate, with some fancies making a little more. Chrysanthemums made a considerable advance and cleaned up well. Violets averaged $1 per hundred. All other flowers cleared nicely. Cattleya labiata sold at $9 to $12 per dozen, and C. Percivaliana at $6 to $7, with cypripediums at $12 per hundred.

Since Thanksgiving business has been good and prices are holding well up to the holiday figures. Roses are in a strong position, as flowers on 9-inch stems have made as much as $6 per hundred. All growers are in short crop and there is considerable scurrying around on the part of buyers to secure sufficient blooms of Ophelia, Hadley, Russell, Miller and other favorites. Everything sells quickly, no matter how short the stems. Carnations clean up easily; so, in fact, do all flowers. Chrysanthemums are nearing the end, with prices double those of a week ago. Cattleyas are scarce and high-priced.

The pot plant trade has been good. Included now are Euphorbia jacquiniæflora, poinsettias, Otaheite oranges and practically the full line of Christmas plants. Dealers in evergreens, wreaths, etc., are busy and report an unprecedented demand.

Various Notes.

Newman S. Wax, father of Martin and Samuel Wax, of Wax Bros., one of Boston's pioneer florists, and now 87 years of age, underwent an operation at the City hospital November 25. I am pleased to report that he is convalescing nicely. Wax Bros. report an exceptionally strong Thanksgiving demand, practically all flowers selling well.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club will hold a field day at Framingham, Mass., December 16, to inspect the establishments of S. J. Goddard and other noted growers. Framingham field days always attract a big attendance, carnations being well grown there.

J. Seaver, of Framingham Junction, is coming to the front with his carnations this season. It would be hard to find better Pink Delight, Alice, Matchless, Beacon and Fenn than he has.

Because Thanksgiving fell on the regular day for the contests between the bowling league teams, no match was played last week. The next meeting of the league teams is December 7.

F. J. Dolansky still is cutting some good Cattleya labiata and C. Percivaliana. All cattleyas now are realizing fancy prices and the scarcity for Christmas promises to be quite acute.

November gave us a precipitation far below the normal. The total fall was 1.52 inches, of which half fell on Thanksgiving day. The average November rainfall is 4.50 inches. We now are over nine inches short of rainfall since the end of July.

Robert Cameron and W. N. Craig are attending the annual convention of the National Association of Gardeners at Washington, D. C., this week.

J. N. Keeler, New England representative of Hitchings & Co., will give an illustrated lecture entitled "Greenhouses, Their Design, Arrangement and Constructon," at the Gardeners' and Florists' Club meeting, December 19. The annual election of officers will occur the same evening.

Peter Fisher's name is a household one wherever carnations under glass are grown. This season he went into rose culture and his Ophelias are the equal of any coming into the Boston market.

Recent callers included Harry Turner, representing the Morris Nursery Co., of Morrisville, Pa.

W. E. Fischer, who succeeds E. O. Orpet at Lake Forest, Ill., was given a send-off banquet at the Hotel Brewster

The Market.

Business was uncommonly good last week. Comparing the Thanksgiving trade with that of former years, we find a steady and satisfactory increase. It was an unusually busy holiday and the volume of sales exceeded the expectations of most tradesmen. The stock was well up to its good standard and was plentiful along most lines. The business brought advanced prices on nearly all kinds of cut flowers. The greater bulk of the chrysanthemums was cleared satisfactorily, but some growers will have sufficient blooms to last until Christmas. Fine Eaton, Golden Wedding, Patty, Enguehard and Bonnaffon mums were the best sellers. These varieties always prove the best keepers.

Carnations are arriving in good quantities; the blooms and stems are improving nicely. Red varieties are being held back for Christmas. Sweet peas are reaching us in small shipments and sell well. Violets are in splendid condition and move easily. Orchids and gardenias sell well. Valley is fine, but the advanced price undoubtedly will diminish the sale of it. The shipments of roses are not so heavy as heretofore, but the quality is good. Montrose and Ophelia are popular favorites. Bouvardia and stevia are found useful at this time and sell well. Paper Whites move easily. Pompons have slackened up considerably and only a few remain on the market. Easter and calla lilies arrive slowly, and clear quickly in funeral pieces. Roman hyacinths and tulips have made their appearance and sell well. Greens are plentiful.

Various Notes.

Mrs. Edwin C. Armbrust has left on three or four weeks' visit to her parents in Connecticut.

Charles Lee, of Barnard, N. Y., has been cutting a large quantity of Bonnaffon mums. His carnation house is in good condition and prospects are for large holiday cuts.

mas rush, which will be its headquarters for holly and greens. Wreaths will be made on the premises. The first consignment of laurel roping and pine has arrived and is in first-class shape.

The Rochester Floral Co. had an attractive window display for Thanksgiving. Baskets of flowers were placed in the bottom of the window and a large archway, eight feet high, was used in the background. The archway was covered with greens and yellow pompons were used in tubes. Yellow ribbons hung from the arch in curtained effect.

E. C. Armbrust, of H. E. Wilson's, spent December 3 at Buffalo, N. Y.

Jacob Thomann & Sons report business good. They had a splendid Thanksgiving trade.

The department of parks has completed the planting of about 200,000 bulbs in the various parks of the city. The chrysanthemum display at the Lamberton conservatory, Highland park, is good and includes many new varieties.

Hugo Teute is bringing some good cyclamens and primulas to the various stores. These sell quickly. His Cincinnati begonias also are in fine condition and full of blooms.

H. E. Wilson has a house of good poinsettias coming along nicely. The plants are large and have plenty of good foliage. His Jerusalem cherries are well berried. H. J. H.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.
President, Kirby B. White, Detroit, Mich.; Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

C. R. CHESMORE, of Chesmore-Eastlake Merc. Co., St. Joseph, Mo., was in Chicago last week.

WM. C. RICKARDS, of J. M. Thorburn & Co., New York, was in Chicago December 1 and 2.

W. P. STUBBS, of Wood, Stubbs & Co., Louisville, Ky., was in Chicago the first part of the week.

C. R. KIMBERLIN, of the Kimberlin Seed Co., Santa Clara, Cal., was in Chicago November 30 and December 1.

H. A. BUNYARD, New York, has closed the "Up-town Seed Store" and taken desk room at 42 West Twenty-eighth street.

THE Ohio state canners' convention will be held at Columbus, December 12 and 13. Several seed houses will be represented.

THE first general seed catalogue is overdue; ordinarily The Review receives it in the first week of December and almost always from Columbus, O.

ON this week's boat from Copenhagen Loewith, Larsen & Co. had 111 bags of turnip seed and there were numerous other smaller shipments of Danish vegetable seeds.

D. V. BURRELL, Colorado seed grower of many years' standing, is entering the mail order field. He has begun advertising his catalogue in magazines of general circulation.

THE Indiana State Canners' convention was, according to A. H. Smith, of the Leonard Seed Co., an exceptionally successful and optimistic meeting, more business of all kinds being done than there has been seen at similar previous conventions for several years.

THE government of the Netherlands in late November added a number of varieties of vegetable seeds to the list which may not be exported. Embargoes gradually are shutting off such seed supplies as are not interrupted by the blockade, so America seems likely to be forced to become practically self-reliant.

ACCORDING to E. S. Leonard, of the Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, indications are that prices of onion sets will be higher next year than this, due to the fact that farmers are obliged to ask more because of the higher cost of labor, etc. It is also becoming more difficult to obtain acreage for onion sets.

INDICATIONS are that Michigan and French-grown radish seed is going to be one of the scarcest articles in the way of small garden seeds, and that higher prices will therefore obtain. Recent reports state that the French crops were almost a complete failure, while the Michigan crop is light. There are gardeners and other critical buyers who have thought they could not use any other radish seed.

THE Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, has made a new house rule against the use of beer or other intoxicating drinks by its employees during business hours. The company believes that its employees can find a better use for their money and furthermore that they will be more capable and efficient in their work by abstaining during business hours. The rule, therefore, was made with a view toward the better health and greatest good of the men, and to thereby promote greater efficiency in all departments.

EVERITTS GET JAIL SENTENCES.

Some time ago J. A. Everitt, the Indianapolis seedsman, who also is publisher of a farm paper, and his son were indicted by a federal grand jury on a charge of using the mails to defraud. They since have been on bail and the trade expected that when the case came

LILY BULBS

OUR MOTTO: "Your dollar's value."

Those who know will grow Reburn & Co. lily bulbs, for they are fertilized (the truth without fear or favor), and feeding the bulbs at growing stage positively produces the best results, maturing a healthy, sound bulb; three times rogued and cultivated by the oldest and best experienced growers in Japan. GIGANTEUM of superb quality.

MULTIFLORUM for early Easter, true Kiota type, as you knew Multiflorum twelve to fifteen years ago. Easter, 1918, is March 31. Try a few cases. Supply limited.

FORMOSUM, black and green stem. The best Oshimo ever produced. Write for prices on all sizes and quantities.

Let us figure on your French and Dutch order for fall, 1917. Our connections are reliable. Read our motto.

Cold storage GIGANTEUM BULBS all the year. All sizes. Ask for prices. See offer of Gladioli in Classified Department.

to trial a minimum penalty might be imposed for a technical violation of the law. It was a surprise, therefore, when they pleaded guilty in the Federal court December 4 and were sentenced by Judge Anderson to serve eighteen months in prison. The Indianapolis Star gives the following report:

"James A. Everitt, 68 years old, publisher of a farm magazine and organizer and former president of the American Society of Equity, and his son, Sibley F. Everitt, treasurer of the publishing company, were sentenced to serve eighteen months each in the federal prison at Atlanta, Ga. Both men live in Indianapolis. They pleaded guilty to a charge of using the mails in furthering a scheme to defraud.

"The specific charge was publishing a misleading advertisement in their farm magazine in which they pretended to offer free seeds upon application. Persons who answered the advertisement were informed they would have to remit a dollar for subscription to the magazine. Later statements were mailed to these persons, to show they owed the Everitt company for the seeds. Later still another letter, ostensibly from an adjustment company, was mailed, in which was contained a veiled threat of filing a law suit unless the money was paid.

"Both defendants admitted the adjustment company did not exist, except as represented by themselves. They also said they made a mistake in printing the advertisement, but asserted they had made adequate restitution. More than 10,000 persons were enrolled as subscribers through this scheme, they testified, and the amount collected through that medium was estimated at $5,000. In imposing sentence, Judge

SNAPDRAGON

For spring blooms and a bumper crop Memorial Day grow Snapdragon. The flowers sell themselves and are easy to handle, requiring no "green" or making-up. Sow at once seed of the following varieties:

My original Silver Pink at $1.00 per pkt.; 3 for $2.50; 7 for $5.00. Seed of Nelrose, Garnet, Yellow, Light Pink, Phelps' White and Fancy Mixed at 35c per pkt.; 3 for $1.00. All orders cash. Free cultural directions.

Remember, you can grow no plant that will equal Snapdragon for cut flowers.

G. S. RAMSBURG

Somersworth, N. H.

Anderson gave both men a severe rebuke, declaring the scheme to be one of the meanest attempts at fraud he had ever encountered. He said it was worse than a fake foot race or a green goods swindle, in that the promoters were men of professed intelligence who were attempting to instruct the farmers of the country as to the best methods of marketing their crops."

"SEEDS FOR THE WORLD."

In the Garden Magazine for December, to be found on most news stands, Adolph Kruhm has an illustrated article four pages in length entitled "Growing Seeds for the World." While written for the garden lover, the amateur planter, the article contains much that will be of interest to every thoughtful seedsman. Mr. Kruhm is himself well known in the trade, having been employed by a number of leading houses. He has written seed catalogues for years and has been in close touch with sources of supply. The present article is said to be "the first published account of the history of seed growing; it is the result of the first systematic attempt to trace the interesting, even romantic progress of mankind in a little-known field." Mr. Kruhm asserts that the center of the seed trade has shifted from Germany, England or France to California, where the 1916 seed crop he estimates to be valued at $2,000,000, the largest item being 1,500,000 pounds of sweet peas. There are so few men who have any real knowledge of the acreage and production of seeds in general in this country that the average seedsman will read with interest the estimates Mr. Kruhm makes of the extent of the seed-growing industry in various localities.

MOTT-LY GLEANINGS.

The McVay Seed Co., of Birmingham, reports a big increase in counter trade. The summer floods hurt country sales generally, but fall planting is brisk.

Otto Schwill & Co., the Tucker-Mosby Seed Co. and the Ullathorne Seed Co., all of Memphis, Tenn., report a good general business up and down the river.

The Schisler-Corneli Seed Co., of St. Louis, Mo., reports a big southern business. E. Corneli has been sick for some time, but now is improving rapidly.

The St. Louis Seed Co. is having excellent business. Bulbs are fine and selling well. Sweet pea seeds for winter sowing are in good demand, says Manager August Hummert.

The Schisler & Kaercher Seed Co., of St. Louis, states that this is the best season for heavy seeds in its experience.

The Diggs & Beadles Co., of Richmond, Va., mentions the fact that practically twelve crops are now moving and that truckers were never better pleased with returns. So the sale of seed for next season should be large.

T. W. Wood & Sons, of Richmond, never passed through a busier or more perplexing season. It taxed all their resources, is the opinion of Manager Thomas Whittet. W. M.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

Bend, Ore.—M. Keeney has succeeded M. G. Coe in the greenhouse business established here by Mr. Coe a number of years ago.

Sacramento, Cal.—A wholesale and retail florists' business has been launched at Brighton under the name of Brighton Floral Co., with Charles Reese as manager.

Dayton, Wash.—A. J. Pugh has purchased a greenhouse here and says that some day he hopes to receive his master's degree in both the fine art of growing flowers and the shrewd game of selling flowers.

San Bernardino, Cal.—Growers of Riverside, Redlands and San Bernardino participated non-competitively in the flower show recently held here. Among the exhibitors were Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Pease, of 836 D street; F. P. Hosp, of Riverside; William Collett, City Nurseries, of Redlands; Mrs. A. L. Hurtt, 425 Third street, and the Kavan Nurseries.

Corvallis, Ore.—G. F. Moznette, assistant entomologist of the Oregon Agricultural College and Experiment Station, is investigating the cyclamen mite, both as regards its distribution and remedial measures. He states that on the Pacific coast the pest is unusually prevalent this year and that he doubts whether fifty per cent of the growers will have their usual success with their holiday crops.

EELWORM DISEASE.

The occurrence and spread of the bulb and stem infesting nematode or eelworm (Tylenchus dipsaci), which has been recently found producing a serious disease of clover in Oregon, should receive general attention, especially in the northwest. Since it was discovered in hyacinth bulbs at Bellingham in 1913, it has been observed each successive year, causing damage to strawberries, onions or clover in other localities of the Pacific northwest. It causes the greatest damage, perhaps, to the hyacinth and other bulbous crops of Holland. Many plants of less economic importance have also been found to be attacked in foreign countries. Some of these are: Forget-me-not, phlox, primrose, buttercup and daisy. Unfortunately, it has been recently introduced into the United States and appears well established in some localities of the Pacific northwest, where conditions seem favorable for its reproduction and spread. Every effort should be made not only to prevent its further introduction into this country, but also to stop its spreading from those localities already infested.

If a small piece of leaf or other infested tissue be carefully torn to pieces by means of pins or needles in a dish containing a few drops of clean water, many of the white, thread-like, adult eelworms, about one-fiftieth of an inch long, can be seen with the naked eye actively moving about in the liquid.

The pest can be transported in many ways. It was probably introduced into the United States in imported bulbs, tubers or plants, or along with shipments of other material which may harbor the parasite. Seeds are even strongly suspected of being the means whereby the parasite is most commonly distributed. It can be carried from field to field by irrigation or surface water, in soil which clings to the feet of man or other animals, to implements, and to the roots of plants, and in garbage, manure or waste matter of any kind containing parts of diseased tissue.

Various means of controlling the pest have been tried, but the most satisfactory as well as the most practicable method consists in the proper system of crop rotation in combination with sanitary measures. By planting infested fields for two or, better still, three successive years to crops which are immune or resistant to the nematode, the pest will be starved out to such an extent that little infestation will occur on a susceptible crop planted the following year. To make the rotation effective, it is highly important that all weeds or other plants which might harbor the parasite be scrupulously eliminated. For this reason, it is advisable to plant the immune crops in rows, so that clean cultivation may be practiced. The following plants, most or all of which are adapted to the Pacific northwest, have not been reported as subject to the nematodes and are, therefore, suggested as rotation crops: Corn, cowpeas, soy beans, millets, tomatoes, asparagus, cabbage, lettuce, cantaloupes and celery.

We are much pleased with the results of our plant advertisements in The Review; orders have come in freely and from a wide range of territory.

gone off crop. The dry weather has been against the violets and these, too, have been scarcer than usual at this time of year. Greenhouse-grown carnations have been fairly plentiful, but the demand has been far above the supply. Many growers have contracted their crops in advance at good prices, and this class of stock is likely to be scarce for some time to come. Outdoor carnations are a mixed lot, much inferior stock as well as good stock being seen.

Mums are practically over, but a few pompons continue to arrive. Orchids are about even with the demand and there is no quotation on valley, the few stems that arrive being snapped up quickly. The Thanksgiving business in town has been encouraging, while the out-of-town shipments have reached a higher plane than ever before. The demand has been principally along the line of better stock than usual, a lead the wholesalers will do well to follow. All kinds of greens and roping, wreaths and similar stock have been in large demand and bring good prices. Inquiries for holiday goods are coming in freely and everything points to a season of big business.

Various Notes.

F. Howard, H. W. Turner and L. Shearer made a flying trip to San Diego this week.

The H. N. Gage Co. sent in the first daffodils of the season November 26—a small but perfect yellow trumpet. L. L. Gage says the bulb stock looks uncommonly well this year, with the exception of Paper Whites, some of which have failed to bloom.

Polder Bros report business good and say that their carnations soon will be ready for shipping.

Fred Hills, of Hills' Nursery, has "sold out" signs on some sizes of Boston and other ferns, but these grow quickly in the congenial air near Hollywood and soon will be plentiful again.

A. F. Borden says that the signs of the times are good at the Redondo Floral Co. store. He says the new location may have something to do with the increased business, but there is a healthy demand among the old customers and the management looks forward to a banner season.

Every wholesaler in town has been rushed with orders and reports a record clean-up.

Arthur Gleave, of Gleave's Flower Shop, Santa Barbara, was among the visitors this week.

The Broadway Florist last week displayed a sign reading "Free Flower Show," an advertising stunt that pays.

The Market.

The Thanksgiving market closed exceptionally strong, in both wholesale and retail departments. There was not an actual shortage of stock, though the effect of the frost still was felt, but the demand was far beyond the supply and high prices prevailed in practically all lines. Holiday decorations and social affairs kept the retailers on the jump, and they literally had to get up early to fill their requirements. Wholesalers had great difficulty in filling orders for distant shipment with the desired promptness.

The large single mums are a little scarce, but their popularity is waning. Pompons, including many fine new varieties, are clearing well at good prices, many having gone east. Bush-grown mums in the Chinese end of the market continue to come in well, but the blooms are fairly large and move well. Buyers were competing for carnations, forcing the price to $1 per bunch November 29. A few marigolds, daisies and cosmos sprays are still seen. Paper Whites and freesias are increasing in supply and demand, and a few anemones have appeared. The cut of roses is fair, American Beauty being a little short. High prices are fully warranted in view of the strong shipping demand.

There is a splendid crop of violets, cool showers having brought them to their best, and they figure largely in the shipments. There is a great movement of red berries, which are plentiful and seem to improve in quality every year. Greens of all kinds, including redwood, also are abundant. An attractive new item in the stores is cut poinsettias, from Los Angeles and local growers. Cyclamens are as popular as usual and some pot schizanthus are appearing. The gardenia cut is coming out nicely and the trade is eager for these, as there are few orchids and practically no valley.

Various Notes.

A division has taken place in the personnel of the Western Evergreen Co. Bert Filipelli, formerly president, and S. P. Pedrini, who was associated with him, have taken the store on Bush street, just above the E. W. McLellan Co., where they will handle all kinds of greens, red berries, etc. They are old hands in this line and are making a good start. The Western Evergreen Co. continues at its old location.

C. Kooyman has had a record Thanksgiving business and is quite optimistic for the holiday season. He has had a nice cut of roses during the last few weeks, but most of these have gone to other markets.

The local shippers, who use large quantities of old newspapers at this season in their packing, are finding unusual difficulty in getting enough of this material. As for regular wrapping paper, everybody is in the same boat.

The E. W. McLellan Co. now is cutting about 10,000 baby roses daily. Most of these are used in the shipping trade, for which they also are supplying large quantities of asparagus and adiantum. The company reports the prospects favorable for good crops in all lines.

Friends in the trade will regret to learn that Mrs. Frank Pelicano still is ill.

H. Behrens, of the San Francisco Seed Co., reports a successful bulb season. He says the only difficulty was that certain kinds were hard to get in sufficient quantity to meet the demand.

Pelicano, Rossi & Co. decorated the home of Miss Mary Phelan on Washington street for the elaborate reception given November 27 in honor of Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo and Mrs. McAdoo. The house was only recently completed. Clusters of white and golden chrysanthemums were arranged against a bank of ferns and autumnal foliage in the library. The same effect was carried out in the reception room, entrance hall and music room.

T. C. Holmes now has full charge of the C. C. Morse & Co. retail store on Market street. He has been with the company for nearly five years and his new position is in the nature of a promotion. He says Dutch bulbs were a little late in arriving this year, but that his company is closing the best season it ever had. He attributes the increased demand for bulbs largely to the exposition last year. In the seed department C. C. Morse & Co. have been filling a large demand for their new early-flowering Spencer sweet peas, which they placed on the market this year. Six varieties are offered at present and they expect to have several more next season.

Domoto Bros. have a fine lot of poinsettias coming on for the holidays. They have gone more extensively into the growing of poinsettias this season than ever before.

E. James, of Oakland, is bringing in some fine cyclamen plants; also a nice lot of primroses. S. H. G.

The city of Burlingame has filed suit against the E. W. McLellan Co., of San Francisco, with a large range of greenhouses at Burlingame, in which the city seeks to force the company to abandon its nursery because the fertilizer used by the company is offensive to Burlingame people. The suit is brought under a code providing that business shall be conducted in a legal manner, without interference with the rights and privileges of neighbors.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

The volume of business during November exceeded that of November, 1915, by fifteen to thirty-five per cent, according to reports at hand. The profits to both growers and retailers must show even a greater improvement, for higher prices ruled and no stock was wasted. The demand for Thanksgiving was the greatest ever known; practically everything on hand was sold, both in cut and potted stock. Excellent weather brought people out and they bought flowers generously. Carnations sold for $1 per dozen and the larger pompon mums, which were not offered in bunches, also sold at $1. Yellow mums were most sought; Eaton, Chadwick and Bonnaffon were the leading varieties.

There was more than a normal run of funeral work during the week, with a special rush on the day after Thanksgiving. The fall drought held back the work of the nurserymen, but was a benefit to their stock, which is well cured.

Various Notes.

L. C. Shearer, who recently sold his interest in the Erie Greenhouses, has bought from James Wilkinson a range of houses at Gladstone. He intends to grow pot plants and bedding stock.

A. F. Lalane has opened a flower store at 311 Morrison street.

H. J. Millatt was laid up for over a week with ptomaine poisoning. He has recovered and is back at his work in the store of Clarke Bros.

Rahn & Herbert have been cutting some excellent Chadwick mums.

On calling at the establishment of the Holden Floral Co., November 28, the writer found Mr. Holden and his entire crew occupied cutting and shipping orders for Thanksgiving flowers, principally mums. Every flower that was ready to cut was sold and some orders were only partially filled. Mr. Holden took time to show his houses of Christmas stock. A hurried look at them was sufficient to verify the reports that Mr. Holden has the finest begonias—Cincinnati and Melior—and poinsettias he ever grew. He has had success with pink poinsettias, both in pans and benched, and has grown a short bench of white ones. He showed me a trial lot of Autocrat mums, which he thinks will prove a desirable variety of mum.

Some benches of Maud Dean were just about right for Christmas cutting. In carnations he is growing Matchless, Victory, Herald and Enchantress Supreme.

Julius A. Schnapp, formerly associated with Chicago florists and recently with the store of the Hollywood Gardens, Seattle, has taken a position in the Clarke Bros. store.

Joseph Huserick, the wire worker, has returned from a business trip to cities in Montana, Idaho and eastern Washington. He said he was well pleased with the results of his trip. Some of the designs wanted were too large to ship, so he made them up on the spot.

A. I. Anderson has the benches in his greenhouse on Milwaukie avenue set to Bonny Best tomatoes and is beset with

It Pays

To Pacific Coast Florists:

What stock have you for sale to the trade? Is it moving as it should? No?

Then tell the trade about it by using the Pacific Coast Pages of The Review.

Pacific Coast advertisers almost invariably report good results. Like this:

Say! That ad's a humdinger for getting the business.—Everett Floral Co., Everett, Wash.

I sold all the Mum cuttings advertised, and you will not hear from me again until I can get some more stock ready. Shall root 100,000 Carnation cuttings for next season, as I know The Review will sell them for me.—Frank Wilhelm, Los Angeles, Cal.

Please cut out of our advertisement in The Review the cyclamen seedlings. We sold all our surplus cyclamen seedlings as a direct result of our advertisement in your paper.—Spokane Greenhouses (Inc.), Spokane, Wash.

We want to say that our last advertisement in The Review brought us orders from both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts. We had, strangely enough, on following days, orders from Salem, Ore., and from Salem, Mass.—State Floral Co., North Yakima, Wash.

We are well pleased with the results obtained by advertising in the Pacific Coast Department of The Review. We sold out clean and refused many orders. The Review surely gives results. —Van Slyke & Seamons, Tacoma, Wash.

the difficulties others have encountered in growing winter tomatoes. Lack of sunshine makes the fruit set poorly and ripen indifferently. So far as reported, no one has been successful in growing tomatoes who tried to produce fruit before March. S. W. W.

PERENNIALS FOR CUT FLOWERS.

Please inform me whether the following perennials are profitable as commercial cut flowers; that is, state whether they can be sold on the wholesale market: Siberian Iris Snow Queen, Hemerocallis Thunbergii, Physostegia Virginica and P. Alba, Helianthus Maximilianii, Eupatorium cœlestinum, Helenium rubrum, any of the varieties of Anemone Japonica, and Lupinus Moerheimii. Please suggest different varieties of the foregoing if there are better ones. R. M. C.—Mich.

Iris orientalis Snow Queen is a free-flowering variety with long stems and is splendid for cutting. While it will grow in almost any soil, it is specially vigorous when planted near water. Hemerocallis Thunbergii is a fine perennial. I have noted it displayed considerably in retailers' windows. H. flava, an early bloomer, is particularly useful at Memorial day. Helianthus Maximilianii would not, in my estimation, be so good a commercial hardy sunflower as H. mollis rigidus Miss Mellish, or even orgyalis, although it keeps well when cut, and ships well. Helenium rubrum and varieties of similar color are used a good deal by retailers in summer, but not so much as the yellow H. autumnale superbum. Eupatorium cœlestinum is little seen, but should prove a fine commercial flower. The white E. ageratoides and E. Fraseri are seen to some extent in September, and are good keepers and shippers.

Lupinus Moerheimii, which is a pink form of L. polyphyllus, is a good flower for cutting, as are the white and blue forms of L. polyphyllus. Anemone Japonica is seldom seen commercially, though it is one of our most beautiful fall-flowering perennials. It needs a year to become well established, must not be planted on ground where there is not perfect drainage and requires a good coating of leaves or straw when the ground freezes. The single A. Japonica alba is the finest white form to grow, and A. Japonica Queen Charlotte the finest of the colored forms. I think there should be an excellent call for these anemones. The trouble so far has been that hardly any commercial florists have grown them. Physostegia Virginica is a good flower for the wholesale trade and has had a place for some years. One grower in my recollection christened it "the Texas heath" and made a good hit with it. P. Virginica alba is not nearly so desirable a variety. C. W.

IN the nursery trade the thing most needed is a general decision to grow less stock and have it of better quality.

THE agents are turning in a surprising number of orders for ornamentals from farmers; now that Dobbin has been displaced by a flivver there is a disposition to plant something besides fruit trees and this year there is plenty of money.

C. O. ALLEN & SON, proprietors of the Allendale Gardens, Delaware, O., purchased the nursery stock of the Delaware Nursery Co., after the company discontinued its business. The business of the Allendale Gardens will be confined principally to the growing of ornamentals.

THE question of raising prices is a serious one in the nursery trade. Practically every item of cost that goes into the production and distribution of nursery stock has advanced sharply this year and there has been no general counterbalancing rise in selling prices; indeed, many items are quoted lower than ever before.

THE first appeal under the Texas Nursery Inspection Act has been made and rejected and will result in litigation to determine the validity of the law, particularly with reference to the authority delegated to state officials to destroy trees and nursery stock infected with disease. In the case in point a state inspector ordered some young fruit trees destroyed. The owners appealed to the proper authority, as provided by law, without avail. An injunction now is expected to be sought by the owners to prevent the state from destroying the trees.

DEALING WITH LANDSCAPE MEN.

[An extract from an address by William Kessler, landscape architect, delivered before the Southern Nurserymen's Association.]

I presume that you will be interested in hearing a few words spoken with reference to the relation between the nurseryman and the landscape architect, and how their relations may be so shaped as to create the greatest good fellowship and mutual profit.

I wish to impress upon you that while we are both in the business for good business reasons, we must not overlook the fact that we are particularly concerned in the improvement of the looks of things in this world, and as we have this responsibility resting on us, we should use the opportunity to carry on this work of improvement in the best possible and most efficient manner. We will really be doing a good work and adding to the attractiveness of the places in which we live, as well as increasing the pleasures of our fellowmen by so doing. Then we have at least done a laudable work whether or not we manage to get rich at it.

Does Antagonism Exist?

I have heard it mentioned several times that there exists a flavor of antagonism between some nurserymen and landscape architects, and I have endeavored to find out the reason for this feeling, if it really exists, and a way in which this antagonism may be overcome.

I think that I am fairly well qualified to express an opinion on the subject, as I have been engaged in both occupations for a good number of years; first I was in the nursery business with the P. J. Berckman's Co. for about ten years, later took up the practice of landscape architecture for them and myself, and still retain an active interest in nursery work.

During the course of this experience, I have come in contact with a great number of nurserymen and landscape architects and am quite familiar with their different methods of doing business with each other and their clients.

I cannot see why the relationship existing between the nurseryman and landscape architect should be other than strong and friendly and closer than it has been, redounding to the mutual benefit of all parties concerned. I believe that with a little better understanding and regulation of business transactions, such will come to pass.

Some Reasons Why.

The landscape architect has probably put himself in a bad light with the nurseryman by presuming that all nurserymen are generally unacquainted with the principles of landscape design, and know plants only for their individual commercial beauty and worth, also by their insistence that the nurseryman shall sell his products to their clients at dealers' wholesale prices.

On the other hand, the nurseryman has, in some instances, antagonized the landscape architect by insinuating to the latter's client that there is nothing in the work of the landscape architect that cannot be undertaken by any good horticulturist. While the landscape architect may know how to draw interesting pictures, he certainly does not know all he ought to about plants, where they will grow, etc., etc.

A Difference in Viewpoint.

The nature of the two occupations, that of the landscape architect and that of the nurseryman, are so different in their chief aims that it is difficult for a nurseryman to become a landscape designer, and vice versa. I say this advisedly, for I have had the experience of metamorphosing from one to the other and know just how long and how difficult it was for me to lose the viewpoint of the nurseryman.

The difference of viewpoint is this—the nurseryman is always striving to produce, originate and sell plants of exceptional novelty, peculiar individual excellence and perfection of form and growth. He therefore puts comparatively little worth in uncultivated, unimproved natural varieties and forms. He is always concentrating his attention on the individual plant and wishes to display it to its best advantage in its highest type of cultivation.

Where the Plant's the Thing.

This aim is so thoroughly inculcated throughout his experience as a nurseryman that it becomes a steadfast habit with him; whenever he arranges plants in public and private grounds it so influences his work that the result is generally the opposite of that which is striven for by the landscape architect, when he is attempting to produce a naturalistic planting. The difference is that the whole planting arrangement, its scale and mass, is seriously affected by the tendency to lose sight of the harmony of form, texture and color of the mass by the desire to display the particular excellence of individual specimens.

Again, he is apt to place specimens on exhibition when there is little reason for their being included in the design, for it should be understood that the successful planting arrangement is that which contains trees, shrubs and plants; that each plant, either as individual specimen or in group formation, should serve some definite object in the composition—that is, modify a

WATERING EVERGREENS.

Each spring many evergreens die, especially broad-leaved ones. This is due much less to winter's cold than to dryness at the root. Evergreens, if moist at the root, will stand a great deal of cold. Those with dry feet, even our own native varieties, will frequently die. In many sections the rainfall has been deficient for several months, and losses in evergreens next spring will be heavy unless the plants are well soaked now, before the ground freezes up. This is particularly true of rhododendrons, which should not receive their winter mulch of leaves unless their roots have been well moistened, and is true of all evergreens planted within the last two or three years.

The Market.

Last week was a humdinger. Thanksgiving business smashed all previous records for good business on that day. Everyone sold out. Out-of-town business, too, was good, both wholesalers and retailers reporting many shipping orders. As to the grade of the stock offered, most of it was of the best. Mums had been held back for Thanksgiving by the growers, but the market nevertheless soon was depleted of both large mums and the pompons. Roses and carnations were of rather inferior quality, the roses showing the effects of the poor weather conditions and the carnations being small and weak-stemmed.

Violets sold well and the supply was exhausted before the Thanksgiving selling began. Orchids were of good quality, but the supply was limited. Boubardia was of good quality and in good supply. Special Thanksgiving boxes sold well. Plants of chrysanthemums, begonias, cyclamens, etc., were well grown and sold readily. A number of prominent weddings calling for large decorations ended the busy week.

Various Notes.

Holm & Olson had a fine lot of mums that was sold out for Thanksgiving. This firm had decorations for several large weddings and supplied the palms, bays, etc., for the opening of the Palace theater.

The Market.

Business during Thanksgiving week continued good for all occasions in which flowers were used. The weather was fine—bright days and nights, with the temperature in the twenties. Stock in general was plentiful and of good quality. Mums are in reduced supply, as the main crop has passed. Roses are not any too plentiful, but carnations are in better supply. Sweet peas, valley and bouvardias are some of the other flowers in lively demand. Among the flowering plants Begonia luminosa seems to be best. Potted mums are about gone.

Various Notes.

Members of the Evansville Florists' Club should remember the date of the next meeting is December 13. The meeting place is the greenhouses of Julius Niednagel & Sons.

C. L. Niednagel says his crop of roses will be just about right for Christmas.

Julius Niednagel & Sons disposed of their main crop of mums to good advantage, with no loss of blooms. The cut of carnations is good, with prospects for a large cut at Christmas. This concern has received a shipment of good azaleas. The begonias and primulas are fine; also bouvardias, for pots and cutting. This concern has a new Ford delivery car, the noiseless kind, with the brass band left off.

Norwood Halbrooks is cutting some fine long-stemmed sweet peas.

J. C. Elspermann is busily occupied in getting in his bulb stock. His plants are good, especially Begonia luminosa.

The Blackman Floral Co. is working before and after hours in order to get out the orders.

Royston & Fenton report a good demand for roses, smilax and greens. They have a seedling coleus about a year old which will be put on the market next year if it continues doing well. It is a fancy, large-leaved variety, medium in height and bushy; good both as a pot plant and for bedding. It has about the same markings as Trailing Queen, but with less green on the leaf.

NEW VARIETIES YOU NEED

NEW POMPONS

Hilda Canning. A bronze seedling from Baby, raised by the Mount Greenwood Cemetery Association. The finest distinct novelty offered in years. It is one which every chrysanthemum grower should include in his planting.

Romaine Warren. In the class with Frank Wilcox, a commercial sort that will be profitable. Orange-bronze in color. Strong grower, making nice sprays. Stiff-stemmed, and needs almost no tying. It is a worthy companion to Golden Climax as a money-maker and will flower between Golden Climax and Frank Wilcox.

Delphine Dodge. Light pink in color, making large, full sprays. Flowers small. It is a big producer per square foot of bench.

Price of above, $2.00 per doz., $15.00 per 100

NEW SINGLE VARIETIES

Katewood. If you grow fancy stock for a high-class trade, Katewood will prove the finest single you have ever grown. It is clear, bright pink in color. A tall, strong grower, and makes the finest individual flowers of any of the Singles.

Virginia Holden. The finest deep crimson ever offered. As deep as Harvard in color and one of the easiest varieties to handle. Makes good sprays and good-sized plants.

Jessica McMurray. A soft rose-pink that follows Mrs. Buckingham into flower. Good for a select trade.

Pink Simplicity. Shell pink, medium dwarf in growth, strong-stemmed. A very choice variety for any grower to handle.

Jane Ingalls. A semi-dwarf seedling from Brutus. Comes into flower for Thanksgiving. Reddish bronze in color. Will make excellent pot plant.

Price of above, $2.00 per doz., $15.00 per 100

BARBARA DAVIS

A. N. Pierson, Inc.

CROMWELL, CONN.

LARGE-FLOWERED CHRYSANTHEMUMS

Barbara Davis. The finest novelty of the season for the commercial grower. A reddish bronze, strongly reflexed with orange reverse to the petal. It is medium dwarf in growth, making strong stems and good foliage. It is a color that sells on sight, being distinct from all other varieties, and there is always a market for good bronze varieties. 2¼-inch, 50c each, $5.00 per doz., $35.00 per 100.

Alice Day. Sent out last season. Has proved to be our best second early white. It follows Oconto. Big, pure white flowers. Strong, sturdy grower, making good stems. The best white in its season. 2¼-inch, $3.00 per doz., $20.00 per 100.

Josephine Foley. A big, pure white that will follow Alice Day, and will, with us, replace Naomah. It is the best white to precede Chas. Rager and White Chieftain. 2¼-inch. $3.00 per doz., $20.00 per 100.

NEW CARNATIONS

Arawana. A crimson seedling of our own raising. Just a good commercial crimson sort that will please you and your trade. Rooted cuttings, $12.00 per 100, $100.00 per 1000.

Nebraska. A fine new scarlet. Large flowers, strong grower, good producer. Rooted cuttings, $6.00 per 100, $50.00 per 1000.

Aviator. Very intense scarlet in color, very free-flowering. Rooted cuttings, $6.00 per 100, $50.00 per 1000.

Nancy. A new light pink that looks good with us. Perfectly formed flowers, of good color. Rooted cuttings, $6.00 per 100, $50.00 per 1000.

BLOOMING AND FOLIAGE PLANTS FOR CHRISTMAS

We have our houses stocked full of choice plants for Christmas sales and we recommend the placing of orders early. As Christmas draws near the Express Companies get over-rushed and you may not get your stock on the day you planned for it. Be on the safe side and place your order at once with the HUSTLERS who always give good value for the money in everything they send out.

BEGONIA Lorraine and Cincinnati. The finest of all blooming plants, full of flowers and very showy, in 6-in. pots, 75c and $1.00 each; extra heavy plants, $1.00 and $1.25 each.
AZALEAS. We have a very fine lot of Mme. Petrick, pink, and Vervaeneana, variegated, in 6 and 7-in. pots, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 and $2.00 each.
CYCLAMEN Giganteum. One of our specialties. Two houses of them, exceptionally fine grown, in bloom and full of buds; 6,000 of them in 4, 6 and 7-in. pots, 4-in., $3.00 per doz.; 6-in., $6.00, $9.00 and $12.00 per doz.; 7-in., $1.50 each.
POINSETTIAS. 5-in. pots, $4.20 per doz.; 8-in. pans, made up, very fine, with Asparagus, planted in October, $1.50 each.

PITTSBURGH.

The Market.

November was a most satisfactory month; excellent business was done. December started in right and business following Thanksgiving day was good. The supply houses have rushed December 1 deliveries, and if the retailers are wise they will gather in everything they will need, as they cannot afford to take chances with belated deliveries. The express companies can procure neither cars nor men to handle their shipments.

Thanksgiving trade at the retail stores was splendid and the outlook for December business is good. Chrysanthemums are a thing of the past. Roses, carnations, narcissi and lilies are in greater demand, but the prices remain about the same. Chrysanthemums were plentiful for Thanksgiving and cleaned up at good prices. Owing to some unfortunate delay with the express companies, the violets intended for Thanksgiving did not arrive until Wednesday evening. This was too late to fill orders and many buyers were disappointed.

Various Notes.

The death of John Baldinger, which occurred December 1, is recorded in the obituary column. Clarke.

ROOTED CARNATION CUTTINGS

IMMEDIATE DELIVERY

¶ We are now booking orders for our new seedling Superb, $12.00 per 100, $100.00 per 1000.

Superb is a sport of Gloriosa and Enchantress. It has the good stem of Gloriosa and the fine growing habit of Enchantress. The color is a flesh pink and it keeps its color at all seasons. The flowers average about three inches, are very full and generally receive full score on substance. The flowers are all perfect and do not split. In the four years we have grown it, it has proved the best commercial variety, barring none.

AVIATOR

¶ If you want scarlet carnations for Christmas, grow Aviator, $6.00 per 100, $50.00 per 1000.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The Market.

Business this Thanksgiving was conceded to be the best ever enjoyed by the local trade. Mums, of course, were the favorites, but stock of all kinds sold well. Roses, carnations and violets were in good demand. Prices in general were a little high, but there apparently was no difficulty in disposing of the goods. Funeral work at the end of the week cleaned up what little stock there was left.

Various Notes.

Fred C. Covill is entirely satisfied with his Thanksgiving business. He had a tremendous quantity of stock and cleaned up well, having only a few white mums left.

Ernest Chamberlain had a satisfactory week. His holiday business was good and he cleaned up well at the end of the week.

At the greenhouses of the Peckham Floral Co. there was not a mum to be had by Thanksgiving morning. Business far exceeded the expectations of the manager, George Reid.

William E. Mosher reports a good Thanksgiving trade.

Edward M. Pierce had a fine lot of Nagoya mums in for the holiday and he found a ready market for them. Pompons also sold well.

Frank L. Gray is back at work after a week's illness.

Julius, the Florist, reports a heavy Thanksgiving business. He disposed of a large stock of roses, mums and carnations. W. M. P.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

Business Thanksgiving week was the best ever experienced in this city, a large number of weddings greatly accelerating the activity. There was a bigger shortage of chrysanthemums, with the exception of pompons, than in several years, and good stock commanded a premium. As it was, everybody cleaned up everything he had.

Various Notes.

Ernest Carl, of Lowell avenue, is sending in the first stevias, which are exceptionally fine and in good demand.

Among the claims against the estate of the late Dr. Mohr that have been disallowed, were those of the Western New York Nursery Co., of Rochester, N. Y., for $17.75 and Alexander H. Johnson for $67.62.

John Marshall, of Centerdale, is cutting the finest violets seen in this market this season.

O'Connor had the decorations at the house and church for the wedding of Miss McElroy last week.

W. E. Barrett & Co. furnished their employees with turkeys for Thanksgiving.

The greenhouses on the estate of John Patterson, on the Mendon road, Ashton, are to be sold at an early date.

W. E. Barrett & Co. and the Providence Seed Co. have been consolidated and will be conducted on the corner of Waterman and Canal streets. W. I. Brown and his assistants, from the Providence Seed Co., will continue with the business.

John Kelley, who was employed in the floricultural department of the Swan Point cemetery for about eighteen years, died at his home, 329 East avenue, Pawtucket, November 28. He is survived by three sons and three daughters. W. H. M.

TOLEDO, O.

Thanksgiving Business.

Despite the heavy rain November 29 and Thanksgiving day, business was good and even exceeded all expectations. Chrysanthemums, roses, carnations and all other stock sold out, and by the middle of the afternoon choice stock was not available. Mums were called for mostly and were sold at $1.20 to $6 per dozen. The pleasing thing, despite some of the high prices on mums, was that no florist reported any complaints with regard to the cost of these fall beauties. Pompons in all colors and hues, artistically arranged in baskets and vases, took no little part in increasing the sales for the day. Roses sold from $1 to $3 per dozen for the regular grades, and the better roses, including Beauties, went at $3 to $12 per dozen. Carnations brought from 60 cents to $1.50 per dozen; narcissi, 60 cents. The demand for orchids and valley was surprising. Many artificial wreaths for cemetery purposes were disposed of.

Various Notes.

The Scottwood Greenhouse had charge of an elaborate decoration for the grand opening of the Willys-Overland salesrooms, December 1.

Harry Heinl, of West Toledo, is cutting some good carnations and Ophelia roses. Mr. Heinl can boast of some excellent poinsettias in pans for Christmas.

Cards have been issued announcing the marriage of Henry Barrow, of John Barrow & Sons, to Miss H. Mushbach.

Ralph Cushman, of the Cushman Gladiolus Co., Sylvania, was married last week.

Mrs. Ernest Glouser, wife of Ernest Glouser, foreman at the Hinzel Bros. greenhouses, was taken to St. Vincent's hospital this week for an operation.

Schramm Bros. have some fine poinsettias for cut flowers coming on for Christmas.

The large greenhouses of G. Boyer & Son look rather bare since Thanksgiving day. Thousands of Bonnaffon mums were cut and shipped to various markets for that day. G. B. S.

NEWARK, N. J.

The Market.

Business opened well the first week of December. Flowers are plentiful and prices are reasonable. Chrysanthemums, which have reigned supreme in the market, are rapidly deteriorating. Fine blooms are still coming in, but there is an ever-increasing quantity of inferior stock. Carnations, and later sweet peas, now will play a more prominent part. Good carnations have been in the market for several weeks, but there has been a comparatively small demand for them, as everyone wanted chrysanthemums. Sweet peas have not been plentiful, but the few in the market have not been in active demand. Violets are in supply equal to the demand. Roses are of good quality and abundant. Potted begonias are seen in considerable numbers. The bulb season has nearly passed, but there still is a sale for indoor planting.

Various Notes.

McLaughlin & Murphy report that business has been good during the last few weeks.

William Weismantel states that business is about normal in his locality, though there is not the life to it there should be.

Incorporation papers have been filed by Connelly & Plunkett, whose office is at 20 Belmont avenue, Newark. The authorized capital stock is $3,000. The incorporators are John J. and William J. Connelly and James J. Plunkett. The new company has purchased the store of Joseph D. Kroehl, Jr. Mr. Kroehl will devote his time hereafter to the wholesale end of the business and will be located at his greenhouses at Union, N. J. R. B. M.

Here Is the Lawn Hose for You

Here is a hose that will not burst and leak, will not kink and twist, will not try your patience to the breaking point.

Goodyear Wingfoot Lawn Hose is made of the finest material ever put into a lawn hose. It is so constructed that it cannot tie itself up into kinks. It will slip easily and smoothly over lawn, flower-bed and gravel walk, without catching and without damage.

And it is guaranteed not to burst within two whole lawn hose seasons.

The day of the cheap, inferior hose is past. No longer is it necessary for the florist to content himself with a hose in constant need of replacement—a hose that is a constant source of annoyance to him—a hose that makes his work a drudgery and his day a speculation as to what new place his hose will break out.

Goodyear Wingfoot Lawn Hose has changed all this and it is now possible to get a hose that will meet every requirement—a superior, serviceable hose without a foot of disappointment in its entire length.

Goodyear Wingfoot Lawn Hose is made in the same factory and under the same standards of materials and workmanship as Goodyear Tires, the largest selling brand of tires in the world.

When you go to your dealer's be sure to ask for Goodyear Wingfoot Hose if you want to feel freedom from hose worry. Specify it by name. The name is on every five-foot length.

Greenhouse Heating.

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. But please do not ask The Review to make a choice of apparatus for you. The greenhouse heating equipment advertised in this paper is, we believe, the best for the trade to buy, and each article the best in the special field of its adaptation.

IF THE TRAP NEEDS REPAIRING.

Can you tell me what to do in case the trap on my steam heating system should happen to stop or be put out of commission in any way?

T. B. S.—Ia.

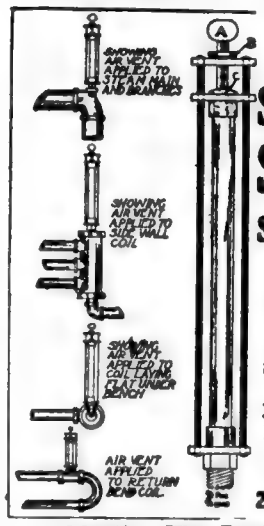
Just what can be done when a steam trap fails to work, will depend to some extent upon the construction of the trap and the arrangement of the heating system. It may be possible to correct the difficulty so that the trap will be at least fairly efficient. In some traps there are valves which need grinding, or stuffing boxes that require packing, while in others some slight adjustment is all that is required. Sometimes increasing the steam pressure will remove the trouble. In most cases there should be a check valve upon the drip pipes on both sides of the trap.

If the water level of the boiler is at least three feet below the returns, the water will return by gravity if low pressure is carried. Provided the trap cannot be made to work, it can be taken out and either an injector or a steam or electric pump substituted, unless a new trap is procured.

FIRING CONNECTED BOILERS.

I am heating my range with an 80-horsepower tubular boiler, using gas as fuel. In extremely cold weather, however, there is not a sufficient pressure of gas to keep up the necessary steam. Attached to this boiler by main steam and return lines, and set so the two can be fired together, is a smaller 2-flue boiler, of twenty horsepower. This smaller boiler is not connected with the gas mains. I fear that firing one boiler with coal and the other with gas will produce too uneven results for connected boilers. What would be the best way to handle the small boiler, in using it as an aid to the larger one? I am getting gas from a small well and should like to continue using it.

W. C. K.—Pa.



If the water level in the two boilers is the same, we should not expect any serious trouble if the pressure in the large boiler does not exceed five pounds. There should, of course, be check valves in the return pipes near each of the boilers.

BETTER USE FOUR FLOWS.

I intend to build another greenhouse, 28x125, with 6-foot side walls, containing three feet of glass and three feet of concrete. I have a cast-iron, sectional, hot water boiler, with a grate measurement of 28x32 inches. Will this boiler be large enough to heat the house to 50 degrees in zero weather? I intend to use three 2½-inch flows, each connected at the farther end with four 2-inch returns. Would that system of piping be amply sufficient to give the desired temperature? E. F. C.—Pa.

While the capacity of boilers varies to a considerable extent with the efficiency of the fire surface, if the boiler in question is in any degree effective we would consider that it will handle 1,500 to 1,600 square feet of radiation. As not over 1,200 feet will be needed in the house described, this should leave a safe margin.

The piping suggested affords all the radiation required and is fairly well balanced. While no more radiation is required, the flows will be loaded to their full capacity and we would prefer to use four instead of three. We would then expect better results with ten returns than with twelve returns and three flows. Valves should be placed upon one or two pipes in each coil, so that they can be cut out in mild weather.

FORT WAYNE, IND.

The Market.

The demand for cut flowers at Thanksgiving fell short of expectations. Various causes have been assigned for this disappointment, but it is generally believed that the weather conditions were too unfavorable. It was exceedingly warm and balmy. Advertising was not nearly so extensive this year as last, and this is another cause given for the decrease in the demand. The football game Thanksgiving day helped matters somewhat and the call for corsages was good. Wedding work was lively and there was a small demand for funeral designs. Prices held up well, however, chrysanthemums bringing $3, $4, $5 and $6 per dozen. Pompons and the singles retailed at $1.50 and $2 per dozen. Many local growers held back their chrysanthemum crop, the varieties being Dolly Dimple, William Turner, Chadwick, Eaton, Bonnaffon, Golden Wedding and Wells' Late Pink.

American Beauties were of good quality, but the supply was not large. Other roses were in excellent condition, especially Russell, Shawyer, Milady, Ophelia, Sunburst and Hoosier Beauty. Carnations were in good supply and the quality fine. Valley, orchids, sweet peas, violets and roses had a good demand for corsage work. The supply of narcissi and snapdragons also was good. There were a few chrysanthemum plants left for Thanksgiving and there are still a few mums left, but the demand is light. The local florists are taking advantage of this lull in trade to prepare for the Christmas rush.

Various Notes.

December 2 the Fort Wayne Florists' Club held its regular meeting at the store rooms of A. J. Lanternier & Co. Miss R. A. Doswell, president of the club, presided. The report of the November flower show was read and after the business of the meeting a general discussion was held on the subject of the Christmas rush and how to handle it. There will be no regular January meeting of the club, but a banquet will be held January 5 in the ballroom of the Anthony hotel, to which all the members of the club are invited.

The Flick Floral Co. had the decorations for the Hogan-Olds wedding Thanksgiving day. Southern smilax was used in large quantities; also chrysanthemums and roses. White orchids and valley formed the bride's bouquet and Ophelia roses were carried by the maids.

F. G. Nelson, of Burlington Willow Ware Shops, Burlington, Ia., was a recent visitor. R. F.

OMAHA, NEB.

The Market.

Trade during the last few weeks has been steadily on the increase, and the business done Thanksgiving was far in excess of that of last year. Stock has been plentiful, and has moved well, with the exception of carnations, but now that the mum season is over the growers and retailers think the demand for these will begin to pick up.

Azaleas that were due to arrive here about October 15 came in about November 20 and were in poor condition; in fact, some of them were so poor that they were refused. Some of the plants heated on the road and others were frozen; because of this and their late arrival, the prospects of having any for Christmas are slim. A few Mme. Petrick plants are the only ones having the slightest chance.

The coal situation in this vicinity is becoming rather serious, as steam coal can hardly be bought at any price. Coal that formerly sold at $3.15 to $3.25 per ton in carload lots now is selling at $5 to $6.75. The mild, warm weather that has prevailed for the last few weeks has proved a boon to some of the florists, as several of them had only a small supply of coal on hand. Other florists do not favor the warm weather, as it is bringing on the Christmas crops too quickly.

Various Notes.

Janousek Bros., out on Prospect hill, are cutting some excellent sweet peas that find a ready sale. Their carnations are good and prospects are that there will be an excellent crop for the holidays.

Lee Larmon, the Fontenelle hotel florist, had a pleasing window last week that proved a good business-getter.

"While business was not so good up to Thanksgiving this year as last year, we have no complaints to make," states one of the proprietors of the Flower Shop. "People are cutting down on the high cost of living and are buying only the necessities of life. Many consider flowers too much of a luxury."

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

Indianapolis florists were well satisfied with Thanksgiving business, as there was an increase over last year's sales on that day. On account of a scarcity, some stock was held over for the holiday demand. This stock, in many cases, was in poor condition. The supply of good flowers was not abundant, chrysanthemums, roses and carnations taking the lead. Yellow chrysanthemums were the most popular, with Russell roses a close second. Novelties and small flowers, such as bouvardias, gardenias, snapdragons, sweet peas and violets, were in poor demand for home decorations, but numerous social functions created a demand for corsages in which these were effective. More narcissi have appeared. Lilies and pot plants have had little call.

The day after Thanksgiving the retailers began their preparations for the Christmas season, and if the bright, growing weather continues the prospects for a big Christmas business are good.

Various Notes.

William Lake, of the William Lake Co., Philadelphia, called on the trade last week.

Edward Smith, a veteran florist of the city, has been busily engaged in landscape gardening for the school board.

Rose Brandlein is the proud possessor of a new diamond ring.

The H. W. Rieman Co. reports an exceptionally good Thanksgiving business.

The local store of the E. G. Hill Co. enjoyed a good holiday business. This company has a good line of plants for Christmas, especially azaleas.

Fred Hukreide and John Grande, Jr., also will have a few good azaleas, but this plant and good cyclamens will be scarce for the holidays.

Miss Myrtle Melford, who has been with Benson's for the last three years, has accepted a position with the Circle Flower Store.

Baur & Steinkamp have been erecting tile benches in their new propagating house.

H. A. Burkhart, of the Burkhart Nursery, severely cut his foot with an ax while trimming trees recently. He was taken to a hospital and is slowly improving.

E. E. Temperley does not have to take time off to go hunting, as he has a cat that brings full-grown rabbits into the greenhouses.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

Thanksgiving trade was quite satisfactory this year, despite conditions that seemed to indicate the opposite. All stock sold well, although the weather was well above the freezing point and the sky was cloudless. Because of the clean-up and the good prices on stock, there was nothing to complain of. This seems to augur well for the Christmas business.

Roses were not plentiful; in fact, hardly sufficient to take care of the demand and consequently the hardest to obtain. The quality of the rose cut was good and the stock was well worth all it brought. Carnations were in good supply and the stock was cleaned up with no difficulty. Prices ranged from $3 to $4 and the entire supply was moved each day without any bargaining.

Chrysanthemums were more than plentiful for the Thanksgiving trade, although the warm weather during the previous weeks seemed to indicate that the crop would just about be over by that time. Early in the week there was little hope of cleaning up at all, but the stock was disposed of readily toward the end and November 30 late comers had difficulty in getting what they wanted. The clean-up helped the returns on mums for the season to a great extent, and, while mums will not last much longer, the season for them has been good. Chadwick and Bonnaffon were the big sellers last week and they were in excellent shape.

Violets cleaned up fairly well and prices remained steadily at from $1.25 to $1.50 per hundred. The quality was much better than last year's and the selling more satisfactory. There was an exceptional demand for orchids and an extra large cut of cattleyas cleaned up so quickly that quite a few orders were turned down. Some exceptionally fine stock was disposed of and the market was firm at $9 per dozen. Valley, of course, was almost unobtainable and the stock that was to be had was of poor quality. The sale of plants was good and this seems to demonstrate that plants are being used more freely for every occasion.

Various Notes.

A. Schiller underwent an operation for intestinal trouble November 29, at St. Joseph's hospital. Some time ago he submitted to a similar operation and his condition was serious. He finally recovered, however, and, while still pale and somewhat weak, was attending to business when he was again taken ill and it was found necessary to operate once more. Mr. Schiller's condition is critical. He has the best wishes of his many friends in the trade for a speedy convalescence.

The thieves who stole H. V. Hunkel's automobile have been successful so far in hiding the car. Although every effort is being made by the insurance company and a reward has been offered for the car's return, nothing has been heard and it looks as though one perfectly good Hudson is gone for all time.

Stock is scarce, but the quality was never better at this season of the year. Carnations are especially good and the cut increases each day.

Thanksgiving trade was gratifying and was somewhat better than expected, though this year it had been looked forward to with greater expectations than ever before. It is evident that the day is growing in importance, and if it continues to develop in the next five years as it has in the last five it will be one of the greatest flower days of the year. Unlike other holidays, it does not call for expensive and fancy stock, but merely medium-priced flowers and plants which, when sold in quantities, are more profitable to the florist than expensive, fancy stock. The business did not start until the day before and was over by 2 o'clock Thanksgiving day. The florists had a good supply of carnations, narcissi, roses and chrysanthemums, as well as a nice lot of cyclamen and narcissus plants. Practically the entire supply was consumed.

The Tennessee-Kentucky football game, as usual, proved a great feature and everything in yellow and white —the Tennessee colors—was taken up long before the game started. Some of the florists, having sold their flowers in these colors, turned to their ribbon counters and sold badges of white and yellow ribbon. The Kentucky colors, white and purple, were supplied by tying purple ribbon on white chrysanthemums. R. E. M.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Thanksgiving business was good and, while the prices were lower than those of other years, the day served to clean up the market well. Since the holiday, business has been good. The supply of stock is large and sufficient for all present needs.

Receipts of roses are large and include good cuts of all varieties. Carnations, too, are in good supply. Easter lilies are plentiful. Shipments of Paper White narcissi are large enough to take care of all present demands. Orchids, valley, sweet peas and double and single violets sell well. Stevia has a fair market. Some excellent late chrysanthemums may be had. Greens of all kinds are plentiful.

Various Notes.

L. H. Kyrk is away on a visit to Portland, Ind., and Kalamazoo, Mich.

C. E. Critchell has been getting some excellent Boston ferns from the Hoffmeister Floral Co., of Lick Run.

The Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange has been receiving some good Paper White narcissi that find a good market.

P. J. Olinger went to Newcastle, Ind., on business the first of this week.

Oliver Pherson, of the William Murphy Co., died November 27. His death was sudden and a shock to his many friends, who extend their sympathies to the bereaved family.

Among recent visitors were H. C. Neubrand, representing A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn.; William Gerlach, Jr., of Piqua, O.; H. C. Crossfield, of Lawrenceburg, Ky. C. H. H.

King Greenhouses

KEEP SUMMER WITH YOU THE WHOLE YEAR ROUND

On account of their sturdy special construction, which permits of great strength without the need of heavy, shadow-casting supports, these houses are so warm and sunny that they are filled with a riot of bloom and fruit when Jack Frost has stripped the garden of its beauty.

The ventilating and heating systems are the result of years of experience in building for professional growers. Things just have to grow in a King.

If we should build a greenhouse for ourselves we would put the best material we could into it, but it would not be any better than we put into the houses that we build for our customers.

Yes, it would be an easy matter to skimp here and substitute there, and gloss over in another place to save a little and meet the lowest bidder. We do not do business that way. Why should we cheat ourselves in order to cheat a customer?

Figure it out for yourself and then write us your needs.

Thanksgiving business was good, but stock at times was hard to obtain. Mums and pompons were plentiful, but sold out completely. Roses ran short in supply, especially in the short grades. Violets, valley and orchids sold well; in fact, corsages kept these items on the jump. Beauties were insufficient for requirements.

Various Notes.

T. Browne shipped in great quantities of mums, but yellows cleaned up quickly. George Bayer, of Toledo, shipped in a nice lot of Bonnaffon mums. A. Stahelin's roses were choice and did not have to wait long to find buyers.

J. Breitmeyer's Sons' Jefferson avenue branch is about ready for business.

COLUMBUS, O.

The Market.

There has been a scramble for stock since Thanksgiving. Mums are just about done for and the few left over from Thanksgiving have found ready sales. A number of blooms coming in are picked up as soon as they are unpacked. Roses have been off crop for the last few days, but the outlook is bright for a splendid crop from now until Christmas. Carnations are coming in heavily and are doing their share to fill up the gap left by the mums. The quality of the carnations is fine and all we could ask for. Sweet peas are coming in more plentifully and meet with a ready sale.

Lilies are moving well, but the supply is limited. Violets are more plentiful and their quality has improved, including some good singles. Potted plants are in fine condition and quantities are disposed of. Cyclamens, begonias, primulas and poinsettias make up the bulk of the stock. The demand for ferns is heavy.

MANUFACTURERS
Not Assemblers

THERE are a lot of greenhouse, as well as automobile builders, who are assemblers. They do not make their parts; they buy them here, there and everywhere; and put them together.

We are not assemblers; we are manufacturers.

With but a few minor exceptions, we make everything we sell. Consequently, it is made particularly for the particular purpose for which it is to be used.

Take for example our boilers; we don't buy them, we make them. We make them so they will be made the way a greenhouse boiler should be made. They are not the regular house heating boilers bought of some outside firm who cast our name on the door.

It's the same even with a somewhat minor thing like our Tell Tale Ventilating Apparatus.

We don't buy it of some recording machine company. It is made right here in our own factory. A glance at the pointer will tell exactly how wide the ridge sash is opened.

And so we could go right through our house, and show you how practically everything in the construction and equipping of our houses is made by us, for our house.

That's one of the big reasons why you can depend on depending on Hitchings. And remember that we go anywhere for business, or to talk business.

CYPRESS BY TEST
SUBSTITUTES BY TALK

Is there value to you in an endurance test of 48 years in greenhouse sash? It is reported to us that sash made of heart Cypress by a prominent greenhouse contractor in Chicago and placed in position in a greenhouse at Des Plaines, Ill., in 1868, are still doing service.

Jacob Fries, Bethlehem, Pa., has Cypress sash that have stood the racket for 30 years and are still on the job. And these are not isolated cases—they represent no more than a fair test of "The Wood Eternal" for greenhouse use.

It will serve you as well and save you the nuisance and expense of repairs and replacements.

The argument backed by such facts cannot be answered by mere talk. Ask the manufacturer or contractor who wants to give you a "substitute" for Cypress to cite you to an endurance test of 30 or 48 years to the credit of the so-called "substitute."

That is no more than a fair precaution on your part—good ordinary business sense.

If he would meet the Cypress record with more talk, and no test, then there's a "nigger in that wood-pile." You know you would better pass up the "substitute" and stick to the real article, which is Cypress.

"PECKY" CYPRESS. You greenhouse men know how common it looks and how uncommon it lasts. The U. S. Govt. Rept. (Forest Service Bul. 95) says—"That the disease (which produces the 'peck') has been a long time preying upon Cypress timber is apparent from an examination of Cypress logs dug from alluvial deposits many feet below the present level of the Gulf of Mexico. Some of that prehistoric timber is pecky, though it has been buried during a period estimated at no less than 30,000 years. . . . The effect of the disease (known as 'Pecky') . . . is believed to act as a preservative . . . and to hinder decay."

Is 30,000 years "hindering of decay" long enough for YOUR greenhouse?

There is no known record of rotten "Pecky." Use nothing else for benches and bench standards. It is cheap, too.

A postal will do, a letter is better—either brings a booklet or two from the famous CYPRESS Pocket Library (a strictly authoritative reference work). VOL. 3 is all about "GREENHOUSES." It is FREE. Send for it. Also ask for Vol. 2, on "Pecky"—a money-saver. Take no hearsay. GET THE FACTS. Then ACT.

THIRTEEN YEARS

Devoted to Sash Operating Device and Greenhouse Fitting

December 4th was the thirteenth birthday of the well known Advance Ventilating Machine. It received its patent stamp on this date, and ever since has been giving florists everlasting and satisfactory service. Since that time thirteen similar patents have been granted us for other useful things just for you, Mr. Florist.

Thirteen years devoted to this single line is sufficient proof that our goods are up-to-date, and as near perfection as skill and continuous improvements can make them. Our complete line of greenhouse fittings are for your benefit, and should receive your careful attention.

Our catalogue explains all, and gives you our net price list. Free for the asking.

PELARGONIUMS.

PELARGONIUMS.
Remember we are the real distributors of Easter Greeting; the first one to advertise it,—now look at 'em. Wide awake florists know a good thing when they see it. Some are a little slow at first, but that isn't to be wondered at when one considers the "new frauds." But listen! Get in the swim for 1917. We have over 25,000 coming for November and December sales and hope to have 50,000 coming a little later, $7.50 per 100. We are making them by special machinery and the war hasn't changed the price. Our guarantee covers everything.

Price Crisis

The present rapid advance in the prices of materials is without a parallel. Do you realize what this means to you?

A great crisis always means an opportunity to a really big man—whether in public life or business.

Here are some hard, cold facts for you to check off:

The principal items entering into greenhouse construction are structural steel, glass, pipe, woodwork, lumber, paint, boilers, brass valves, castings, steam fittings and labor. A comparison of present prices with the prices at this time last year will surprise you; but bear in mind that this difference is but the beginning. If you could compare the prices of today with the prices that will be in effect next November, we believe you would find the difference even more startling.

Steel.

Base price on steel today in Chicago is $74.00 per ton. The average price on structural steel for greenhouse work is today about $90.00 per ton, including plates and extras. Last fall you could have bought fabricated material for the price of raw material today. And this is not the end! Probably by spring the average cost of greenhouse sizes will be $120.00 per ton.

Glass.

Glass is the highest it has been for fifteen years, but with the wages that are being paid in the glass factories this winter and with the increased cost of materials, the price next spring will probably outdo anything you have ever known. If $4.50 now, would $6.00 surprise you next summer?

Pipe.

The present price of steel pipe is about $7.00 to $10.00 per ton less than the cost of the raw steel. The pipe manufacturers are using stocks purchased on a much lower market than the present and are contracting every day for their future supplies on the basis of the present market. When material on old contracts is gone, what do you think pipe prices will be? There was an advance November 1st, another November 15th and again December 1st. These advances, running anywhere from 3 to 10 per cent, come almost weekly. This means the price next March will be away above what it is today.

Woodwork.

Of all greenhouse materials, the price of woodwork has been the most stationary, the present price being about 10 per cent higher than it was at the same time last year. The Cypress lumber mills have changed their grading rules and are getting rid of stocks made up on the old rules. The new rules will make it necessary for greenhouse manufacturers to pay more for lumber when the new stocks come in. The demand for Cypress lumber has been growing apace during the last six months and mills are quoting higher figures. Lumber will advance steadily between now and spring, but the advance may not be as great as on some other items. There will be a big advance in the grades used for benches, etc. The ordinary grade of barn Cypress has advanced about $4.00 per thousand.

Paint.

Paint materials are out of sight. Linseed oil is selling over the $1.00 mark and lead and zinc are up into two figures. It will be impossible to sell pure greenhouse paint for $2.00 per gallon and make a profit. Paint at $1.50 per gallon has been a good average price. We look for paint to sell at $2.25 to $2.50 before March.

Cast Iron Boilers and Castings.

Cast iron boilers and castings are bound to climb. Advices from big people assure us that pig iron is likely to reach $50.00 per ton. Last year it sold at $14.00 per ton. Just think of it, over 3½ times the former price! Cast iron boiler prices today are based on pig iron costing about $25.00 per ton. All structural fittings will be higher. Split tees that have been selling for 9 cents will be 15 cents and gutter post top fittings that sold for 18 cents will be 25 and 30 cents and so it goes all along the line. The cost of pig iron also affects steam fittings. The fittings for a heating plant will cost as much next fall as you could have bought nickel-plated fittings for last year.

Tubular Boilers.

Tubular boilers that sold at $750 last spring are now about $2,000, and if steel plates keep going up the price on steel boilers will be almost prohibitive. It would not surprise us to see the price of a 72 x 18—150 horse-power boiler at $2,500 by next March with no brick work included. Can the greenhouse owner afford this? Boiler makers want six to nine months for delivery. Why not order now?

Brass Valves.

Brass valves are at present cheap compared with the market, but are much higher than they were three months ago. In some kinds of brass valves manufacturers are quoting higher than list prices instead of giving a discount as was the case formerly.

Labor.

Labor is another item. During the winter of 1915-1916 we had a number of men employed as laborers at 17½ to 20 cents per hour. Today the same men get 30 cents to 35 cents. The hours of work are getting shorter and the pay per hour is going higher. It must go higher to keep anywhere in touch with the prices of food stuffs. The cost of living makes it necessary for the workmen to get higher wages and for the employer to voluntarily give the men a higher wage. Our line of work is a special line and we try to keep our men steadily at work every day in the year—in the winter as well as the summer. We take an interest in our men and in their welfare. They are a part of our business, but of course we shall have to pass on to the customer the additional wages it is necessary for us to pay.

Think This Over.

The man who builds next summer will be obliged to pay everybody's bill. Are you going to be one of the fellows to wait for low prices? If so, you will be disappointed.

Our idea in telling you these things is not to alarm you, but to warn you to purchase now. Not alone are the prices going to be high, but materials are going to be scarce. The steel mills are not anxious to roll structural shapes unless they are standard patterns and largely used. Greenhouse steel work is not altogether standard design. Every manufacturer is using special shapes in one way and another. It is going to be impossible to get some of these sizes next year at any price.

Right now every greenhouse manufacturer has gathered together every dollar he can get and has bought as much material as he could afford to buy in the hope that he may be able to meet, at least in part, the demand that will be made on him this winter. All of this material put together is only a small amount compared to what is used in a season. No prices now are guaranteed for any length of time. You are spending your own money, not ours; but we warn you to buy your greenhouse tomorrow, if you can; but don't buy any greenhouse until you get our price. We are in a special position right now to take on not over $300,000.00 in contracts. We have just closed almost $100,000.00 worth. If you want to participate in a part of the $300,000.00 you will have to act quickly.

Remember, every week you wait you are losing money. Every greenhouse manufacturer is up against it! If you don't give your order to us, give it to some one else; but be SURE you give it NOW!

Submit your plan, get your figure, place your order and be safe.

WIDE GREENHOUSES

Furnished by us for D. F. Harrison Co., of Kankakee, Ill.

It is only a little over a year ago that the site of this greenhouse range was nothing but a big cornfield.

There are now two 65 x 450 ft. greenhouses and a large concrete boiler and packing room.

Think of these two mammoth greenhouses filled with cucumber vines the year around, and think of the fine prices you get for cucumbers in the winter season.

When it comes to building big greenhouses substantially and economically, we certainly can show you how to do it, and we are always willing and anxious to co-operate with you.

Just drop us a line and let us give you sketches and estimates, free of charge.

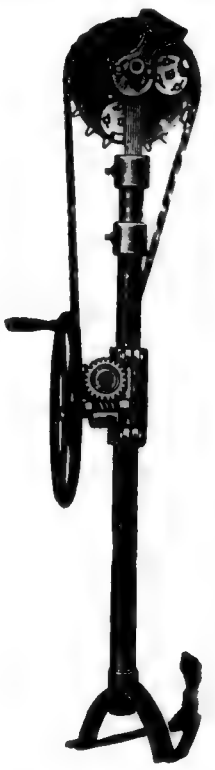
EVERYTHING FOR THE GREENHOUSE

One Man Does the Work of Four

Help is scarce and expensive, Evans Challenge are plentiful, efficient and relatively cheap



Did it ever occur to you what your cost is every year to open and close your ventilators? Stop, think and figure it out. It requires just as long to open and close a fifty-foot section as it does a three-hundred-foot section.

The Evans Challenge, with our Double-acting 20th Century Arm and Roller-bearing Hangers, is the only machine that will do this. Think it over, then write for our catalogue and get our estimate. It's worth your while.

CHRISTMAS NUMBER

Street Gable Entrance of the Big House.

The Interesting Instance of Bland & Steinmetz

EVER been to Independence, Iowa?

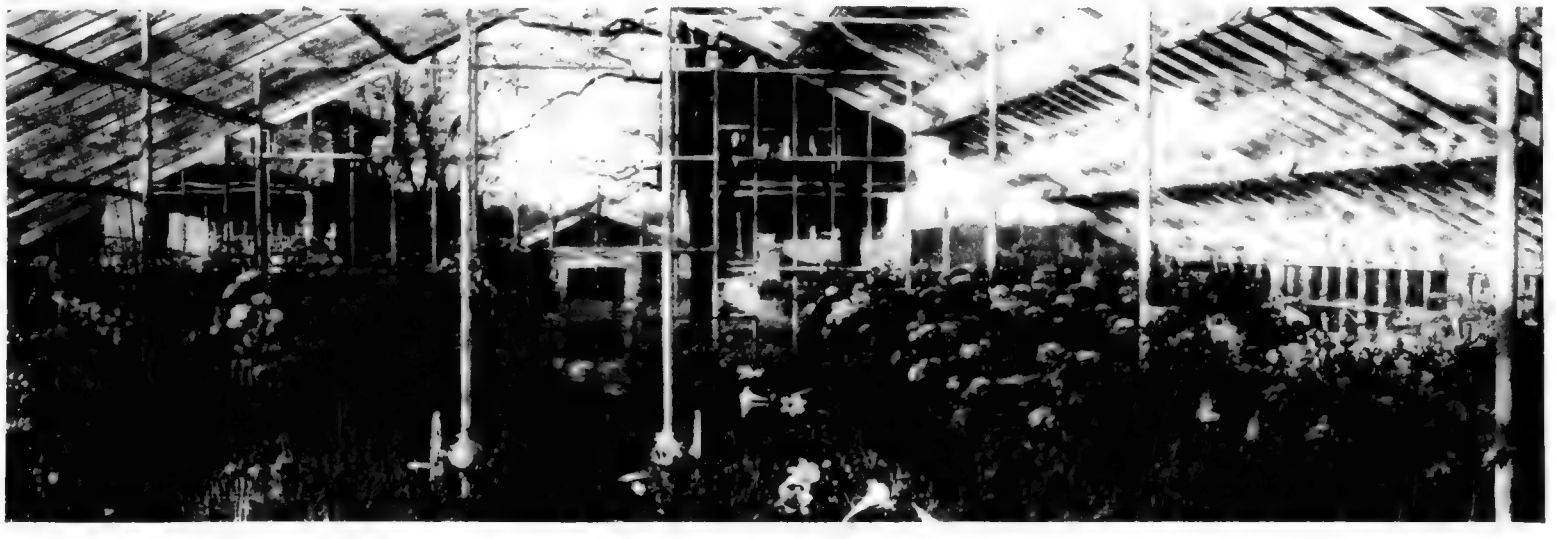
What a fine, wide-awake little city it is! I went out of my way about 200 miles to drop off there and see Bland & Steinmetz's greenhouse. Came away feeling amply repaid and chuck full of the flower business enthusiasm.

Mr. Bland is an old grower.

Mr. Steinmetz, a former banker, who decided health was first consideration, and believed greenhouse work among the healthiest of healthy things he could work at.

And what a team these two do make! These two with the help of Mrs. Bland, who here and there puts a touch of woman's hand in the floral arrangements, and keeps their satisfied out-of-town customers more than satisfied.

Glimpse in the Two-compartment Connecting House.



The house is 41 feet 9 inches wide and 150 feet long, divided in two compartments. Connecting it to the workroom is another two-compartment house 11 feet by 50 feet.

The big house is one of our two column Iron Framers, that next to being outdoors, are like being outdoors, they are so light.

This firm started right by starting with the right house, rightly constructed.

It's the way they have gone about everything. Wait a year or two and you are going to hear some goodly things about this firm.

Ready to talk building? Say when and where and we'll be there.

I Counted 12 Kinds of General Plants in this Compartment, Every One Looking the Pink of Perfection.

What the Trade Thinks of Our "Superiora" Magnolia Leaves

FIVE POINTS THAT HAVE WON FOR US THE ACCOMPANYING ENDORSEMENTS

1. All leaves are of a medium size, no small ones and no large ones.
2. Leaves are all uniform in color.
3. All leaves will stay pliable.
4. "Superiora" leaves are the best prepared kind, particularly under the present conditions.
5. All "Superiora" leaves are the non-moulding kind.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 27, 1916.

Messrs. Dr. H. Dux & Bro., Jacksonville, Fla.

Gentlemen: We have been handling your "Superiora" Magnolia Leaves for the past six years, and find in all this time that we have had no complaints, but many compliments on these goods. The trade is growing more with us every day for your leaves, as your records will show, and it is with pleasure that we sell "Superiora" Magnolias, knowing that when we do we are satisfying our customer with the best there is to be had in Magnolia Leaves. Yours very truly, (Signed) Michigan Cut Flower Exchange.

Cleveland, Ohio, Dec. 1, 1916.

Dr. H. Dux Co., Jacksonville, Fla.

Gentlemen: Since we are handling your Magnolia Leaves our business has steadily grown. We attribute this to satisfied customers. Never as yet have we had a complaint from them nor a carton returned.

We had a great deal of trouble with the old line we handled, so many were returned to us as being unfit for use, either mouldy or dried out, and not of a uniform size.

We can only offer praise to you for the superior goods you are supplying us. Yours very truly, (Signed) Cleveland Florists' Exchange.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Dec. 1, 1916.

Messrs. Dr. H. Dux & Bros., Jacksonville, Fla.

Gentlemen: Many thanks for your prompt shipment of last thousand cartons of MAGNOLIA LEAVES, as we were oversold on our Christmas orders and were a little anxious.

Other Magnolia Preparers have tried to induce us to stock up their goods "just as good as Dux's" at a cheaper price, but we have in each instance told them frankly that it was a case of quality with us and that we did not think their leaf would give the satisfaction yours did. We consider our Magnolia trade one of the best assets of our business, and will not take a chance of losing it—in fact, our traveling men are often greeted as "Magnolia Kings."

Wishing you the compliments of the season, we are,

Very truly yours,

(Signed) The McCallum Co., Inc.

Boston, Mass., Dec. 1, 1916.

Dr. H. Dux Co., Jacksonville, Fla.

Gentlemen: It is the opinion of the McCarthy Co. that your good firm prepares the best leaf that has yet been offered in the United States. It is well worth the difference between the prices offered by inferior manufacturers and your agents. Yours respectfully, (Signed) N. F. McCarthy & Co.

Boston, Mass., Dec. 2, 1916.

Dr. H. Dux Co., Jacksonville, Fla.

Gentlemen: We are pleased to state that the quality of your Magnolia Leaves is certainly the best ever manufactured in this country, and it is a pleasure to offer such stock for sale. Undoubtedly in the future we shall be able to place large orders with you again.

Wishing you every success, we are,

Yours very truly,

(Signed) Henry M. Robinson & Co.

Cincinnati, Ohio, Nov. 28, 1916.

Dr. H. Dux Co., Inc., Jacksonville, Fla.

Gentlemen: I have been handling the "Superiora" Magnolia Leaves for the past five years or more and find them to be very satisfactory in every way. My customers insist on having the "Superiora" brand of Magnolia Leaves, as they claim these are the best and do not dry out or become mouldy, and every leaf can be used, and when this is taken into consideration, they are also the cheapest besides being the best. Yours respectfully, (Signed) C. E. Critchell.

Montreal, Canada, Nov. 30, 1916.

Dr. H. Dux Co., Inc., Jacksonville, Fla.

Gentlemen: In response to your letter of recent date, we take pleasure in stating that we have been very much satisfied with the quality of your "Superiora" Magnolia Leaves.

As you will notice, our business has increased with you this year over double of what we purchased last season, and I think you will agree with us that that is a good recommendation in itself—that the trade in Canada appreciates the durability and keeping qualities of your leaf.

We would also mention that we appreciate the integrity, promptness and good business methods that have characterized all your dealings with us. Yours very truly, (Signed) Montreal Floral Exchange, Ltd.

New York, Nov. 27, 1916.

Messrs. Dr. Dux Bros., Jacksonville, Fla.

Gentlemen: We beg leave to acknowledge receipt of your last shipment of Magnolias and Oak Leaves, and we are indeed pleased to say that they are superior in every way to any we have heretofore received from you or anyone else, and considering the difficulty you must experience in procuring dyes and other chemicals used in the preparation of your different products.

We cannot but praise the appearance and finish of your last shipment, which has been like all previous shipments, as near as perfect leaf can be obtained.

We further state that our experience in leaves from other dealers has been very unsatisfactory—colors vary and leaves mould quickly. As usual you may book our order for one thousand cartons (1,000) of Magnolia Leaves. With best wishes, Yours truly, (Signed) Reed & Keller.

Special Dutch Bulb Offer

¶ A belated shipment, which reached us very recently, enables us to place before the Trade the following list of Dutch Bulbs, containing many of the finest florists' varieties, all bulbs being of the finest quality, true to name and top-size stock.

Here is an opportunity to procure some choice varieties at exceedingly low prices, and should you be interested in the purchase of any of these bulbs we would advise your prompt orders, as at these prices the stock is expected to move very rapidly, and this offer is made subject to goods being unsold on receipt of your order.

The Studebaker Corporation of America,
Chapman and Adler Sts.
Portland, Ore.

Gentlemen:—

On March 28th we purchased one of your 1500 lb. Delivery Wagons from your local agent in this city, the Oregon Motor Car Company, and we want you to know that this wagon has solved the problem of delivery for us.

The mileage shown on the speedometer on this date is 5010 miles; the original air is in the casings and there is no doubt in our minds but what the casings will last for at least 3,000 miles more inasmuch as they show but little wear.

We average 160 stops per day and the electric starter has never failed us; in fact, we mislaid our starting crank the first day we received the car and can see no reason for purchasing another.

Not one cent has been spent by us for upkeep or repair on this car, nor has it ever been in your Agent's Garage to receive free service attention.

In a short time we will need another Delivery Car and we will "Buy because it's a STUDEBAKER."

Yours truly,

THE HOME CREAMERY COMPANY
By John Hefer

Motor Service

8:30 to 5:30 P. M. less one hour for lunch.

Per Contra

2 horses and 2 Wagons with 2 men each from 7 A. M. to 6:30 P. M. without hour to lunch.

That is, 7½ hours of motor work equal 23 hours of horse-drawn work.

—this is what one retailer saved: How much can it save YOU?

You know, of course, the GREATLY improved delivery service that a motor system insures. That's been proved too often to need details here. But how much does it save? And is the saving enough to justify the change in equipment? That's what we want to tell you.

Thousands of retailers are using Studebaker Delivery Cars. Here is the experience of one. Over your desk a Studebaker Delivery Advisor can give you more—and can also tell you almost to a dollar how much a Studebaker Car will save YOU.

Of all the cars on the market, not one is so well-fitted for florist's deliveries as this Studebaker. For Studebaker, with more than half a century's experience in building delivery vehicles, knows delivery needs and has built this car to meet them.

It has the power of any ton or two ton utility truck. Yet it is ECONOMICAL power for the motor is based on the same design that has made Studebaker Touring Cars famous for economy of fuel.

It is the simplest car on the market—easiest to drive—any of your drivers can be readily taught to run it. It has a Studebaker-Wagner Electric Starting and Lighting System that has been proved a success on 200,000 cars—a FULL floating rear axle—brakes of ample size to stop the car inside a few feet—strongly braced body-construction and heavily ironed fenders.

And it is not only one of the handsomest cars on the streets in design, but is finished like a high grade touring car and finely upholstered.

It costs little at the start—and is surprisingly low in maintenance expense. And from the day you start it off on your delivery routes, it not only gives BETTER service but cuts down the cost of every delivery from 2c to 6c each. See the Studebaker dealer or write and let us tell you HOW MUCH it will save YOU.

Getting a lead in the florist business

FRESH flowers—likely location—quick deliveries make the leading florist. But the greatest of these is quick deliveries.

"Can't afford it" has no place in the creed of the hustling florist.

Actually the cheapest delivery in the world is a handsome VIM Delivery Car—from hauling half a ton of potted plants, to meeting a late express with flowers for the opera and delivering them on time.

With a VIM doing your work, you don't have to worry about getting the week-end, or day-before-the-holiday, orders out.

Remember this is a sturdy half-ton truck ready for business emergencies—not a converted auto, intended for pleasure. It keeps out of the repair shop.

All experience shows that the economical delivery equipment for the florist is the half-ton truck. The VIM is the most profitable half-ton truck because it was designed for this work and for nothing else.

Over 20,000 business institutions are paying for their VIM cars out of the car's profits. This same VIM Deferred Payment Plan is available to you.

This is the most efficient chassis for its work in the world—price is $645. Fitted with any one of twelve types of body—handsomely designed and strongly built—suitable for a hundred lines of business. Price complete Open Express, $695: Closed Panel (as illustrated) $725 ____ B. Philadelphia

CHRISTMAS

The splendid business done for Thanksgiving, exceeding the most sanguine expectations, has raised great anticipations as to the Christmas demand.

ADMITTEDLY the most uncertain of the special flower days, Christmas has seemed more hazardous than usual this year, but the tremendous demand that flooded down upon the trade in the forty-eight hours of the Thanksgiving season has been accepted as an indication that the Christmas rush of 1916 will break all records for our business. The result is that hesitation has been cast aside and even the most conservative are stocking up for banner business. Stores are being filled with a great variety of accessories, plants are being hunted with avidity, and cut flowers are being ordered with enthusiasm—extra clerks are being engaged, delivery systems planned and advertising is receiving attention, something quite unusual in this business, as florists have found it difficult to break the habit of awaiting fortune's favors without offering special invitation.

The reason that Christmas has earned the reputation of being the most uncertain of special flower days is found in the fact that at other times public attention is centered on only one or two other articles of merchandise—clothes at Easter, valentines and candy for February 14, food at Thanksgiving—while at Christmas flowers are compelled to compete for favor with every other conceivable line of merchandise. For Memorial day, Mothers' day and All Saints' day flowers still are without active competition, but can you suggest any article so foolish that someone does not recommend, and many accept, it as the finest kind of Christmas gift?

The Business Grows.

While the public's purchases increase many fold at Christmas, no man can forecast with certainty the direction of the demand.

We have this much in our favor, however, that with the increase in wealth, leisure and refinement in this country there has come and will continue to be a continuous if somewhat unsteady increase in the use of flowers and their accessories.

In planning the Christmas business it is necessary to take many factors into account. To begin with, there are many florists who have so increased their sales that they now do regularly what they did only at holiday times a few years ago. Dare they count on a corresponding increase for Christmas? Then, too, it is the experience of the trade in the larger cities that the best Christmas increases, relative to the regular business, have come in the years of general depression, when usually prosperous people sent flowers because they did not care to spend larger sums.

Will people of means turn to costly articles, as they have done in some other prosperous years? Will they neglect flowers, which they sent as gifts in years when they wanted to hold the expenditures to what they considered small sums? If they do, are there enough new people who have just come into the flower-buying class to offset the loss?

Added to the other complexities of this unusual season is the fact that in this year of so-called unprecedented prosperity a great many people are without surplus funds—the expenses forced on them in both a business and personal way have reduced their ability to purchase outside the line of necessities. Are Christmas gifts necessary? How many of your customers are as busy as bees, but making less money than usual? How much has the soaring price of paper or potatoes curtailed the ability to buy flowers?

Christmas Affords the Best Chance to Sell Big Baskets.

Our Prices.

But there is still another factor of uncertainty: Practically all other gift articles are higher in price than ever before; the only exceptions are a few trade-marked articles, most of which are classed, like flowers, among the luxuries, and which always have sold at large margins of profit. If the public hesitates over the advances that are charged in other stores, the florist can attract trade by putting emphasis on the moderation of his prices. Indeed, there are those in the producing end of the florists' business who maintain that prices in this trade, as represented by returns to the growers, have not advanced at all, or even have declined, and that such increases as have been made are those of the retailer, who could maintain last year's selling prices if he would.

The effect of these opposite influences has been a matter of doubt in the minds of those who studied them early in the season, but within the last fortnight doubt has been resolved into decision—it was the Thanksgiving business that did it. Today there is perfect confidence that the Christmas demand will break all records.

Thanksgiving Was Great.

It is pointed out that the conditions that might affect the Christmas business nearly all were present at Thanksgiving; that food prices then were the highest ever known in America; that people quite generally refused to pay the price of turkey, long symbolic of the day, but that in numbers far greater than ever before they bought flowers for the table. The cleanup was the best the florists' trade ever has had, and it has inspired unlimited confidence in the demand for Christmas.

Flower stores are stocking up with accessories as never before. The considerations which made many retailers slow to begin the sale of merchandise other than flowers gradually have been overcome, and now about the only man who sells "just flowers" is the one who retails in the potting shed of his greenhouse.

Plants Not Abundant.

For several years the supply of Christmas stock has increased rapidly, especially in the plant department, but this year there will be no increase. Conditions are such that the supply of cut flowers and plants in the aggregate will not exceed if, indeed, it equals, last year's—this in spite of the steady increase in glass.

In the matter of plants, stocks of the varieties which have their source in Europe have been steadily reduced in the last two years. The Christmas supply of cyclamens and azaleas will be particularly short this year; of cyclamens because of British activity in intercepting German seeds and the subsequent loss of an unusual percentage of the plants as the result of the severe heat in summer and the subsequent ravages of mite. The azaleas were so late in arriving this year that it was impossible that the usual number be forced safely into bloom by Christmas, in addition to which were heavy losses by freezing. Many poinsettias were lost last summer. The supplies of other plants are more nearly normal, but inquiries develop the fact that the summer was a hard one for the plantsmen, and in the aggregate they have neither so much nor so good stocks at this Christmas as they had last year.

Cut Flowers Plentiful.

Cut flower supplies are more nearly up to the usual quantity and quality steadily improves. The increase in glass last spring probably makes up for all loss in Christmas supply due to the effects of the hot summer, which has been specially apparent in carnations, and for a disposition to crop a part of the roses for January rather than for late December. In the last two or three years it has been increasingly plain that the grower who cut steadily all winter, and especially in January and February, made more money than the one who cropped every plant with the thought in mind that Christmas prices once were the highest of the year.

Every Gift Should Have Its Basket.

The indications are that cut flowers of nearly all kinds will be in better demand this Christmas than in recent years, with better average prices without any advance in the top prices, followed in the first part of the new year by larger supplies than usual and increased incentive to push for business at that season.

WHY THE WEST IS BUSY.

D. C. Horgan, of the Idle Hour Nursery, Macon, Ga., has culled the following gem of thought, which may be taken as showing why the agricultural states of the middle west and south are buying so heavily this season. It is from a rural newspaper:

"Good morning, Si."

"Good morning, Hi."

"I say, Si, what is the price of that wagon over yonder?"

"$90, Hi."

"$90! Why, my father bought the same wagon thirty years ago for $60."

"Yes, Si, he did, and bought it of me, but as I wanted some corn, your father delivered to me 300 bushels of corn in payment for the $60 wagon. I can use more corn now and I will make the same trade with you today as I did with your father some thirty years ago on the same wagon, and will give you from my stock in addition to:

TRADESCANTIAS.

I have tried several different ways of growing tradescantias. After they are rooted I pot them up, three or four cuttings to a 3-inch pot, and shift them so they will not become potbound. I used two different batches of soil, similar to those used for growing roses, and two different temperatures, 50 and 65 degrees at night, but without success. What do you suggest as the best way to grow these plants? Any information will be appreciated. R. E. L.—Mass.

The tradescantia is easily propagated and grown. It is seen at its best below benches or where it is allowed to run at its pleasure. It is hardly desirable as a pot plant except where nothing else can be grown. It is of some value in window boxes. C. W.

REMEDY FOR CYCLAMEN MITE.

I am sending you a sample of a batch of cyclamen plants that seem to be affected by some disease or insect pest. The plants have not been infested with green fly, to my knowledge. They were grown indoors during the summer and since have had a night temperature of 50 to 55 degrees. I shall appreciate any information you can give me with regard to the cause of this trouble and a remedy for it. C. L.—Wis.

The plant arrived in good condition. Both flowers and foliage showed unmistakably the signs of the cyclamen mite. I do not know of any cure for the mite, but frequent dusting of the tops of the tubers with fresh tobacco dust and sprayings with a nicotine extract have been found beneficial by some. Usually when this mite appears it ruins an entire batch. It is not due to any inattention on your part; your treatment has been quite correct. The stock of the best specialists in this line has severe attacks of it occasionally. I would advise you to drop cyclamen culture for one year and buy what plants you may need for your retail trade. C. W.

Lincoln, Ill.—Visitors at the establishment of Gullett & Sons comment on the exceptional showing made by the benches of Carnation Nebraska that were planted earliest. The variety is said not to have done so well for all growers, but these benches seem to leave nothing to be desired.

BRINGING BUYERS BACK

SANTA CLAUS PUBLICITY MAN.

Catching the Spirit of the Day.

On the day the newspapers told of Europe's mobilization of troops, a Boston shoe merchant came out with a large newspaper advertisement, with this headline in heavy, black type: "We are mobilizing ———" Underneath this headline, in lighter type, the sentence continued: "6,000 pairs of smart shoes for tomorrow's sale." This advertiser, by employing a clever catchline, enhanced the attention-winning quality of his sale announcement. The people's appetites were whetted for war literature, and this advertisement, with a headline related to the approaching war, undoubtedly was read by many people who would never have stopped to read had "Shoes tomorrow at $3" been the leading display. In advertising parlance, the shoe dealer was said to have "borrowed" some of the publicity given the war. By injecting current news interest into his advertisement, the shoe advertiser cashed in on the spirit and public interest of the day.

Getting Astride Current Events.

Then came the battle of Wilson versus Hughes—the race between the donkey and the elephant. The quadrennial political stage play of the G. O. P. and the Democrats was on the boards. Straw votes, election bets and mud-slinging were the order of the times. Just before the election, a Chicago wholesale florist had as the display feature of his trade journal advertisement three letters, "G. O. P.," in large, black type. In smaller-sized type, instead of saying something about the Republican party, the readers were solicited to "Give Orders to Pyfer's"—hence the "G. O. P." On election day an eastern newspaper ad reported that "Chalmers carries New England by a large majority." What Chalmers? The Chalmers automobile, to be sure. These are two fair examples of advertising in which a subject of current interest to the masses was utilized to strengthen the first fundamental principle of all advertising—attraction.

Along the same lines many other cases under different circumstances could be related. During the recent infantile paralysis scare a chemical company manufacturing efficacious disinfectants created an enormous sale of its old line of goods by playing up the ravages of the then present plague and recommending the use of its products as a preventive measure. During the so-called baby week, when motion pictures, magazines and newspapers featured "bigger, better babies," department and specialty stores devoted windows tc elaborate displays of baby clothes, cradles, toys, baby carriages, children's nurseries, etc., hoping thereby to catch the attention of mothers interested in the baby welfare movement.

Santa Claus Delivers Flowers.

And now the Christmas spirit is here. The season of merry gift-giving and good cheer has come again. How may advertisers make a stronger bid for the Christmas shopper's attention? One answer is easy—use Santa Claus to attract the children and the parents will come along. The idea is not new. Old

A Christmas Suggestion via the Movies.

Saint Nicholas, patron saint of children and dispenser of gifts on Christmas eve, has been turned to advertising account many times before. Department stores each year have Santa Claus in the toy sections, but it remained for a Kansas City florist, the George M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co., to press Santa Claus into the delivery service. The accompanying illustration shows the Kellogg delivery auto and Santy delivering a box of flowers. If this was not excellent publicity, it at least was good publicity. Grown-ups, as well as children, can be attracted by Santa Claus—everybody is interested in masquerade.

In speaking of this advertising stunt, which was used Christmas, 1915, the Kellogg Flower & Plant Co. said:

"We decorated the car with frieze, Christmas roping and wreaths, and used Santa Claus to deliver all packages. This certainly made a hit with the public. Many customers stated that they made purchases just in order to have Santa Claus deliver the package of plants or cut flowers at their houses, for the sake of their children."

It is apparent that the Kellogg Santa Claus is an advocate of rapid transit and service first to customers. The high cost of feeding has made the modern Santa Claus turn loose his reindeer and abandon the sleighbells' jingle for the auto's honk.

MOVIE SHOW ADVERTISING.

Those who claim to know assert that one person out of every four families in the United States attends a moving picture show at least once a day. In crowded centers the average is said to be much higher; probably one member out of every family in your localities attends once a day.

A Good Stock Design Made by Someone Who Had Access to The Review.

Santa Claus as a Florist's Delivery Messenger—Note the Roping and Red Wreaths on the Truck.

Naturally, then, the large numbers of people who go to the movies offer a field for publicity which has not been overlooked. To meet the interest of every individual, there is not only high class drama and good comedy, but up-to-the-minute news pictorials of events throughout the world, and a great deal of attention has been paid to lantern slide advertising.

Florists who have tried this method of obtaining publicity quickly found that there was a great deal of difference in the results produced by different slides; that the selection of the slides was, in fact, scarcely less important than selecting a movie theater patronized by the right class of people.

To begin with, careful thought should be given the matter of framing the appeal so that the instantaneous effect on the movie patron will be a resolve to buy. Slide manufacturers have devoted much care to the work of preparing copy and layouts and their artists have learned to put the last degree of legibility and distinctiveness into the hand-lettering. The copy prepared, a photographic negative is developed and proved before the positive is made. The smallest possible flaw would mean starting over with a new negative. The positive is inspected in the dark room under a strong white light, and it is not "passed" unless flawless. The coloring must be done by people who understand color values and the exact effects produced by the various conditions which may govern the projection of the slides. The name to be filled in should be accurately printed on a press and the crystalloid strip securely fastened between the slide and the cover plate. All suggestion of patch work thus is eliminated. These points all have a direct and important bearing on the way slides are received by the public.

When ordering slides it is well to get a set made, for different occasions, so that they may be changed frequently. The same slide should not be shown more than one week, for it will have ordinarily been seen by every patron of the theater in that time.

TEACHING THE PUBLIC.

The Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association has begun the publicity campaign provided for at the recent meeting in Chicago. The first step has been to provide the members with a large display card for use in their stores and show windows. This is the beginning of an effort to let the public know of the facilities for the delivery of flowers at a distance. Heretofore such efforts have been entirely of individual character; hereafter they are to be directed by Secretary Pochelon with the aid of an advisory committee of the association's members. This is expected to result in concerted and effective work to popularize the service with the public. It should have the aid and encouragement of all florists, growers as well as retailers, whether members of the association or not, because every telegraph delivery order is just that much clear gain to the trade—it calls for flowers which otherwise would have to find some other sale.

THE WHITE MEDAL.

The trustees of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society have awarded the George Robert White medal of honor for the year 1916 to William Robinson, of Gravetye Manor, Sussex, England.

This is the eighth award of this medal made by the society in recognition of eminent service in the advancement of horticulture. Previous awards have been made to Prof. C. S. Sargent, of the Arnold Arboretum; Jackson T. Dawson; Victor Lemoine, of Nancy, France; Michael H. Walsh, the rose specialist of Woods Hole, Mass.; the park commission of Rochester, N. Y.; Sir Harry J. Veitch, of London, and Ernest H. Wilson, of Jamaica Plain, Mass.

BEGONIAS OFF SHADE.

I am enclosing some leaves of a begonia, the name of which I do not know. I would like to know why it grows off shade. The begonia was grown in a night temperature of 50 degrees, sometimes a little lower, and 70 to 80 degrees was maintained in the daytime. The plants seem to grow spindly. The soil is a good mixture, such as used for roses.

R. E. L.—Mass.

The variety is Begonia maculata, or B. argyrostigma. With this variety it is usual for a certain proportion of the leaves to come spotted and others to remain green. C. W.

How the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association is Educating the Public.

THE CHRISTMAS ADS.

USE OF THE MODERN POWER.

The Drawing Power of Advertising.

To do business at Christmas—more business this Christmas than usual—it is necessary to have something to sell. Preparations must be made. And having arranged for supplies is not enough. Display is essential. The flower store that gets the transient business will be the one that puts up the best front, not necessarily the flashiest front, but the most seductive showing. That's where skill counts.

Then comes the no less important matter of reminding the public of the special appropriateness of flowers as gifts and of one's own preparedness to supply the demand. After years of waiting for customers to come to the door, florists the last few years have awakened to the fact that people can be drawn to the store, or to the telephone, which is the same thing, by carefully prepared advertising.

Recent Discoveries.

It has been discovered that the florist who combines high-class stock, high-class equipment, high-class service and high-class advertising is the one who is making the most rapid progress in expanding his sales and his profits.

It has been found that the man who provides the first three but leaves out the fourth concomitant is going forward or back only as his whole neighborhood changes; that he is the football of fortune rather than the master of his own destiny.

There still are many florists whose only advertising is the show window, but the more progressive are employing the more far-reaching methods. Page ads in the daily newspapers frequently are used, but not so often that they have ceased to excite remark.

Some of Last Year's Ads.

In this issue of The Review are reproduced some of the ads its subscribers sent in last Christmas with reports that they had proved profitable. Two of these newspaper ads are from the east and two from the west—and they differ as widely in character as they do in point of origin and use. Penn's is an example of the highest type of metropolitan output. Originally published in the Boston Post, with a circulation of nearly half a million copies a day, the rate is so high that the best talent could be put on the preparation of layout, copy and cuts. The Review has reproduced so many Penn ads that they lack the news element of novelty, but thus far no florist's retail advertising has been discovered anywhere in the United States that is so well worth study and, if not copying, of emulation. There are ideas in the Penn ads; they show that hard thought and business intelligence have been employed. They help the whole trade as well as the concern that pays the bill, for they advertise flowers. If a hundred florists in as many different cities would do the intelligent advertising Penn has done, how the flower business would boom!

Quite at the other end of the scale is the small ad of the Rhode Island concern that makes no direct offer, quotes no prices and which comes under the head of general publicity only. But Johnson Bros. were pleased with the results, for they sent it to The Review as an example of their successful effort.

General or Direct?

Of the same general character, only a little more elaborate, is the ad of The Rosery, of Terre Haute, Ind. The design is a stock one sold to florists or newspapers. The Review is not aware of the source, but several of its subscribers used the same design last year and the plant and flower cuts are easily recognizable as having been redrawn from some which have appeared in this paper. C. L. Houck, manager of The Rosery, wrote four days before Christmas last year, "This ad already is bringing results." Lozier, Des Moines, used the same design and almost the same copy and H. E. Lozier said, "We have been using this style of ad successfully for two years." And yet the ad makes no direct offer; it is general publicity only.

On the other hand, the Bancroft ad, which is said to have "pulled like a greenhouse chimney," is extremely direct—it is nothing but price-list, where Penn devotes a considerable part of his space to a careful and alluring description of each article priced.

Advertising is not as simple as it seems. It may be true that any advertising is better than no advertising, but a little consideration will convince the most casual of florists that some advertising is a great deal better than others—that the difference principally is due to the time, thought and money expended on it.

PLANS THAT WIN.

Methods of Getting New Trade.

The publishers of System magazine also issue a series of "How" books, telling pretty nearly everything one would need to know to conduct any business successfully. The latest is "How to Win New Trade," and of the 161 plans described the following are indexed as of special interest to florists:

A Special Service.

"A certain Iowa merchant makes a feature during the summer months of advice on how to keep lawns, shrubs and trees in good condition. He also maintains a department which takes care of lawns and gardens for a suitable fee while the owners are away for the summer."

Stimulating Telephone Sales.

"An unusually prosperous store has built a flourishing week-end trade in cut flowers through advertising specific bouquets at stated prices. The combinations offered usually range in price from $1 to $2 and the store calls them 'week-end specials.' One of the rules of these special combination sales is that orders must be booked by Friday night, the prices not being effective on orders delayed until Saturday. Orders are taken over the telephone, of course, and deliveries are made to all parts of the city. A dollar, for example, may buy half a dozen large yellow chrysanthemums and a bunch of little pompons

Last Year's Customers.

''A florist whose business is growing unusually rapidly sends to every customer who purchased during the previous July, August and September a letter referring to this previous hot-month purchase and asking if by chance the remembrance is to be repeated during the current summer. He also keeps posted on the club dances and the many little entertainments always held during the summer. He writes to the men suggesting how much one of his special summer bouquets will add to their partners' pleasure at the dance.''

WHAT IT COSTS US.

The Bureau of Plant Industry of the Department of Agriculture is asking for a number of large appropriations for use in connection with its work during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1918. The investigation of plant diseases will require $62,500, an increase of $14,000 over this year's appropriation. Citrus canker investigations will require $250,000. There is asked the sum of $85,915 for investigation of diseases of forest and ornamental trees and shrubs, a decrease of $1,260. Drug plant investigations require $58,820, an increase of $5,000. Seed testing will create a need for $34,700. Economic and systematic botany will require $26,100, although of this the sum of $3,000 is to be expended in coöperating with horticultural organizations in the standardization of botanical names in horticultural use.

The free distribution of flower and vegetable seeds by members of Congress will cost the government $8,820 less next year than during the present fiscal year, the appropriation asked for being only $243,720. It is expected that there will be the same old controversy in the House and Senate, which will end in the retention of these seeds as in former years.

The Arlington Farm will get $21,900, a part of which will be used in the care and maintenance of the rose garden. Plant introduction work will necessitate the expenditure of $93,040, it is estimated; the Federal Horticultural Board's expenses will amount to $75,000, as usual, and $87,430 will be used in carrying out the provisions of the insecticide law. PLANNING THE LEADERS

TIME TO THINK BASKETS.

Basket Profits are Profits Plus.

Fancifully speaking, when the combined sale of basket and flowers reaches the bookkeeping department the statistician there dissects the selling price into three distinct morsels—cost, overhead, profit. The last morsel, usually the most disconcerting and illusive of the three, then advances to "Cr.," provided nothing unforeseen has happened to hack off a fraction or two.

Now profit is profit on a basket sale, but those who have graduated from the drones' class will admit that earnings on basket sales also represent an insurance, as it were, on repeat orders. Namely, the more baskets a florist disposes of the more frequent will be his repeat orders for plants or cut flowers to keep the baskets filled.

Mr. Brown buys a handsome two-tone basket filled with cut roses, and presents it to Mrs. Brown on the occasion of their tin wedding anniversary. Some time afterward Mr. Brown receives a catchy billet from his florist, which sounds something like this: "Dear Mr. Brown: Why not let flowers cheer your home all the time? That pretty basket you purchased from me can be refilled every little while at a most reasonable cost. Today, for instance, I offer you some unusually fragrant roses—just the thing to put the finishing touch to your apartments. Say Main 123 to the telephone operator."

Baskets Good Christmas Gifts.

Admittedly the idea presented is a small one, but there are many such ideas and opportunities, each of which may grow up some day and each of which counts in the aggregate. Anyway, we are not supposed to sit in a rocking chair and wait for business to walk in through the door—we are supposed to go after the business, and get it.

As Christmas and the gift-giving days draw apace the sales possibilities of baskets take on special significance; inasmuch as a basket and its contents usually serves as a gift to someone. Therefore now is the time for the "merchant florist" to put his basket stock through a rigorous third degree. The assortment should be sufficiently large to cover the tastes of the public and meet the requirements of short and long-stemmed flowers as well as plants. The next thing is to make plans for exploiting the baskets and the stock to go in them.

In a few cases the desirability of baskets as Christmas gifts may be profitably advertised in the local newspapers. Florists who possess good mailing lists perhaps could send out 1-cent postage folders which combine illustrations of the filled baskets with a "personal" letter. Then there is the display window, in which the retailer shows his baskets filled with flowers or plants. Cards suggesting baskets as gifts should be placed in the window, as many persons not familiar with florists' merchandise are likely to think that the baskets shown are display units of the florist, and not a part of the sale.

A Help that Sells Better Baskets.

The showing of baskets in the store is of special importance. Many a man or woman who crosses the threshold with the intention of purchasing only a few flowers for a vase may be attracted by the baskets and purchase one of them, as well as the stock to go with it. A good assortment on display will assist the customers in buying and assist the florist in selling. It often is desirable to bunch the different styles of baskets, in order to provide a contrast between the high and low-priced ones. The advantage of this is that the average customer, in choosing from an assortment of all grades, is likely to select a basket in the higher-priced division, because the one chosen seems much prettier than its lower-priced mates. When the buyer has selected a high-grade basket the florist then proceeds to fill it with high-grade stock, in order to harmonize the two items. Thus the amount of the sale is increased.

The illustration on page 33 shows a good basket display in the store of the Siebrecht Floral Co., at Winona, Minn. But it is not necessary to have an expensive wall case to advantageously display baskets and other receptacles; the management of the Siebrecht Floral Co. simply believed in doing everything the right way at the start. More flowers, and baskets filled with flowers and plants, took their position near the basket display when the photographer had finished his work.

THE CHRISTMAS PLANTS

SOME TIMELY HINTS.

Early Preparations.

As sales of Christmas plants are often made well in advance of the holiday, it is well to have a good display in the store window or show house in good season. Keep both store and show house as cool as personal comfort will permit. Get all the pots scrubbed clean before the busy selling time arrives. It is a job of some magnitude to get all the pots clean, but it is vastly worse if potwashing is put off until the plants are sold. Another point to remember is that plants in clean pots, if even of only moderate quality, look better and are liable to sell better than well grown ones in pots green with slime.

Careful Wrapping Necessary.

The advance in the price of every description of paper and twine will be quite a serious matter to florists this season. Every plant sold needs careful wrapping in order to make sure that it will reach its purchaser in good condition. Climatic conditions over a large section of our country are notoriously treacherous; even in December we get spells of wonderfully balmy weather and one is much tempted to pack lightly and save on paper. This works well if the plants have but a short distance to go, but it is decidedly risky if plants are left to the tender mercies of expressmen. Heavy wrapping with paper will exclude a surprising amount of cold and my advice would be to wrap heavily and be on the safe side. Stock up with old newspapers and be sure to use soft tissue to wrap next to the flowers of poinsettias, gardenias, orchids, valley and other more or less easily damaged blooms. A common but inexcusable blunder is to wrap the plant up well and leave the pot exposed. It is important to keep the roots as well as the shoots warm. There are a few tough subjects which may withstand "cold feet," but it is much the safest way to cover the pot warmly.

Plants which have been forced hard to get them into bloom should be gradually inured to a lower temperature.

Making Up.

Make up baskets, hampers, pans and boxes of plants now. Retailers who have no greenhouses are at a decided disadvantage when it comes to this work, as they lack facilities for storing the necessary compost and, furthermore, only a small number of retailers have sufficient practical knowledge of the growing end to know how to pot a plant properly or to make up a hamper or basket in such a way that it will last as it should. Not only loam but plenty of damp moss should be on hand. Often moss can be used altogether and, being more cleanly and less weighty than soil, it is not surprising to find it quite extensively used. Plant arrangements can be either all foliage plants, all flowering plants or a combination of the two. Poinsettias grown one stem to a pot can be effectively used and are perhaps the best of all plants for the purpose.

Poinsettias.

Poinsettias are among the most pronouncedly Christmas flowers we have and always meet with a large sale. Being grown warm, they naturally suffer severely if we chance to have a cold wave at the holiday season and need special care in wrapping. They are more easily chilled than any other Christmas plant and should have a position in the store free from drafts. All growers are not equally successful in keeping dark green foliage on their plants. Ill considered feeding, careless ventilation and slipshod watering are responsible for lack of leaves at blooming time. By the judicious use of small ferns or asparagus it is possible to cover up some of the nakedness of defoliated stems. All making up should be done forthwith. If the foliage holds green until your customers receive them they will not kick. In a few days the leaves will take on a golden hue, but the bracts will hold for a long time.

Begonias.

This has been a fine season for begonias and I do not remember seeing them more beautifully flowered. Glory of Cincinnati easily is the Christmas leader among the begonias. Good points in its favor are that it withstands the trying conditions of the average steam heated home much better than Gloire de Lorraine, which, however, still has many uses and for basket purposes far outclasses Cincinnati. Mrs. J. A. Peterson is to be seen in considerable numbers this season. The contrast between the bronzy leaves and reddish flowers makes a various appeal. Gloire de Chatelaine is a variety anyone can grow. It blooms the year around and makes a fine Christmas plant. The English winter-blooming hybrids are seen more than a year ago. In size, brilliance and effect such varieties as Mrs. Heal and Optima are far ahead of the Lorraine type.

All these begonias will be better if kept moderately cool.

Cyclamens.

Christmas is the season when the bulk of the cyclamens can be sold, providing they have been kept warm during the last two or three months and have a nice lot of flowers and good foliage. A well leaved cyclamen has beauty without flowers, but customers will rarely buy any flowering plant until it is in bloom. Scarlet, deep pink and crimson varieties sell well at the holidays; white plants hang fire until spring, but it is pretty hard for a lover of nice blooming plants to refuse to purchase cyclamens, even though the best may neither be scarlet nor crimson in color.

Tell your customers to keep their cyclamens somewhat cool and to water them with care; then there is no other winter-blooming plant which will flower so long as the cyclamen.

Azaleas.

It looked two or three months ago as though we would have no azaleas except the left-overs from last year, but it turned out that arrivals have been more numerous than for several years. Long delays on the docks have discouraged some importers and caused considerable loss of foliage, while many were frozen on the railroad. It is necessary this season to force hard to get blooming plants open for the holidays. Charles Enke, Mme. Petrick and Deutsche Perle are a reliable trio for early blooming. Backward plants should have vigorous heat and free syringing, discontinuing it when the first flowers have opened.

Basket Display in the Store of the Siebrecht Floral Co., Winona, Minn.

Berried Plants.

Anything carrying red berries sells well now and there is a fair variety of material available, including ardisias, solanums, Christmas peppers, hollies, aucubas, skimmias, etc. Ardisias, if well ripened, sell rapidly. It is not possible to sell these for a low price, as they are slow growers. On the other hand, the Jerusalem cherries are easily and quickly grown and can be sold quite cheaply. Christmas peppers as pot plants are less desirable than ardisias or solanums. Their chief value is for cutting and use in berried arrangements. Imported hollies in tubs, if well foliaged, in addition to being well berried, are more attractive than any other berried plants, but cannot, as a rule, be sold at retail for less than $15 to $20 per pair. If they are kept cool and well watered they will hold foliage and fruit all winter.

Colored-Leaved Plants.

Colored-leaved plants do not move as quickly as flowering plants, but in some respects they give more satisfaction than the former, for, whereas the bulk of flowering plants in a steam heated house are about valueless in eight or ten days, such colored-leaved plants as crotons, dracænas, pandanus, etc., will keep fresh all winter with reasonable care. These plants make up nicely in hampers and baskets. Your customers should be told to give them a warm room.

Holly and Mistletoe

FAVORITES NOW AT CHRISTMAS.

Held Sacred in Ancient Times.

Everyone knows, of course, that holly and mistletoe are regarded as the special emblems of Christmas, the most appropriate of all decorations for the occasion, but why are they so regarded? A recent issue of the Missouri Botanical Garden Bulletin gives the best available answer to that question and supplies other interesting information about these favorite decorative materials.

Holly and mistletoe, says the bulletin, are inseparably associated with the Christmas season, not only on account of their beauty and persistence during the winter months, but because from earliest times these two plants have, by tradition, been linked with the life of Christ. The most plausible origin for the common name of holly is that it is a corruption of holy, and the German name of "Christ thorn" perpetuates the legend that leaves of this tree were used to form the "crown of thorns."

Supposed Efficacy of Mistletoe.

The mistletoe, among many other woods, has frequently been referred to as the one from which the cross was made. Previous to the crucifixion—so runs the legend—it was a splendid forest tree, its disgraceful use causing it to assume its present humble parasitic habit.

Long before the Christian era, however, holly and mistletoe were singled out as plants of special significance. The Druids styled the mistletoe as "all heal," as it was considered an antidote for all disease, and even to the present day in some localities the virtues of its wood are highly regarded. In Sweden a finger ring of mistletoe is supposed to prevent sickness, and in France amulets of this plant were much worn. Culpepper speaks of mistletoe as "good for the grief of the sinew, itch and toothache, the biting of mad dogs and venomous beasts," and Sir Thomas Brown alludes to its efficacy in cases of epilepsy.

Ancient Beliefs About Holly.

At Roman weddings, holly wreaths were sent as tokens of congratulation, and remarkable stories concerning the powers of this tree are recorded by Pliny. In Holland's translation of Pliny's "Historie of the World," published in 1601, is found the following:

"In touching the Holy or Hulver Tree, if it be planted about an house, whether it be within a city or standing in the country, it serveth for a countercharm and keepeth away all ill spells or inchantments and defends the house from lightning. Pythagoras affirmeth that the flower of this tree will cause water to stand all upon an ice, also that if a staff made thereof, if a man do fling it at any beast what-so-ever, although it chanceth to light short for default of strength in his arms who flung it, will not-with-standing, etch forward and roll from the place where it fell upon the earth and approach near to the beast aforesaid; of so admirable a nature is the Holy Tree."

Varieties of Holly.

To most people there are but two kinds of holly, the European, Ilex Aquifolium, and the American, Ilex opaca. The botanist, however, recognizes over 175 species, which range from the north temperate to the south temperate zone and are found on every continent. Of this number, about fifteen occur in North America, although only five of these would be classed as trees, and but three of the latter are evergreen. Indeed, a considerable group of the hollies shed their leaves in the winter, just like other deciduous trees; but that the evergreen habit was considered a fixed characteristic of this plant is well attested by the quaint old English proverb of the confirmed prevaricator, of whom it was said: "He lees never but when the hollen is green."

Japan and China have thirty or forty species, some of which are being introduced into this country for ornamental puposes. The home of the holly, so far as number of species is concerned, may be considered to be northern Brazil, where about half the known forms occur wild. Europe has but a single species, but this deficiency is made up by there being over 150 different varieties of Ilex Aquifolium—at least they are so regarded by horticulturists, but there seems to be some evidence that a part of these forms may have originated from the Canary Island species, Ilex platyphylla, rather than the true European holly.

Holly That Bears No Berries.

That only some trees bear berries is due to the fact that in the holly the sexes are distinct; the female, or pistillate flowers, which produce the fruit, occur on one tree, while the pollen-bearing flowers are on a separate tree. Care should be taken, therefore, in planting hollies desired for the berries, to secure only female trees. While it is believed that the first printed notice of this difference in sex was communicated by Martyn in the British Royal Society Transactions, about the middle of the eighteenth century, it must have been known to the country people long before this, since the term "he and she hollies" is quite old.

Although the usual color of the berries is red, it is not uncommon to have varieties in this country and elsewhere that produce pale yellow fruits, and even white berries occur occasionally as a sport.

Economic Uses of Holly.

Economically, aside from its use for decoration, the holly is useful for furnishing a wood, which, because of its white color and even texture, is in great demand for use in carving and scrollwork. Formerly, when birdlime was in general use, the inner bark of the holly furnished the principal source of this product, and the herbalists of a century or two ago relied upon this plant for the cure of many a complaint. Perhaps one of the most novel remedies was its application in the cure of chilblains, the method being to whip the affected part with freshly gathered holly leaves until the blood flowed. Ilex Paraguensis, widely distributed in South America, furnishes the maté or Paraguay tea and is in great demand by the natives of the country in which it is found. The beverage prepared from the leaves of this holly has a considerable stimulating effect, and the drink holds the place of tea and coffee among the natives.

Mistletoe, Native and Foreign.

As in the case of the holly, so with the mistletoe, there is a distinct American and European variety. From a botanical standpoint, the difference between the two forms of mistletoe is much greater, since the European plant belongs to one genus, viscum, and the American to another, phoradendron. There are about eleven species of the American form, widely scattered through the south and southwest, and occasionally growing as far north as New Jersey and Ohio. Several species have been reported from Missouri, although it is rare.

While ordinarily considered a parasite, since it always grows upon some tree, the mistletoe is not strictly such. Its own leaves are capable of manufacturing food, and it is not entirely dependent upon its host, as is the case in a true parasite. The chief contribution of the host to its unwelcome associate seems to be water, with certain contained salts, and while the mistletoe does not directly kill the tree upon which it is growing, it often dwarfs and distorts the branch to which it is attached, and may furnish the opportunity for the admission of fungi which ultimately destroy the tree itself.

Attaching Itself to a Tree.

The distribution of the mistletoe is almost entirely by birds, the seeds either being swallowed whole, or, because of their stickiness, adhering to the beak or feet, to become dislodged later on some favorable tree. Tradition limited this dissemination of the plant to a single bird, the "mistletoe thrush" or "misselbird," which was the messenger of the gods. Hence the occurrence of mistletoe, particularly on the oak, was held to be deeply significant. Many other trees are infested by this parasite, however; in the southwest the hackberry, elm, mesquite and osage orange are the most common hosts.

After the seeds are deposited on the branch of a tree, they usually begin to germinate as soon as moisture and temperature conditions are favorable. When the root-like portion comes in contact with the branch, it flattens out, forming a sucker-like disk. Depending upon circumstances, there may or may not be produced from this disk during the first year a process which penetrates the bark of the host as far as the wood. During the second year a single pair of leaves may be formed, and the "roots," by mechanical force and the secretion of a digestive ferment, continue to ramify the tissues of the tree upon which the parasite is established.

The mature plants are bushy in appearance and may reach a height of three or four feet. The flowers are produced in late summer or early fall, so that the berries are well developed early in December. Plants of the European mistletoe have been found which were estimated to be 40 years of age, but it seems probable that the American variety does not normally attain an age of more than half this number of years.

WHERE EXTREMES MEET.

Here we have a picture showing ancient and modern transportation. The photograph was made at the establishment of E. A. Beaven, Evergreen, Ala., who is seen seated at the wheel in the touring car. Note the load of holly is drawn by a team consisting of a donkey and an ox.

LYCOPODIUM DEAR.

When C. C. Pollworth makes his annual trip in the Wisconsin woods he has two objectives. First, he is after bouquet green and, second, after deer—but perhaps it should be stated the other way around, for we have a photograph of the deer and none of the bouquet green. It even is rumored that deer were more plentiful than green in the Wisconsin woods this season, at least the hunters found the lycopodium hard to hit with any shot that resembled the small change which once did effective work.

The Extremes of Transportation Methods Employed in Holly Trade.

SPHAGNUM IS SOARING

EAST AND WEST BOTH SHORT.

Weather, Not War, This Time.

On European battlefields they are using sphagnum moss for first aid dressings for gunshot wounds, but this has nothing to do with the jump in the price of sphagnum to those in this country who use it as first aid in making funeral designs.

The sudden tightening of the market for sphagnum moss is due to the November cold snap. It has taken two or three weeks for the word to work its way through the trade, but jobbers in sphagnum practically all agree that this is to be a season of short supply. Indeed, some of those who took advance orders at rather low prices are having their own troubles, to obtain the stock at a price that will permit them to break even.

At the Western Source.

City Point, Wis., is the western center of the supply of sphagnum moss. The average shipments from that locality are about fifty carloads per year. It is impossible to obtain accurate information as to how many cars have gone out this season, but the season is practically over and the quantity shipped is decidedly less than usual. In the beginning weather conditions were unfavorable, there being too much water. Then, when the season opened, help was scarce and wages much higher than heretofore. The season closed much earlier than usual this year because of the snow and frost that filled the marshes at the time of the nation-wide cold wave in November.

Even before the short supply became apparent the City Point shippers were asking higher prices than usual for sphagnum, basing their requirements, first, on the cost of labor and, secondly, on the cost of burlap, which went up on them from about 3 cents to about 6 cents per yard, forty-two inches in width.

A City Point shipper, who estimates the local output at 20,000 bales, says he will not be surprised to see moss $1 per bale in car lots f. o. b. shipping station by May 1, 1917, which would be nearly twice the usual price.

At the Eastern Source.

The eastern center for the supply of sphagnum is the Barnegat district in New Jersey. From one shipping point that usually produces about 4,000 bales (much larger than the Wisconsin bale) the shipments this year have been about normal, but the price has been higher because of the increased cost of labor and burlap.

The sphagnum moss business always has been a hand-to-mouth affair. When the season ends because of the arrival of winter there is nothing much doing until spring, no stock of consequence being carried by those who gather, bale and ship. Damp moss cannot be stored in bales, because it quickly heats and rots the burlap. If it is stored in bulk, it gathers moisture, becomes difficult to bale and rots out the burlap during a few days' journey in a freight car. Consequently the trade now has in hand nearly all the sphagnum it will get this season, unless the shortage and consequent high prices produce shipments from some unexpected source.

Grand Island, Neb.—E. M. Sage says that the chrysanthemum season was one of the best ever experienced at the Williams establishment, all stock having been cleaned up. Carnations are a little late in this section of the country, due to the long continued dry weather last summer.

In the beginning weather conditions were unfavorable, there being too much water. Then, when the season opened, help was scarce and wages much higher than heretofore. The season closed much earlier than usual this year because of the snow and frost that filled the marshes at the time of the nation-wide cold wave in November.

Even before the short supply became apparent the City Point shippers were asking higher prices than usual for sphagnum, basing their requirements, first, on the cost of labor and, secondly, on the cost of burlap, which went up on them from about 3 cents to about 6 cents per yard, forty-two inches in width.

A City Point shipper, who estimates the local output at 20,000 bales, says he will not be surprised to see moss $1 per bale in car lots f. o. b. shipping station by May 1, 1917, which would be nearly twice the usual price.

At the Eastern Source.

The eastern center for the supply of sphagnum is the Barnegat district in New Jersey. From one shipping point that usually produces about 4,000 bales much larger than the Wisconsin bale the shipments this year have been about normal, but the price has been higher because of the increased cost of labor and burlap.

The sphagnum moss business always has been a hand to mouth affair. When the season ends because of the arrival of winter there is nothing much doing until spring, no stock of consequence being carried by those who gather, bale and ship. Damp moss cannot be stored in bales, because it quickly heats and rots the burlap. If it is stored in bulk, it gathers moisture, becomes difficult to bale and rots out the burlap during a few days' journey in a freight car. Consequently the trade now has in hand nearly all the sphagnum it will get this season, unless the shortage and consequent high prices produce shipments from some unexpected source.

Grand Island, Neb.—E. M. Sage says that the chrysanthemum season was one of the best ever experienced at the Williams establishment, all stock having been cleaned up. Carnations are a little late in this section of the country, due to the long continued dry weather last summer.

THE FUEL SITUATION

TODAY AND IN THE FUTURE.

Next Year's Contracts.

The coal trade considers it highly significant that the Cambria Steel Co. has signed a contract to run one year from January 1, 1917, calling for 30,000 tons of coal per month at $2.60 per ton at the mines for mine-run coal. This compares with a price of $1.40 paid by the same concern for a smaller tonnage of the same grade of coal for a year from January 1, 1916.

Within two weeks, contracts are said to have been signed by users in a variety of trades calling for the delivery, during 1917, of more than 2,000,000 tons of coal at a price better than $1 a ton above the contract figure of 1916.

Today's Market.

"The situation has not changed," says the Black Diamond, the coal trade's paper, "but people think it has and prices are a trifle softer."

The mild weather up to December 9 has been a large factor in the feeling of ease in the coal market, as it made the consumption of fuel less than normal for the season, but winter came almost at the same moment as did announcement of embargoes on the principal railroads east of Chicago, with the result that demands promptly increased. The indications lead to the belief that the country is in the midst of the worst car situation it has ever seen. Reports indicate a slight easing of cars in the high volatile district of West Virginia and at the mines of eastern Kentucky. However, the cars in the smokeless district, in the anthracite field, in western Pennsylvania, in Ohio, in Indiana and Illinois are shorter than they were two weeks ago, when the market was at the climax of its rise.

While prices eased off a little last week the coal trade felt that it was only a temporary softening in keeping with the weather and $4 to $4.25 was asked for mine-run smokeless at the mine, which means a price of $6.05 to $6.30 at Chicago. Mine-run of Franklin county has been held at $3.25 to $3.50 at the mine, which means $4.30 to $4.55 delivered in the Chicago district. Other Indiana and Illinois bituminous coals are about the same price.

Florists' Experiences.

The mild weather, as long as it lasted, was distinctly in favor of the growers. It reduced their requirements and eased up the demands others made, with the result that deliveries have been a little more in accordance with contracts. Some of the best companies have been delivering on contracts every pound of coal that came out of their mines, regardless of the fact that at least twice as much money was to be had by diverting a part of it to the open market. Such concerns should have no trouble in getting business in the future. It has been the experience of others, however, that it was possible to get deliveries only by paying a premium of about $1 per ton above the contract. It seems cars can be had for coal at a price.

The smaller florists, and the larger ones who did not make contracts last spring, are the ones who are hardest hit, as they not only must worry about a possible inability to secure fuel as fast as needed but must pay the straight market price. There are many who, with the cost of coal at least double what it was last year, will do a hard season's work and be lucky to break even.

The effect of the new demurrage rules is as yet an unknown quantity. Growers have been notified that if they do not unload cars immediately they must pay demurrage up to $5 per day, or about 10 cents per ton. The coal trade asserts it will make it more difficult to get coal on the open market, which perhaps will be a distinct gain for the man who contracts.

INJURIOUS MINERAL IN WATER.

I am compelled to use mineral water for my plants or pipe other water a long distance. Is there anything that I can put in the water to counteract the effect of the mineral? The water is extremely hard and seems to injure the plants, especially the ferns.

C. E. S.—Wash.

Without knowing just what minerals are contained in the water, and the amount of each, we are not able to give any definite advice. We would suggest referring the matter to your state experts, in the chemical department of the State Agricultural College, Pullman, Wash.

While it would not be feasible to procure other water for supplying all of the plants in the greenhouses, it would be possible to collect the drip water, if a steam heating system is used, and thus secure enough for watering the ferns and other plants that are particularly susceptible to injury. We would suggest that when using the alkali water, the intervals between waterings be made as long as possible without injury to the plants, and that about once a month or six weeks the soil be watered liberally, so as to wash out the alkali.

FERTILIZERS GOING UP

SUPPLY DIMINISHING.

Demand Increasing.

In common with practically everything else the grower uses, fertilizers have advanced in price, but unquestionably they are going much higher.

Cattle manure, formerly the easiest of fertilizers to obtain, and still without an equal for florists' use, long has been beyond the reach of many growers. Years ago cattle manure was to be had for the asking at any of the large stockyards of the country. All the florist need do was to indicate his willingness to pay the freight on any number of carloads. Gradually the demand increased until it became easily possible to get good prices for the material, and at the same time freights went up to the point where the delivered cost became a serious item for the grower. This made the opening for the commercial or processed fertilizers, which now are the chief reliance of thousands of florists.

In the last few months there has been a steady increase in the prices of all fertilizer ingredients, natural and chemical. It is another case of the war—all the ills we are heir to nowadays are laid to Europe's imbroglio. It is the fact, however, that large quantities of German fertilizers now are cut out of the American market, while freight space from South America, the principal other source of supply of nitrates, is hard to get and high in price. The result has been a largely increased demand for the slaughter-house fertilizers originating in this country and for which formerly florists had little competition.

Manufacturing Costs Rise.

For instance, raw ground bone now is quoted at New York at from $33 to $38 per ton. Dried blood is $3.40 in the New York market, but the quotation is nominal, there being no offers. Tankage at Chicago is $2.65 to $2.85. The stocks on hand have diminished materially of late and higher prices are practically certain.

Scarcity of raw material is only one of the troubles the fertilizer manufacturers have encountered in the last few months. One of their principal difficulties lies in the increased manufacturing cost; some of them assert it has doubled during 1916. For instance, laborers who were getting $1.75 per day now demand $3 per day and are extremely independent in their attitude. Commercial fertilizers nearly all are shipped in bags and this is another of the items that have jumped clear out of sight.

All these factors combined have resulted in a material advance in the cost of fertilizers to florists and it is an item of expense which cannot be eliminated. A plant is like a horse; if you do not feed it, it will cease to work for you.

A point to be borne in mind is that wherever possible it will be well to lay in a supply of fertilizers now, before further advances are made.

La Fayette, Ind.—H. Roth is planning to leave for California immediately after Christmas, with the intention of spending the winter there.

Leavenworth, Kan.—The opening of the Custom Flower Shop last month, in its new location on South Fifth street, was successfully conducted by Miss Katherine Dicks, the proprietress, who presented to each customer a carnation bloom. The larger floor space will permit a greater expansion of business, better handling of orders and the stocking of a larger and more complete line of baskets and other supplies.

CARNATIONS

IF IT WERE ONLY MOTHERS' DAY!

At Fairbury, Ill., Kring Bros., who ship their flowers to the Chicago market, have three houses, 30x300, in carnations. Two houses are of White Enchantress and those who have visited the place this month say they never have seen a larger crop. The accompanying illustration shows how one of the houses of White Enchantress looked December 7. In addition to an abundant crop, the quality is excellent.

RED SPIDER CONTROL.

Having of late discovered signs of the red spider in our carnation benches, and as fumigation seemingly is of no avail, we write to inquire if there is any really effective treatment for the elimination of this pest. We know that red spiders will not thrive where sprayings are frequent, but this method produces carnation rust in our houses.

We are informed that by vaporizing sulphur we may rid the plants of the spiders, and with this in view we have purchased two Campbell vaporizers. As yet we have not tried this remedy, as we do not see how it can be successful. Will vaporized sulphur do the trick as claimed—kill the red spider? If not, what is the most sure cure you know of.

S. R. J.—Can.

We have never employed sulphur fumes to destroy the red spider, but we have no reason to doubt the efficacy of that remedy. The principal objection to vaporizing sulphur in a greenhouse with growing crops is the danger of injuring the plants. The device you mention is designed to eliminate this danger, so why not try it? We depend on salt water for keeping the spider in check and have splendid results. If the sulphur does not prove satisfactory, get one of Evans' salt sprayers and use it regularly once each week, after you have the pest under control. Two or three applications each week will not harm the plants, but more than one application is not necessary after the spiders are cleaned out. A. F. J. B.

"WILD GROWTH" IN CARNATIONS.

We would like to have you inform us what is the trouble with our carnations. The plants seem to be top-heavy. The young shoots, instead of coming out at the bottom, crop out at the top and cause the plants to bend over. The growths are exceedingly soft and rank-growing, and the plants do not yield so many blooms as they should. As yet we have not applied nitrate of soda, or anything else. The plants were benched during the later part of July. A temperature of 45 to 50 degrees has been maintained. L. C.—Mo.

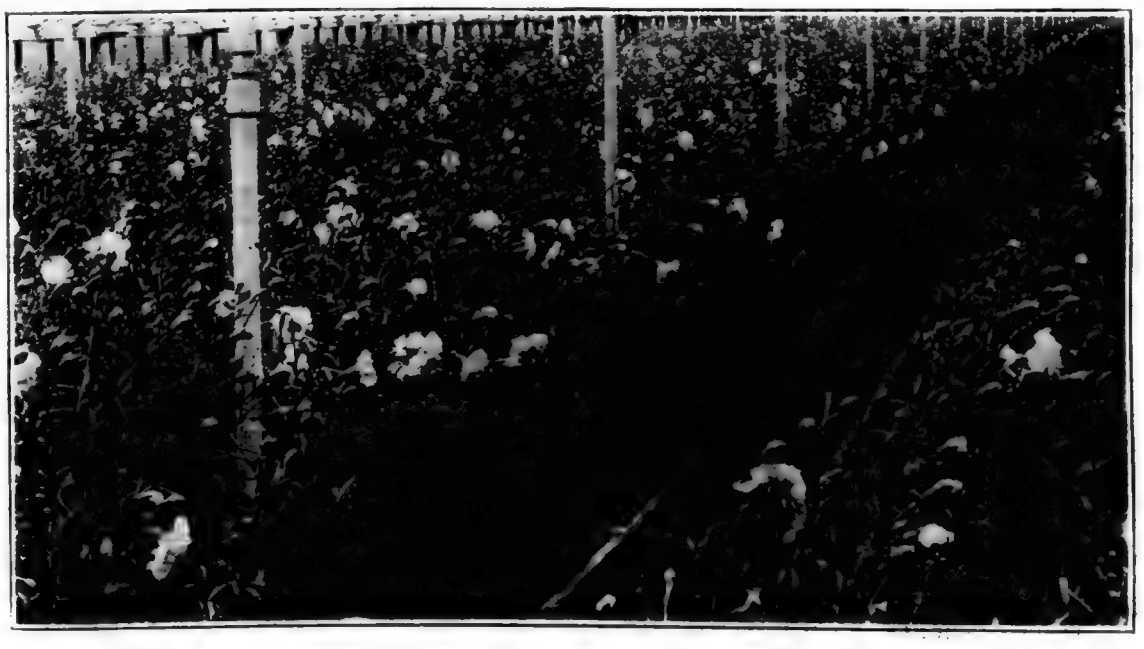
From your description of the plants, I suspect that you have what is known among carnation growers as "wild growth." This trouble causes the plants to make an abnormal quantity of foliage and young shoots close to the flowering stems, retarding the flowering and in aggravated cases stopping the production of blooms altogether. To the uninitiated, there is a strong temptation to take many cuttings from such plants, when there are only a few scattered through a bench, and the failure of the plants to bloom may not be noticeable in the total cut. As every one of these cuttings will produce a similar plant the next season, it can readily be seen that the increase of this kind of plants will be entirely out of proportion to the rest. There is no remedy for this, except to avoid these plants when propagating your next season's stock. The plants will finally bloom, but it will be late in the season and the quality will be inferior and the yield short in numbers. A. F. J. B.

THE DISEASE IS BRANCH-ROT.

I am sending you a sample carnation plant. The variety is Nebraska. Fifty per cent of our plants of this variety have from time to time wilted and died. Can you diagnose the case? We do not think the disease can be stem-rot, as we never had a case of this in the houses. We take virgin soil from the vicinity of a lime quarry and have not seen a single case of stem-rot during the twenty-five years we have taken our soil from that location. The Nebraskas are the only plants in the house that have gone this way. They have received precisely the same treatment as the other plants, which do not show a blemish. R. M. G.—Mont.

It was not difficult to see what ailed your plants. They are affected with the disease known as branch-rot. This fungous disease does not act like ordinary stem-rot. Instead of destroying the plant quickly by rotting the bark around the stem, it seems to work more slowly and usually destroys a branch at a time. It is no easier to combat than the other, as a plant, once it is attacked, will usually succumb sooner or later. By the time a branch dies off, you will generally find most of the channels pretty well clogged and then the ruin of the plant is only a question of time. The best plan is to pull up all such plants and burn them.

A. F. J. B.



FAIRY RING CURE DIFFICULT.

Under another cover we are mailing you some leaves affected with a disease that is attacking our carnations. The trouble was first found on Champion, but now it is spreading to Herald and Philadelphia and is even crossing an 18-inch walk to a bed of Beacon carnations. The leaves seem to dry at the ends and when a plant is affected the leaves droop. What is the disease and what remedial measures do you recommend? S. B.—Idaho.

You have a bad case of fairy ring, and at this time of the year you will need to adopt heroic measures to get it under control. This disease, like all the carnation spot diseases, is caused by excessive humidity and foul atmosphere in the house. This should give you your cue—maintain just the opposite conditions in your endeavors to effect a cure. At this time of the year it is harder to fight these spot diseases than early in the fall, when the summer heat has passed off and the weather still is mainly clear and the atmosphere dry. Go over the plants first and pick off as many of the spotted leaves as possible. Then spray the plants thoroughly with Bordeaux mixture once every ten days. Paint one of the steam pipes with sulphur and lime made into a thick paint. Renew this treatment about once each week. Water the plants moderately and maintain a bracing atmosphere by abstaining from unnecessary syringing. Give the plants liberal ventilation at every favorable occasion. In mild weather, run a steam pipe or two, with the ventilators open, rather than close the ventilators and shut off steam.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

A PURE WHITE DEAN.

The accompanying illustration shows a house of a new chrysanthemum at the establishment of C. T. Guenther, Hamburg, N. Y., said to be a pure white Maud Dean. Dean has held its place for many years, because it is easy to handle and gives an unusually high percentage of perfect flowers. The so-called White Maud Dean also is popular, but it has one fault: it is not pure white but has more or less of a lavender tinge. Four years ago Mr. Guenther found a plant which produced a pure white flower. Cuttings were taken and the flowers from the sport kept the same pure white color. Mr. Guenther now has several thousand plants in bloom.

The variety will be called Hamburg Late White. It has been grown for three years and almost every bud has produced a good commercial flower. When taken on a late bud it is in flower during December and the early part of January. The keeping qualities are said to be excellent.

Mr. Guenther has made an arrangement whereby the variety will be disseminated by the Wm. F. Kasting Co. and the E. G. Hill Co.

LATE PINKS AND YELLOWS.

I want a late pink and a late yellow chrysanthemum that will come in with J. Nonin. Will you kindly name some good late sorts that are also easy doers?

C. C. M.—Ky.

The best late pink mum coming into flower about Thanksgiving, with Jeanne Nonin, is W. T. Brock. One of the best late yellows is Dolly Dimple. When planted late, Nagoya is also an excellent late yellow. Yellow Chadwick is quite late as a rule, though most people grow it for Thanksgiving. We can recommend any of these as likely to give satisfaction. Chas. H. Totty.

SPOT DISEASE ON MUMS.

I should like to know what is the matter with the foliage on the enclosed mums. The disease started early in the summer, attacking some varieties so badly as to make them worthless, while other varieties were not affected at all. When the disease was first noticed I tried to stop it by keeping the plants dry and this dryness was the cause of the thrips which you will find on the mums sent you. The disease, however, was not due to the thrips, but began before the thrips appeared. If you can tell me anything about this disease I shall be grateful, as some of the mums are unsalable owing to the spotted condition of the foliage. W. H.—Can.

The disease on the foliage of the mums submitted is caused by the fungus known as septoria, which has often been spoken of in this column. Septoria starts in the summer, when the growth begins to get heavy and the plants become crowded to a greater or less extent. When the trouble is first noticed, a solution of sulphide of potassium, diluted in the proportion of one ounce to a gallon of water and faithfully sprayed on the leaves which are covered with these spores, will usually keep this disease in check. The bottom leaves can be removed from the plant without injuring it, as long as it is growing well. If this is done in the early stages and the potassium spray is used, no harm will be done to the plants by this disease. Chas. H. Totty.

TROUBLE WITH LATE MUMS.

We grew Wells' Late Pink and Mistletoe mums this year. We were unable to grow Wells' Late Pink to a single stem, no matter which bud we took. Mistletoe produced good flowers, but they were weak in the neck. Which is the proper bud to take and when is the right time to plant these two varieties?

N. F. C.—Ia.

I do not grasp the inquirer's meaning where he says he was unable to grow Wells' Late Pink to a single stem, no matter which bud he took. It is not more difficult to get Wells' Late Pink on a single stem than any other variety. This is done by pinching off the superfluous shoots and continuing to do so, from the main stalk, until the flowering period. The proper time to take the bud on Wells' Late Pink is September 10 and onwards. Buds showing before that time, while they will come, are a dirty pink and are not satisfactory.

As regards the planting period, mums planted about June 1 will be better than those planted later. They will have a longer growing period and yield more satisfactory flowers. Mistletoe I have seen doing well when planted late in July. As to this variety coming weak in the neck, I think this is largely a question of soil and climatic conditions. I assume that N. F. C. lacks lime in his soil, since there do not seem to be any complaints from other sections that Mistletoe has a weak neck.

Do not set the plants too closely in the benches when planting, and once or twice during the season give them a good dressing of lime. This should aid materially in strengthening the growth and neck of Mistletoe and other varieties. Chas. H. Totty.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY.

Work of the Committees.

The examining committees of the C. S. A. have submitted reports on new varieties as follows:

At Cincinnati, December 2, December Queen, yellow shaded bronze, Japanese incurved, submitted by Elmer D. Smith & Co., Adrian, Mich., scored as follows on the commercial scale: Color, 19; form, 13; fullness, 9; stem, 14; foliage, 12; substance, 13; size, 9; total, 89.

At Cincinnati, December 2, The Crest, white, anemone, submitted by Elmer D. Smith & Co., Adrian, Mich., scored as follows: Color, 35; form, 16; substance, 16; stem and foliage, 18; total, 85.

Department of Registration.

The following varieties have been registered with the raiser's description:

Mrs. Francis G. Lloyd—Pure white anemone on the order of Garza, larger flower, wider petals and considerably taller in growth.

Mrs. Owen Winston—Clear yellow with bright orange center, outer petals perfectly straight, plant a strong grower, tall and healthy habit.

Mrs. Chas. S. Whitman—Lavender pink with a center of light cream yellow, an exceptionally fine variety.

Chas. W. Johnson, Sec'y.

Macy, Ind.—Mrs. J. Elmer Landis, starting as an amateur, has become a professional florist, growing peonies and asters for the Chicago wholesale market. Such an excellent measure of success was achieved in 1916 that the production will be considerably increased for 1917.

Bismarck, N. D.—The florists' business is conducted in combination with almost every other occupation of man, but probably the Hoskins Floral Co. is the only Review subscriber which handles flowers, plants, victrolas, Victor records, Eastman kodaks and does photographic finishing.

POCKETT TALKS SHOP

An Interview with the World's Leading Raiser of New Mums

It is said 80% of the chrysanthemums staged at the autumn flower shows in America are varieties raised by T. W. Pockett at East Malvern, Australia

WHETHER or not a census of the shows would prove that more than three-fourths of the exhibition mums shown in this country are varieties originated by Thomas W. Pockett, certain it is that there is no man in the world who has to his credit so large a list of meritorious introductions. That the genius which has resulted so well for the trade is not likely soon to be extinguished is shown by the fact that Miss Louisa Pockett, a daughter, and William Pockett, a son, have also shown great aptitude for the cultivation of chrysanthemums. The faculty appears to be one of special family inherence.

A Success in Both Hemispheres.

It was one of Mr. Pockett's early assertions that the chrysanthemum is adaptable to conditions in every country, and sufficiently vigorous to bloom equally well in both hemispheres. The soundness of that contention has been demonstrated, and plants raised from seeds in East Malvern give satisfaction wherever they are distributed. A notable instance is that of William Turner. If Mr. Pockett did no more than create this popular variety, it would be sufficient to entitle him to special distinction. The flower is now as well known in Great Britain and America as in Australia.

When seen among his favorite mums April 15, for mums bloom in Australia while it is spring in America, Mr. Pockett claimed a moment's indulgence for the purpose of referring to the death of W. Wells, the famous British specialist. In some notes to Mr. Pockett, after it was known that death was near, Mr. Wells said: "The latest seedlings of yours are the best you ever raised. Your J 81, Alice Benson, is the finest formed flower I ever saw. Seedling L 113, Louisa Pockett, is wonderful. You could not have given J 54, Golden Champion, a better name. It is good in every way."

"On the subject of new varieties," said Mr. Pockett, "years ago a large proportion of the seedlings of that period were considered good enough to keep. Now it is not possible to obtain one in a thousand that will conform to the type demanded.

Systematic Hybridizing.

"Take whites, for instance. I have raised William Turner, Alice Benson, Lady Ferguson, Anzac and Louisa Pockett. These represent all the types of Japanese chrysanthemums from one cross. Can I hope to improve on them without introducing new strains? I say no. That cross has produced from the many thousands saved all that are likely to be of the highest standard.

"All our best results," continued Mr. Pockett, "are obtained by selecting plants for seed and plants for pollen. That is where systematic selection comes in. By applying the pollen with a camel's-hair brush there is a chance of securing good seed. But unless the flowers are carefully protected there is every likelihood that a large proportion of the seeds will become cross fertilized with other varieties than those selected. Bees, wind and many kinds of insects carry pollen from one flower to another, and that must be guarded against; otherwise the parentage of the seeds will be completely lost and the result is not likely to be satisfactory.

"The seed of single chrysanthemums is usually ripe about the end of June, in Australia. That of other sorts does not mature until August.

Saving and Sowing the Seed.

"Seed vessels should be gathered when dry and spread out for several days in a dry part of the plant house. Toward the end of August the seeds should be rubbed out and sown in pots, boxes or nursery beds specially prepared to receive seeds for germination. The following method we find effective: Place boards four inches wide and an inch thick on edge, so as to enclose whatever space is considered large enough. At the bottom of the enclosure thus formed put an inch of charcoal or coarse sand, then one and one-half inches of sandy loam. Make it firm and level. In this sow the seeds by pressing them in with a smooth tile. Over the seed bed thus formed there should be placed a covering of about one-eighth of an inch of dry sand that has been previously washed and sifted. The seeds will germinate in two or three weeks. A sheet of glass over the bed will protect the seeds and materially assist germination. When there are signs of growth the young plants must be given fresh air gradually until they are strong enough to do without the glass covering. As soon as they are fit to handle, the seedlings may be transferred from the nursery bed into the garden, or grown on in pots and shifted later, as circumstances appear to demand.

"In the production of exhibition flowers," continued Mr. Pockett, "cuttings are put into a bed, as described, with the exception that there is one and one-half inches of sand on top instead of an eighth of an inch. The cuttings are inserted in August or September. In a situation with an easterly aspect there is no necessity for a glass covering.

Growing Exhibition Flowers.

"In raised beds the drainage is more perfect than in level areas. Hardwood boards six inches deep and an inch thick, on the sides and ends, will make a bed two feet six inches or three feet in width, and as long as is considered necessary. This affords ample space for two rows of plants. The plants may be fifteen inches or eighteen inches apart in the rows, and a similar distance may separate the rows. Rather heavy soil gives the petals better substance than light loam.

"To get the best results, the flower buds of each variety must be selected at the proper time. In ordinary seasons, the bud of William Turner is taken about February 16. Growers must bear in mind that the doubling of petals is controlled largely by the earliness of the bud. As against this, however, it requires to be pointed out that those which are naturally late, with a comparatively full flower on late buds, are usually a failure if selected on early buds."

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

To Keep Poinsettias from Wilting.

The question is frequently asked how to prevent cut poinsettias from wilting. Where they are benched, it is a good plan to lower the temperature a little before cutting is done. This helps to harden them. Have a pail of water at as near the boiling point as possible to dip the ends of the shoots in as they are cut, to stanch the bleeding, or the ends can be seared with a red-hot iron or coal. If the ends are not seared, the bracts are pretty sure to wilt. Stand the cut poinsettias in deep vases of water. Wrap up the foliage in sheets of soft paper before immersing. Do not place them in an ordinary refrigerator. This is too cold; 45 to 50 degrees suits them better.

Camellias.

It is good to see how camellias, the old-time favorites, have come again. More than ever they are being offered this Christmas. Great care is needed when packing these to protect the flowers with cotton wool and tissue paper to prevent bruising. These plants dislike warm treatment. Grow them cool, with plenty of air, and well exposed to the light. or it will be but a short time until all the buds have dropped.

Ericas.

Ericas stand quite cold treatment with impunity. They have one grand point in their favor, viz.: when the flowers fade they do not fall off. The plants withstand the dry, overheated conditions of the living room better than most others. Be sure that they do not suffer from want of water. Ericas, in common with azaleas, boronias and other hard-wooded plants, have fine, hairlike roots and a thorough drying out will mean loss of vitality if not death.

Protecting Outdoor Roses.

It now is time to give the necessary winter protection to outdoor roses, or, as they are usually called, hardy roses. However, these are not hardy in the same degree as lilacs, peonies, phloxes or German irises. A few varieties may be exceptions, but the overwhelming majority are likely to be winter-killed in our northerly states unless they are carefully protected. There is no better covering for hybrid teas and hybrid perpetuals than earth drawn up about the stems before the ground freezes. Over this a coating of strawy manure can be placed. Cut back any long shoots somewhat and pull the plants together with soft twine before covering them.

In extremely cold latitudes I would advise lifting and storing hybrid teas in coldframes or a cold cellar, or even burying them outdoors in any well drained piece of ground. The same process should be followed with the standard or tree roses. Rambler roses, where liable to winter-kill, should be cut loose, laid down and covered with leaves or some other mulch. If this is done they will winter in fine shape.

Erlangea Tomentosa.

Erlangea tomentosa is one of the finest additions to winter-flowering plants we have had of late years. E. tomentosa, while a native of tropical Africa, flourishes splendidly in a cool greenhouse, succeeding as well in a minimum of 45 degrees as in one 5 degrees warmer. It is closely allied to eupatoriums; in fact, the pretty mauve heads of flowers are suggestive of both eupatoriums and ageratums. The foliage is sweetly scented and the flowers themselves have a pleasing odor. Its value as a cut flower I have yet to prove, but there is no question as to its value as a pot plant. It is of rapid growth and cuttings taken as late as July 1 have made bushy plants in 6-inch and 7-inch pots. The plants flower for several months and can be had for Thanksgiving, Christmas or later, according to how late the pinching is continued. This new plant is worthy the attention of all florists who make a specialty of pot plants.

Euphorbia Jacquiniæflora.

Euphorbia jacquiniæflora, the beautiful Christmas plant, now is opening its flowers. It likes a sunny house and a temperature of 55 degrees at night; also, it prefers a somewhat dry atmosphere. While less common than the poinsettia, which also is a euphorbia botanically, its long, arching shoots, closely clustered with rich, orange-red flowers, are attractive and the market is insufficiently supplied with it. A common error is to dry off the stock plants like the common poinsettia. If this is done the plants are sure to die. Keep them moderately dry, but not dust-dry, after flowering.

THE GLADIOLUS SOCIETY.

A vote by mail taken by the members of the American Gladiolus Society has resulted in the selection, by a large majority, of New York city as the place for the 1917 exhibition and business convention. Secretary Henry Youell, of Syracuse, N. Y., advises that the exhibition will be held in the Mu-

WHERE a considerable party is to sit at table, the commonest arrangement is to have a long, straight board with guests on each side. Then the florist merely has to put on flowers in proportion to the money placed at his disposal. But another kind of arrangement for which the florist's services are essential is where the tables are arranged in the form of a square or a parallelogram, the guests being seated on the outside only. In such a case there are two standard treatments; the florist may make his decorations on the table and festoon the unoccupied inner side with smilax, wild or cultivated, or he may fill the inner space with plants as was done by the Kay-Dimond Co., Youngstown, O., for the decoration shown in this illustration. It is not so easy as it might look to make a good decoration by merely packing in stock in the central space. The florist usually impales himself on one or the other of two horns of this dilemma: Either he makes his group flat and bunchy or else he makes the plants stand so high that they cut off the vision across the table, which in latter-day decorating is the unpardonable sin. This picture will repay more than a passing glance; the decorator who studies it will gain some useful hints.

THE GARDENERS MEET

CONVENTION AT WASHINGTON.

Officers Elected.

President—Thomas W. Head, Lake Forest, Ill.

Vice-president—Theodore Wirth, Minneapolis, Minn.

Secretary—M. C. Ebel, Madison, N. J.

Treasurer—James Stuart, Mamaroneck, N. Y.

Trustees—William Kleinheinz, John F. Huss, William Turner, William Duckham, Peter Duff.

Place of Meeting in 1917—Chicago.

J. Barnet, of Sewickley, Pa., announced that Pittsburgh would be a candidate for the 1918 convention.

The Business Sessions.

The annual convention of the National Association of Gardeners was held in Washington, D. C., December 5 and 6. The first business session was called to order by William F. Gude, Washington's representative of the S. A. F., who spoke as representing the Washington Chamber of Commerce and the florists of the city. His remarks were enthusiastically received.

President William N. Craig made a brief address, striking the keynote when he said: "We will make our sessions as short as circumstances will permit, in order that we may have more time to enjoy the architectural and other features of interest so abundantly spread before us."

The secretary's report, showing an increase in the membership of nearly 300 and the suspension of 132 for non-payment of dues, was read and approved. The treasurer's report, showing a balance in bank of $2,094, was well received. Reports were submitted by the national cooperative committee, W. N. Craig, chairman; the committee on meritorious exhibits, William Kleinheinz, chairman, and the committee on bird protection and propagation, L. P. Jensen, chairman, all indicating activity within the association.

Secretary Ebel referred to the necessity for suitable representation at the national capital and suggested that George W. Hess, superintendent of the botanic gardens and a director of the association, would prove a most capable representative. His unanimous election followed.

W. F. Gude was elected an honorary member.

Printing the proceedings of the annual meeting, yearly reports of committees, etc., in special pamphlet form was moved, but owing to the present high cost of publication, it was decided to defer action on it.

Dr. F. L. Mulford, of the Department of Agriculture, twice addressed the convention with reference to the work the department is doing that should interest private gardeners and enlist their support.

Sight-seeing Trips.

Automobiles conveyed the visitors through Potomac park, around the Lincoln memorial, and across the river to Arlington cemetery and to the old Lee mansion. The Arlington farm of the Department of Agriculture was visited, where the various matters referred to by Dr. Mulford at the morning session were pointed out. Fort Meyer was then visited, with the return through Georgetown and out to the Bureau of Standards, where a highly interesting demonstration of liquid air was witnessed. The party then proceeded to Rock Creek park and the National Soldiers' Home, returning to the hotel at 3 o'clock, where they became luncheon guests of W. F. Gude. At the conclusion of the luncheon the party reëntered the automobiles and visited some of the large florists' establishments around Washington.

Next day the convention party visited the U. S. Botanic Gardens, where they were received by Supt. George W. Hess, and proceeded to Mt. Vernon, where a wreath was placed on Washington's tomb, with a few fitting remarks by Ex-president Kleinheinz, who officiated in the absence of President Craig. The home of Washington was next visited, where the party was photographed. The capitol was visited and the Senate, the House of Representatives and the Supreme Court were seen in session. Following a visit to the Congressional Library the party proceeded to the Department of Agriculture, where an inspection of the greenhouses and other departments proved of much interest.

The general interest in the business sessions, the cordial hospitality of William F. Gude, George W. Hess, and their colleagues among the florists and other business men of Washington, together with the ideal weather, made the 1916 convention of the National Association of Gardeners a pronounced success.

shifted later, as circumstances appear to demand.

"In the production of exhibition flowers," continued Mr. Pockett, "cuttings are put into a bed, as described, with the exception that there is one and one-half inches of sand on top instead of an eighth of an inch. The cuttings are inserted in August or September. In a situation with an easterly aspect there is no necessity for a glass covering.

Growing Exhibition Flowers.

"In raised beds the drainage is more perfect than in level areas. Hardwood boards six inches deep and an inch thick, on the sides and ends, will make a bed two feet six inches or three feet in width, and as long as is considered necessary. This affords ample space for two rows of plants. The plants may be fifteen inches or eighteen inches apart in the rows, and a similar distance may separate the rows. Rather heavy soil gives the petals better substance than light loam.

"To get the best results, the flower buds of each variety must be selected at the proper time. In ordinary seasons, the bud of William Turner is taken about February 16. Growers must bear in mind that the doubling of petals is controlled largely by the earliness of the bud. As against this, however, it requires to be pointed out that those which are naturally late, with a comparatively full flower on late buds, are usually a failure if selected on early buds."

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

To Keep Poinsettias from Wilting.

The question is frequently asked how to prevent cut poinsettias from wilting. Where they are benched, it is a good plan to lower the temperature a little before cutting is done. This helps to harden them. Have a pail of water at as near the boiling point as possible to dip the ends of the shoots in as they are cut, to stanch the bleeding, or the ends can be seared with a red hot iron or coal. If the ends are not seared, the bracts are pretty sure to wilt. Stand the cut poinsettias in deep vases of water. Wrap up the foliage in sheets of soft paper before immersing. Do not place them in an ordinary refrigerator. This is too cold; 45 to 50 degrees suits them better.

Camellias.

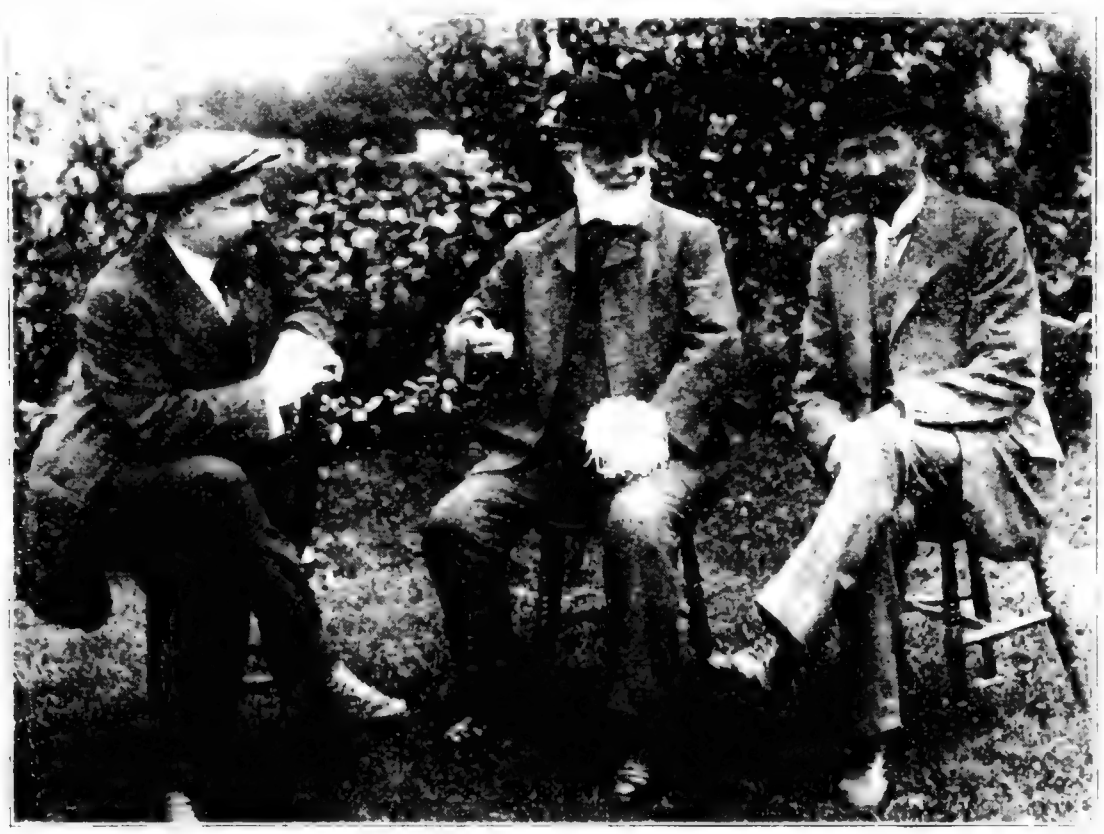
It is good to see how camellias, the old-time favorites, have come again. More than ever they are being offered this Christmas. Great care is needed when packing these to protect the flowers with cotton wool and tissue paper to prevent bruising. These plants dislike warm treatment. Grow them cool, with plenty of air, and well exposed to the light, or it will be but a short time until all the buds have dropped.

Ericas.

Ericas stand quite cold treatment with impunity. They have one grand point in their favor, viz.: when the flowers fade they do not fall off. The plants withstand the dry, overheated conditions of the living room better than most others. Be sure that they do not suffer from want of water. Ericas, in common with azaleas, boronias and other hard-wooded plants, have fine, hairlike roots and a thorough drying out will mean loss of vitality if not death.

Protecting Outdoor Roses.

It now is time to give the necessary winter protection to outdoor roses, or, as they are usually called, hardy roses. However, these are not hardy in the same degree as lilacs, peonies, phloxes or German irises. A few varieties may be exceptions, but the overwhelming majority are likely to be winter-killed in our northerly states unless they are carefully protected. There is no better covering for hybrid teas and hybrid perpetuals than earth drawn up about the stems before the ground freezes. Over this a coating of strawy manure can be placed. Cut back any long shoots somewhat and pull the plants together with soft twine before covering them.



In extremely cold latitudes I would advise lifting and storing hybrid teas in coldframes or a cold cellar, or even burying them outdoors in any well drained piece of ground. The same process should be followed with the standard or tree roses. Rambler roses, where liable to winter-kill, should be cut loose, laid down and covered with leaves or some other malch. If this is done they will winter in fine shape.

Erlangea Tomentosa.

Erlangea tomentosa is one of the finest additions to winter-flowering plants we have had of late years. E. tomentosa, while a native of tropical Africa, flourishes splendidly in a cool greenhouse, succeeding as well in a minimum of 45 degrees as in one 5 degrees warmer. It is closely allied to eupatoriums; in fact, the pretty mauve heads of flowers are suggestive of both eupatoriums and ageratums. The foliage is sweetly scented and the flowers themselves have a pleasing odor. Its value as a cut flower I have yet to prove, but there is no question as to its value as a pot plant. It is of rapid growth and cuttings taken as late as July 1 have made bushy plants in 6-inch and 7-inch pots. The plants flower for several months and can be had for Thanksgiving, Christmas or later, according to how late the pinching is continued. This new plant is worthy the attention of all florists who make a specialty of pot plants.

Euphorbia Jacquiniæflora.

Euphorbia jacquiniæflora, the beautiful Christmas plant, now is opening its flowers. It likes a sunny house and a temperature of 55 degrees at night; also, it prefers a somewhat dry atmosphere. While less common than the poinsettia, which also is a euphorbia botanically, its long, arching shoots, closely clustered with rich, orange-red flowers, are attractive and the market is insufficiently supplied with it. A common error is to dry off the stock plants like the common poinsettia. If this is done the plants are sure to die. Keep them moderately dry, but not dust-dry, after flowering.

THE GLADIOLUS SOCIETY.

A vote by mail taken by the members of the American Gladiolus Society has resulted in the selection, by a large majority, of New York city as the place for the 1917 exhibition and business convention. Secretary Henry Youell, of Syracuse, N. Y., advises that the exhibition will be held in the Mu-

WHERE a considerable party is to sit at table, the commonest arrangement is to have a long, straight board with guests on each side. Then the florist merely has to put on flowers in proportion to the money placed at his disposal. But another kind of arrangement for which the florist's services are essential is where the tables are arranged in the form of a square or a parallelogram, the guests being seated on the outside only. In such a case there are two standard treatments; the florist may make his decorations on the table and festoon the unoccupied inner side with smilax, wild or cultivated, or he may fill the inner space with plants as was done by the Kay-Dimond Co., Youngstown, O., for the decoration shown in this illustration. It is not so easy as it might look to make a good decoration by merely packing in stock in the central space. The florist usually impales himself on one or the other of two horns of this dilemma. Either he makes his group flat and bunchy or else he makes the plants stand so high that they cut off the vision across the table, which in latter-day decorating is the unpardonable sin. THE CLUBS ARE BUSY

AT CHICAGO.

The Annual Election.

December 7 was the annual election night of the Chicago Florists' Club, the members of which are especially characterized by their modesty; nearly all the nominees at the November meeting sent letters of declination, including both nominees for president. The club voted to lay all such communications on the table and proceeded to ballot, with the following result:

For president—W. H. Amling, 25; Fred Lautenschlager, 17.

For vice-president—Paul R. Klingsporn, 28; Emil Reichling, 12; N. P. Miller, 2.

For treasurer—Otto Amling, 18; M. Barker, 12; E. Meurett, 11.

For secretary—Allie Zech, 26; Guy W. French, 15.

For trustee—W. J. Keimel, 18; Alex. Henderson, 13; August Jurgens, 9.

No candidate for treasurer or trustee having a majority of all votes cast, a second ballot was necessary under the by-laws, with the result that Messrs. Amling and Keimel were elected.

Visitors and Exhibits.

Charles T. Johnson and Alfred Torchiani were elected to membership and applications were received from W. J. Palmer, of Berwyn, Ill., and Thomas Heaven, of Benton Harbor, Mich. Mr. Heaven was present and made a speech. Other visitors were A. F. J. Baur, of Indianapolis, and Clarence Watson, of Philadelphia. Mr. Baur spoke of new carnations and of the approaching Indianapolis carnation convention. He pointed out that last year, at the St. Louis exhibition, growers east of the Alleghenies made as many entries as did all the west, and they captured half the premiums. He said he hoped the western growers will be decidedly more in evidence this year. Mr. Watson devoted most of his remarks to the Russell rose, saying that he was surprised to find the variety holding such an important place in the Chicago market, as it is little seen in the east. He said he thinks the conspicuous success Chicago growers are making with the variety will have the effect of causing a number of good eastern growers to give Russell another and more adequate trial.

The exhibits of the evening included a vase of Russell on 4-foot stems grown by French & Salm, at Union Grove, Wis., of a quality that seemed to leave nothing to be desired. As the rose never had been scored by a Chicago committee, President Henderson appointed Ernst Amling, David Lundin and George Asmus to perform this function. The total they gave was ninety-two points. Other exhibits were splendid vases of Merry Christmas and Pollyanna carnations from Baur & Steinkamp, Indianapolis, and two plants of an unnamed begonia from J. E. Matthewson, Sheboygan, Wis. The Merry Christmas, scarlet, were especially fine, and Pollyanna, deep flesh pink, showed excellent color, but both varieties had previously been scored by the club. The Sheboygan begonia, as well as the carnations, received the thanks of the club.

F. Hunt, son of the Evanston florist, sang for the club and there were the usual refreshments.

AT NEW YORK.

Retailers Win Election.

The perpetual contest between the wholesale and retail sections of the trade was carried into the election of officers for the New York Florists' Club December 11 and this time the retailers won. The nominating committee had planned contests all along the line, but many nominees withdrew, leaving the contest for the presidency to G. E. M. Stumpp, who had the endorsement of the retailers' association, and Charles Schenck, who had the backing of the wholesalers and of nine past presidents. Secretary Young and Treasurer Rickards were left without opposition. The balloting resulted:

For president—G. E. M. Stumpp, 98; Charles Schenck, 84.

For vice-president—J. H. Fieser, 85; P. W. Popp, 83; W. G. Badgley, 13.

For trustee—R. J. Irwin, 162; John Canning, 123; A. Kottmiller, 118.

The attendance was the largest in the history of the club and the contests, though spirited, were with the utmost good fellowship. Walter Sheridan was judge of election and Charles Knight and Joseph Manda tellers.

Charles L. Tricker and Henry H. Dyer were elected to membership and Marshall Clarke, Carl C. Reck, L. A. Dupuy and A. Van Praag were proposed.

CHICAGO'S PRESIDENT

W. H. AMLING.

AFTER twenty-one years as a school teacher at Milwaukee, W. H. Amling, the newly elected president of the Chicago Florists' Club, returned to his birthplace, Maywood, Ill., and started in the florists' business with such signal success that neighboring growers promptly quoted him the German proverb which, freely translated, is: "The most ignorant farmers always grow the biggest potatoes." Mr. Amling, however, says he owes the excellent start he made to the assistance given him by his two brothers, E. C. Amling, Chicago wholesaler, and A. F. Amling, Maywood grower. W. H. Amling now has two separate ranges, 75,000 feet of glass, specializing on sweet peas, but growing several other crops well. His three sons, Walter, Herbert and Martin, engaged in business with him, all are members of the Chicago Florists' Club.

An appropriation of $200 was made for the premium list of the American Gladiolus Society, which meets here in August. It was reported the cost of ladies' night was $286.30.

The club's membership in the S. A. F. now exceeding 100, application was made for an affiliation directorship for President Stumpp.

Considerable discussion occurred over the case of Charles Lenker, of Freeport, one of the club's members, accused of an insult to the American flag. The matter was laid over until the meeting January 8.

Geo. T. Schuneman showed a vase of his winter-flowering sweet peas. Badgley & Bishop staged a yellow seedling rose grown by Ed. Towill, of Roslyn, Pa., and the rose Little Gem. Some excellent carnations were shown by A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., including Nancy, flesh pink, Nebraska, red, and Arawana, crimson. The W. F. Kasting Co., Buffalo, exhibited a large late mum of fine quality, Hamburg Late White. A. Demeusy, Sr., showed a fine sport of Enchantress. Charles L. Tricker brought some winter-flowering begonias and Jas. Foster, Stamford, Conn., had seedlings, yellow and white, of single chrysanthemums.

Interesting addresses were made by Messrs. Stumpp, Schenck, Fieser, Rickards, Irwin, Kottmiller and Young, the latter having served twenty-six years as secretary.

The serious illness of P. L. Bogart and W. H. Long was reported and messages of good cheer sent.

Joseph Hildenbrand and his committee served a turkey luncheon. Among those present were Anton Schultheis, of Scranton, Pa., and George Stumpp, Sr., the latter having been in Germany the last two years. J. A. S.

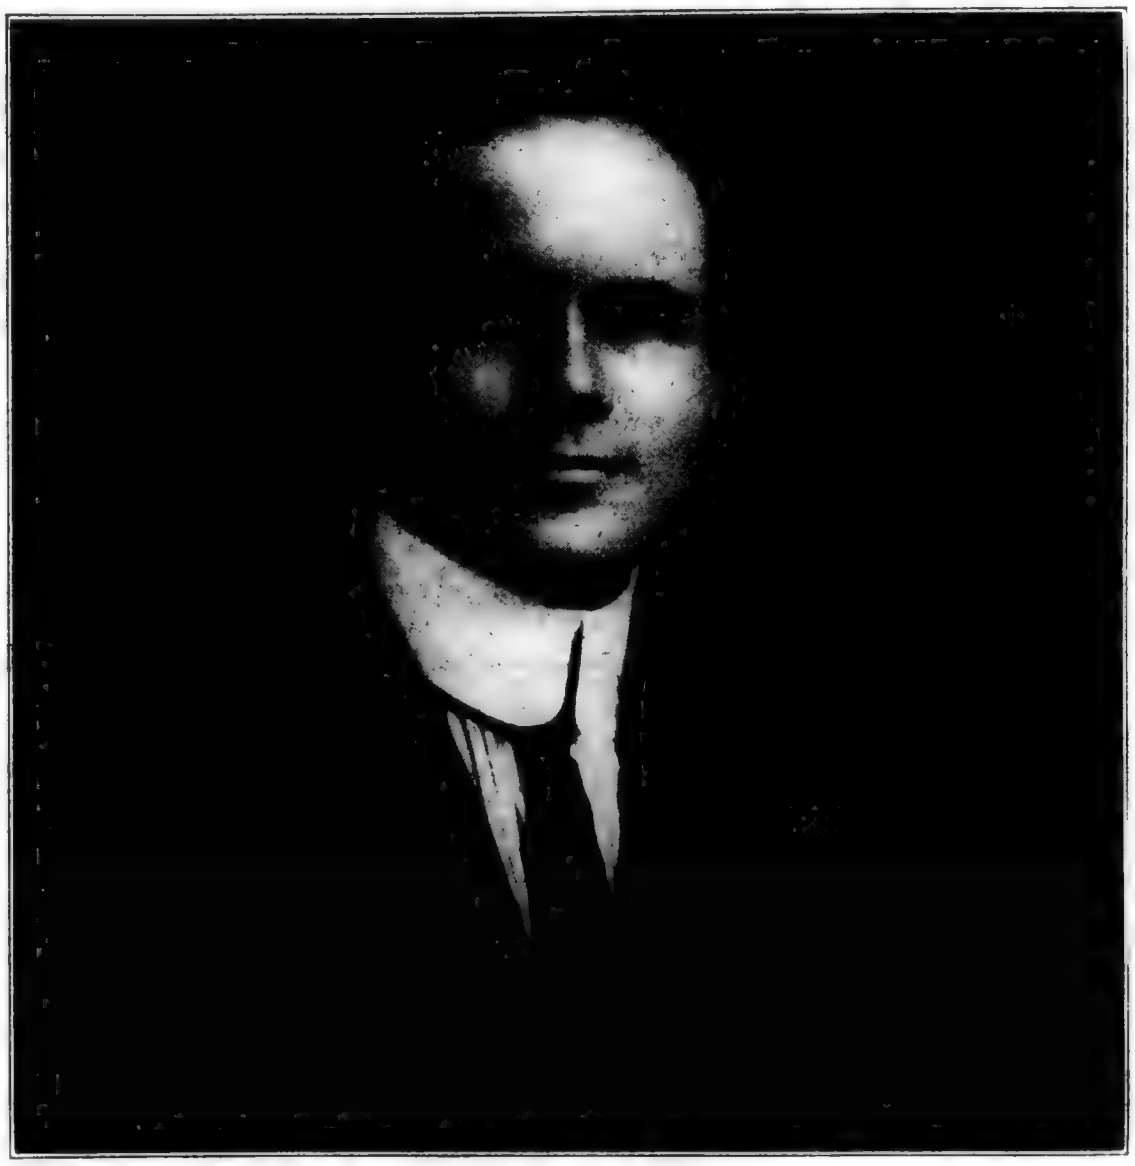
BRAMPTON, ONT.

Monday, December 18, begins the busiest and biggest holiday trade ever experienced by florists of Canada. Orders coming in are larger than ever, the heavy demand for No. 1 Beauties and orchids being far in excess of the supply. Prices are necessarily higher all around, but the quality of all the stock is rather above that of former years.

Excellent holly and boxwoods and other greens from Delaware and the southern states have been much sought after this season, and novelties of all kinds are more to the front than usual.

Representatives from large wholesale houses in New York have been in this neighborhood during the last week, trying to buy up stock for the New York market for Christmas, but the demand throughout the Dominion is so keen that there is little likelihood of any stock being exported this year.

Florists have had rather a disappointment in connection with azaleas. Most of the plants have been a long time in transit and cannot possibly be flowered in time for the Christmas trade.



W. G. P.

GENISTAS FOR EASTER.

Please tell me what treatment to give genistas to have them in bloom at Easter. H. E. M.—Pa.

Place your plants in a cool greenhouse early in January. They will be in bloom for Easter if you give them a temperature of 42 to 45 degrees at night; or you can start them early in February, in a temperature of 50 degrees at night. Do not subject them to any higher temperatures than those mentioned, or the flowers will be lacking entirely in substance. C. W.

NEW YORK'S PRESIDEDNT

G. E. M. STUMPP.

THE leading characteristic of G. E. M. Stumpp's education and career seems to be an intense and thorough practicality, a characteristic that should fit him well both for the management of his business and for the prosecution of his duties in the office to which he has just been elected, that of president of the New York Florists' Club. Born in New York, May 28, 1881, and educated in private schools and in the New York Business College, he then worked as a bookkeeper for various firms. This general business training was followed by an extensive experience in the employ of retail florists in different parts of the country, including Habermehl's Sons, of Philadelphia, and Samuelson, of Chicago. After spending ten years in his father's store in New York, he took charge of the establishment in 1914 as his father's successor. He will head the local club during the visit of the S. A. F. next August.

TEMPERATURE FOR FOUR CROPS.

What is the proper temperature for a house in which lettuce, carnations, sweet peas and snapdragons are grown? I have been running my house about 45 to 50 degrees at night and 60 to 70 degrees in the daytime. Is this correct? A. E. S.—Ia.

You are giving your lettuce, carnations, snapdragons and sweet peas as good a temperature as possible. If each item were grown alone, I would give the lettuce 48 degrees, snapdragons 46 to 50 degrees, sweet peas 45 degrees before flowering and 50 degrees afterward, and carnations 50 to 52 degrees. A day temperature of 55 to 60 degrees when cloudy and 10 degrees higher with sunshine is all right. C. W.

PANSIES UNDER SNOW.

I have 100,000 pansies that were covered with about ten inches of snow before the ground froze. If this snow does not thaw soon, would it be best to mulch over the snow? Will the pansies winter as well without the mulch if the snow remains? C. A. P.—Me.

Do not worry about the pansies. If the snow remains it will make an ideal mulch. The real damage to the plants comes from alternate freezing and thawing in late spring. I would not mulch over the snow. Wait until the ground is bare, as it probably will be soon, the first snowfall having come abnormally early this season. C. W.

Interesting addresses were made by Messrs. Stumpp, Schenck, Fieser, Rick ards, Irwin, Kottmiller and Young, the latter having served twenty-six years as secretary.

The serious illness of P. L. Bogart and W. H. Long was reported and messages of good cheer sent.

Joseph Hildenbrand and his committee served a turkey luncheon. Among those present were Anton Schultheis, of Scranton, Pa., and George Stumpp, Sr., the latter having been in Germany the last two years. J. A. S.

BRAMPTON, ONT.

Monday, December 18, begins the busiest and biggest holiday trade ever experienced by florists of Canada. Orders coming in are larger than ever, the heavy demand for No. 1 Beauties and orchids being far in excess of the supply. Prices are necessarily higher all around, but the quality of all the stock is rather above that of former years.

Excellent holly and boxwoods and other greens from Delaware and the southern states have been much sought after this season, and novelties of all kinds are more to the front than usual.

Representatives from large wholesale houses in New York have been in this neighborhood during the last week, trying to buy up stock for the New York market for Christmas, but the demand throughout the Dominion is so keen that there is little likelihood of any stock being exported this year.

Florists have had rather a disappointment in connection with azaleas. Most of the plants have been a long time in transit and cannot possibly be flowered in time for the Christmas trade.

GENISTAS FOR EASTER.

Please tell me what treatment to give genistas to have them in bloom at Easter. H. E. M.—Pa.

Place your plants in a cool greenhouse early in January. They will be in bloom for Easter if you give them a temperature of 42 to 45 degrees at night; or you can start them early in February, in a temperature of 50 degrees at night. Do not subject them to any higher temperatures than those mentioned, or the flowers will be lacking entirely in substance. C. W.

NEW YORK'S PRESIDEDNT

G. E. M. STUMPP.

THE leading characteristic of G. E. M. Stumpp's education and career seems to be an intense and thorough practicality, a characteristic that should fit him well both for the management of his business and for the prosecution of his duties in the office to which he has just been elected, that of president of the New York Florists' Club. Born in New York, May 28, 1881, and educated in private schools and in the New York Business College, he then worked as a bookkeeper for various firms. This general business training was followed by an extensive experience in the employ of retail florists in different parts of the country, including Habermehl's Sons, of Philadelphia, and Samuelson, of Chicago. After spending ten years in his father's store in New York, he took charge of the establishment in 1914 as his father's successor. He will head the local club during the visit of the S. A. F. next August.

TEMPERATURE FOR FOUR CROPS.

What is the proper temperature for a house in which lettuce, carnations, sweet peas and snapdragons are grown? I have been running my house about 45 to 50 degrees at night and 60 to 70 degrees in the daytime. Is this correct? A. E. S.—Ia.

You are giving your lettuce, carnations, snapdragons and sweet peas as good a temperature as possible. If each item were grown alone, I would give the lettuce 48 degrees, snapdragons 46 to 50 degrees, sweet peas 45 degrees before flowering and 50 degrees afterward, and carnations 50 to 52 degrees. A day temperature of 55 to 60 degrees when cloudy and 10 degrees higher with sunshine is all right. C. W.

PANSIES UNDER SNOW.

I have 100,000 pansies that were covered with about ten inches of snow before the ground froze. If this snow does not thaw soon, would it be best to mulch over the snow? Will the pansies winter as well without the mulch if the snow remains? C. A. P.—Mo.

Do not worry about the pansies. If the snow remains it will make an ideal mulch. The real damage to the plants comes from alternate freezing and thawing in late spring. I would not mulch over the snow. Wait until the ground is bare, as it probably will be soon, the first snowfall having come abnormally early this season. C. W.

OBITUARY

Ernest Walker.

Ernest Walker, for several years a member of the faculty of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute, at Auburn, Ala., where he held the chair of horticulture, died at his home at Bolling, Ala., December 7, after a brief illness.

Professor Walker was born at Brownstown, Ind., November 12, 1862. He was the son of the late F. Walker, who until his death was senior member of the nursery and florists' business of the F. Walker Co., at Louisville, Ky., which now is being conducted by the decedent's brothers. The decedent acquired an early practical knowledge of plants and flowers and was superintendent of the range and nursery of the company before he became an educator.

Mr. Walker's career as a teacher began at Cornell, where he was associated with L. H. Bailey of that institution. Messrs. Walker and Bailey were authors of the book, "Garden Making," and Mr. Walker was a large contributor to Bailey's cyclopedia of horticulture.

The deceased served for thirteen years as head of the horticultural department of the University of Arkansas. After going to Auburn he became state horticulturist of Alabama for three years.

Mr. Walker is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mary Newman Walker, daughter of Col. J. S. Newman, first director of the experimental station at Auburn; two sons, Marion Walker and Elbert Walker, and one daughter, Miss Ernestine Walker, all of Bolling; his mother, Mrs. Mary E. Walker, of New Albany, Ind.; six brothers, F. I. Walker, of Chicago; Ferd G. Walker and Herbert G. Walker, of Louisville, Ky.; Rev. J. N. Walker, Clarence Walker and Earle G. Walker, of New Albany, Ind.; two sisters, Miss Abbie Walker and Miss Hariett Walker, of New Albany, Ind.

John Tait.

John Tait, rose and carnation grower for the William Blackman Floral Co., of Evansville, Ind., died December 9 after an illness of eight weeks from heart trouble. Funeral services were held December 10 in charge of the Masons, and the body was shipped to Chicago for burial. Mr. Tait had been in charge of the roses and carnations at Blackman's for several years and was considered an unusually capable grower. He is survived by his wife.

Henry Millard Sanborn.

Henry Millard Sanborn, a pioneer florist of the East Bay section, San Francisco, died at the family home in Oakland December 7, at the age of 66 years. For three years he had been a sufferer from diabetes. A native of New York, Mr. Sanborn went to California "around the Horn" in 1867 and located in Oakland in 1868. His brother-in-law, James Hutchinson, established a nursery on the site that now is Telegraph avenue, between Twenty-fourth and Twenty-sixth streets, as early as 1852. Upon his arrival in that state, Mr. Sanborn went into the florists' business with his brother-in-law and succeeded him as president of the concern upon his relative's death. The Hutchinson nurseries were then changed to the H. M. Sanborn Floral Co. For the last few years Mr. Sanborn has retired, his son, Edgar M. Sanborn, taking over the business. In 1888 the decedent became a member of the Oakland school board and held that position for ten years. He was an active member of the Oakland Merchants' Association and the local order of the Woodmen of the World. Besides his son and wife, he leaves a daughter, Mrs. James T. Lea. Funeral services were held from the family home December 9.

S. H. G.

Frank S. Howard.

In the death of Frank S. Howard December 8, Chicago lost its oldest private gardener—oldest at least in point of continuous service in one place.

Frank Howard was 67 years of age. He came to Chicago many years ago to enter the employ of the late George M. Pullman when the Pullman residence was one of the show places of the city. His home, where he died, was near by, at 1826 Calumet avenue. Mr. Howard was a participant in all the earlier flower shows and was widely known among the old-timers, many of whom attended the funeral December 10. Interment was at Oakwoods, in charge of Herder lodge No. 669, A. F. & A. M.

Mr. Howard left a widow, who was Annie Walker, and three sons, two daughters and two grandchildren.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS

Wachendorff Bros., of Atlanta, Ga., report good business. "For the first time in our experience we fell down on our mums," said E. Wachendorff. "There was an abundance of foliage, but not our usual grade of bloom. We found out the cause—giving the plants the shadow in place of the substance. The mum is a gross feeder and our liquid was too weak in the tank. The oversight was found out too late to avert the result, but it will not happen again. Our 60-acre nursery now is bringing in returns. Brother Charles and I are often out there ere sunrise, in order to be back home in time for greenhouse calls," concluded Mr. Wachendorff. The home range covers ten acres within the city limits, and, while taxes are high, store rent is saved. Much concrete work for gutters and the like is noticed, and it is explained that as the soil resists the heavy rains, it is necessary to provide miniature dams, so to speak. Stock looks promising for the holidays. The annual chrysanthemum show was held at College park, as usual. Messrs. Wachendorff acted as judges.

Julius Eger demonstrated the Thanksgiving business in Schenectady, N. Y., by a window filled with empty flower cases. Attached to the window was a large sign that read, "You did this; accept our thanks."

W. H. Showers, also of Schenectady, remarked that Thanksgiving orders fairly poured in. College business was exceptionally good.

E. V. B. Felthousen, on the Van Antwerp road, near Schenectady, had a fine lot of Chadwick and Mrs. E. A. Seidewitz mums. These now are passe with him, the space being devoted to bedding plants. Some fine ferns are ready for Christmas sales.

John C. Hatcher, of Schenectady, had the usual fine stock at Hoffman's and sold out early.

"All roses have thorns, but I think Kaiserin Augusta Victoria the thorniest," remarked Carl Oelschig, of A. C. Oelschig & Sons, Savannah, Ga. "It is one of the best in the south. We also grow successfully Ophelia, Mrs. Russell, Mrs. Bayard Thayer and Hoosier Beauty. D'Arenberg is the freest of all, but comes rather short-stemmed. Mrs. Aaron Ward is usually popular." In carnations Mrs. Akehurst seems most at home; it is the best of all. The single mum, Mensa, both in yellow and white, is a good seller. The houses devoted to rubbers resemble a jungle, and Albert Oelschig said that one felt like being in a jungle when taking cuttings in midsummer. A fine lot of poinsettias for the holidays was noted, and everything looked fully up to the standard set by the late founder, with whom I had the pleasure of a close acquaintance for a quarter of a century. A. C.'s hearty greeting was refreshing, and always the same—a true type of the old school.

A. W. Richardson, of Savannah, is extensively engaged in market gardening, in addition to his flower branch. He says the heat caused lettuce outdoors to run to seed instead of heading. D. J. Sneed has charge of the greenhouses. Roses, carnations and chrysanthemums look well. "There is a new bug here—as if we had not enough," observed Mr. Sneed. "At first it is green, then it grows black with age. It is exceedingly lively and most voracious."

John Wolf, of Savannah, observed that, in times of great prosperity, it behooves one to take advantage of every opportunity to make a sale. I noted a run on mum plants in a department store at 25 cents each, and learned from Mr. Wolf that after the best stock is selected for his own store sales, the culls are potted three or four in a pot and are considered as so much profit. He believes this does not affect the better class of buyers. Stock grown for regular trade is in first-class condition. Lilies, valley, roses, carnations and chrysanthemums are coming in as needed. The demand is good and it looks as though it will remain so through the holiday season.

Howland Gardner, of Greensboro, N. C., reported that not a chrysanthemum was left after Thanksgiving. The Yarrawa sweet pea is giving great satisfaction.

J. J. Fallon, of Lynchburg, Va., found chrysanthemums for main crop and Thanksgiving the most profitable and is weeding out all other kinds.

Miss A. McCarron, of Lynchburg, says that when the repaving of Main street is finished she will have a good chance to make the store and approach even more attractive. All things considered, business keeps up well.

Notice! To Subscribers whose address labels carry an expiration number higher than 995 (Dec. 21, 1916).

A Year's Copies of The Review Makes a Stack a Foot High.

Every florist knows through his own purchases what has happened in the paper market the last few months—prices have doubled all along the line.

And it takes more than four tons of paper each week to print The Review!

Many readers have been so kind as to write that The Review is worth considerably more to them than its subscription price. Well, the tremendous rise in the price of paper makes it no longer expedient to sell The Review at $1.00 a year.

The subscription price, therefore, will be advanced January 1, 1917, to $1.50 a year.

Until December 31, 1916, any member of the Trade may subscribe for one or more years at the old rate of $1.00 a year.

Readers whose present subscriptions do not expire until after January 1, 1917, may renew for as many years as they like at $1.00 per year, providing that such renewals are sent during 1916.

Send $1.00 and your subscription will be extended one year from the present date of expiration, whenever that may be.

Send $2.00 and the subscription will be extended two years from the present date of expiration.

Send $3.00 for three years, $5.00 for five years.

No renewals for a full year will be accepted at less than $1.50 unless they are mailed by December 31, 1916.

The Canadian subscription price will be $2.50 a year beginning January 1, 1917. Canadian renewals mailed on or before December 31, 1916, will be accepted at $2.00 a year.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

GLASS now has advanced 100 per cent as compared with prices of a year ago.

THAT most enduring of plants for indoor use, the aspidistra, is one of the scarce items, the principal supply being imported from Belgium.

ONE of the shortages with which growers soon will have to contend is that of nicotine extract, the insecticide manufacturers in many cases being considerably behind their orders.

WHERE formerly the call was for early-blooming varieties of chrysanthemums, that demand seems to have been fully met and the inquiry now is for late varieties, to bloom after Thanksgiving.

THE fifth of the series of bulletins of the American Dahlia Society made its appearance last week. It contains several interesting articles and the constitution and by-laws of the organization.

W. J. KEIMEL says he has kept careful records for a sufficient length of time to convince him that the rose grower who pinches and makes a big plant will in the end cut as many flowers as the one who does not pinch, but who cuts short stems.

THE trend of things is toward informality, which perhaps accounts for the fact that most of the new exhibition mums are of the reflexed type, but for commercial purposes the incurved varieties, like Bonnaffon and Champion, will be hard to displace.

BOUQUET GREEN probably never was so scarce as it is this season.

THE premium list for the carnation show at Indianapolis January 31 has been issued. Copies may be had by addressing A. F. J. Baur, secretary, Indianapolis.

THE man who has good azaleas this season will be improvident if he rushes them into flower and onto the market. After such losses as have occurred in transit, azaleas are sure to be excellent property this season and should be held for better retail prices than usual.

THERE are many reports to the effect that the chrysanthemum season of 1916 was one of the best ever. While prices were low in most wholesale markets during the first half of November, those who grow for their own retail trade seem generally to have had a continuously brisk demand at good prices, while the Thanksgiving clean-up in the wholesale markets was unexpectedly good.

SALVE.

It may have been noted that the text pages of The Review are not filled with fulsome flattery for advertisers, the chief reason being that buyers neither will pay for a paper of that character nor read it if it is sent free.

Enclosed find a three years' subscription to your valuable paper. I can't see how any wide-awake florist can do without The Review.—Charles Beyer, St. Louis, Mo., December 5, 1916.

Whether or not the publication is bought to read is the real test of its value as an advertising medium:

I wish to thank The Review for what it has done for me in the last year; it has sold over 2,000 bales of sphagnum moss and about the same quantity of peat.—Joseph H. Paul, Manahawkin, N. J., December 6, 1916.

When you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising you can be pretty sure he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

CHARGING FOR PACKING.

One of the results of the increasing cost of doing business is the trial in this country of the European method of charging purchasers for packing and packing materials. Practically all European houses, in the plant line and in other lines, always have charged for boxes and other packing material and sometimes have charged for labor also. But in this country plantsmen heretofore have done the packing without charge. In some other lines of business it has been customary to charge for boxes or bags and present unprecedented conditions have resulted in a number of plantsmen announcing that in the future they will make a charge for packing. They mean they will charge for packing materials, not necessarily cost, but something to help meet the greatly increased expense. The pioneers have added 50 cents for each $10 worth of goods.

Not many in the trade will object to moderate charges for packing. It is quite well understood that nearly all packing materials, especially paper, have advanced greatly in price and the cost is a serious item to large shippers. But when a man charges for packing, his customers may fairly demand good packing. If the average American house would charge five per cent for packing and do the packing as well as most of the European exporters do it, it would be the cheapest part of the purchase price of the stock in the package.

DO IT NOW.

Those who supply greenhouse building materials are unanimous in urging florists to act at once in ordering everything they need for 1917 additions or replacements, basing their course on their belief that building materials will become much higher in price than they now are.

Prices of practically all commodities have risen so rapidly in the last year that it is a matter of general amazement. It seems quite true that the prices of greenhouse materials have risen no more, if as much, as other commodities have done. Not taking into consideration the shortage in any one line, it seems fair to suppose that any further advance in commodity prices will carry greenhouse building materials along with it—and in nearly all lines of business it is the confident assertion that the top has not yet been reached. In several lines of greenhouse building material there are well known special reasons for an advance in prices. By buying now at present price levels, a grower is quite likely to save some money; there is scarcely any chance that he could save money by waiting until toward spring.

As to the policy of building greenhouses at the present price of materials, it is not so much a question of what a greenhouse will cost as it is what the grower is able to take out of it after it is built. The man who has a market at a satisfactory price can afford to build at any price.

GOING UP.

Pretty nearly everybody knows what has happened to the price of paper during 1916—the increase has been such as to compel a revision of calculations by all large users of paper. That the necessity is recognized is shown by the following press dispatch:

Boston, Mass., Dec. 7.—The Association of National Advertisers at its annual meeting today adopted resolutions approving "reasonable increases in the selling price of periodicals and newspapers" because of the higher cost of white paper.

Some time ago The Review announced that after December 31, 1916, its subscription price will be $1.50 per year. Up to the last day of this month and year subscriptions may be renewed at the old rate of $1 per year.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The last week was, on the whole, a fairly satisfactory one in the wholesale flower market. As demand went down, stock shortened considerably, with the result that prices did not fall so abruptly as they otherwise would have done. City trade was considerably slackened by the unfavorable weather which prevailed during the greater part of the week, but shipping business came in briskly and again demonstrated its value.

The advent of cold weather has further shortened the supply of all varieties of roses. The demand continues fair and stock is clearing well at moderate prices. Russells are in especially heavy demand. Indications are that the highest prices ever attained by this variety will be reached this Christmas. American Beauties continue scarce, and clear well at good prices. The supply of carnations is large, but they are clearing better than last week and prices have stiffened up considerably. Mums and pompons are practically a dead letter, only a few stragglers still remaining on the market.

Lilies are steadily gaining impetus, and are now moving fairly well. Valley continues scarce, as do violets, the demand for the latter having fallen off somewhat since last week. Calendulas are selling better, at moderate prices. Orchids are in small supply. Sweet peas are still short and sell readily. The supply is slowly increasing. Paper Whites arrive heavily and are moving slowly. Stevia is easier than it has been. The quality is considerably improved. Snapdragons continue short, with a fairly good demand which clears stock readily.

Christmas Prospects.

It is years since the Chicago wholesale florists have been so unanimous in their confidence regarding the Christmas business. Since the splendid clean-up made at Thanksgiving, every assurance has been felt that relatively good results will come with the more important holiday. This confidence has not in any wise been shaken by the relapse the market suffered last week. This is taken to be only the slowing down that usually takes place at this time of the year, accentuated, perhaps, by certain unusual factors this season.

Less interest than usual is taken in the prospect for Beauties; this flower is no longer so important as it was when more largely grown. It is generally agreed that the supply of Beauties this year will be considerably less than at any recent Christmas, although one or two growers, including at least one who has materially reduced his Beauty space this year, aver they will cut more Beauties than last year. Whatever Beauty loses Russell gains. The supply will be large and of universally fine quality, the stems running up to thirty-six inches or even more. Expectations as to the Christmas supply of roses in general have been revised downwards during the last week. There are those who say conditions have so changed as to reduce the anticipated cuts by one-third. Nevertheless, it is thought there will be roses enough for all who want them at list prices, which is far more satisfactory all around than where a surplus must be jobbed off.

Carnations were late this season and have just got into their stride. A few growers disagree, but the general opinion is the supply of carnations will be the largest this market ever has had at Christmas. Violets are expected to be less abundant than usual, largely because of improved markets elsewhere diverting the supply. Of other flowers there will be so many the clean-up will depend on the demand for the more important items.

The Nativity Record.

This, December 14, is the birthday anniversary of Emil Buettner, grower and president of the A. L. Randall Co. The Book of Chicagoans says it is his sixtieth, for he was born in Hanover in 1856.

It was December 15, 1867, that George Stollery brightened an English home.

Good guessers will agree that N. P. Miller is about 57 years old. You can omit the "about" next week Friday, December 22.

Anton Then was born in Bavaria Christmas day, 1854, so he will reach his sixty-second milestone this year.

Various Notes.

After having spent the summer on his farm at West Springfield, Pa., Carl N. Thomas is expected to arrive in Chicago about December 15 to devote the frozen months to the cut flower department of the A. L. Randall Co.

It is announced that January 1 M. C. Wright, formerly manager of the Philadelphia office of Lord & Burnham Co., will come to Chicago to become western manager of sales. He will be accompanied by his assistant, Mr. Woodward. It is stated that the western business has grown at such a rate that George Sykes, general western manager, feels the desirability of developing his organization to provide for still larger demands that are felt to be coming.

According to C. L. Washburn the large quantities of California mums which come into this market in the early part of November give the local growers "food for thought." Although most of the wholesale houses decline to jeopardize the local growers' interests by handling mums from California, Mr. Washburn believes that with even one place in the market handling this stock it will break the market next season the same as it did this year. He points out that it was the early frost that made the fine market for early mums this year, a factor which cannot be counted on for other years. Consequently, with the California stock menacing the midseason market, Mr. Washburn thinks the late varieties are much the safest to plant for next season.

It is said by those who watch the flowers at debutante parties that John Mangel's tag has been on a much larger percentage of the boxes this year than usual.

Fred Ottenbacher has entered the employ of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association.

The year 1916 has been the best in the experience of Peter Reinberg, according to Felix Reichling, who says inquiries and orders indicate there will be a big finish.

Returning December 11 from a month's trip to California, C. S. Claussen reports that he had a pleasant visit with Fred Sperry, former Chicagoan, who, Mr. Claussen says, seems to be building a highly successful shipping trade in Los Angeles, dealing in cut flowers, greens and supplies.

Although there are reports that certain growers will not be in full crop, so many others will cut more heavily than ever before that John Michelsen, of the E. C. Amling Co., predicts the carnation supply will be the largest this market ever has seen at Christmas.

N. Tincozzi. The store will hereafter be known as the Van Buren Florists.

The chrysanthemum season for 1916, according to N. J. Wietor, was one of the best on record in spite of a weak spot in the middle of it. Wietor Bros. plant late varieties more largely than do most growers and certainly profited by it this year.

The convention committee which had charge of the entertainment of the Vegetable Growers' Association of America when it visited Chicago in September, closed up its affairs at a meeting December 7, by ordering a refund of thirty-three and one-third per cent to the subscribers who provided the means of entertainment. Fred Lautenschlager was chairman; E. F. Kurowski, treasurer; J. B. Foley, secretary, and George Sykes, chairman of the finance committee.

Erne & Klingel are earnestly in quest of a location which will give them more space. The quarters they have occupied since their start in business are outgrown.

J. G. Witt, West Pullman, is seriously ill with pneumonia.

H. A. Philpott is due in a few days to lend a hand, as usual, in the holiday rush of Pyfer & Co., and then with Pyfer & Olsem.

At the store of the John Kruchten Co., several additional balconies have recently been put up to provide additional room for shipping boxes.

E. C. Pruner celebrated his seventh wedding anniversary at his home at 2414 North Mozart street, December 9. Many members of the trade were present.

At the store of Kennicott Bros. Co., E. F. Benthey says Shawyer is again giving a splendid account of itself at the F. J. Benthey establishment at Newcastle, where it has been a great success from its first season.

The wedding of L. R. Finnerman, of A. Henderson & Co., and Miss Doris Clamage will take place at Libuse hall, Hoyne avenue and Twelfth street, at 6 p. m., December 17. The young couple will be at home at 720 South St. Louis avenue after December 20.

It appears that nearly all the local growers lost at least a portion of their azaleas through freezing in transit. The George Wittbold Co. attributes the disaster which overtook its imports to the ventilator of the refrigerator car being left open.

Miss L. A. Tonner reports that the pecan nut business which she recently started is exceeding expectations. She says she is finding a ready market for her wares, both in the candy shops and among private customers.

There are 60,000 of the Rainbow freesias showing good growth at the Alois Frey establishment at Crown Point, not to mention 20,000 seedlings. There will be nothing much to cut until January, as Mr. Frey does not believe in too much heat at this stage.

Allan Humason and E. C. Pruner are in Chicago. They expect to remain in the city until after the first of the year.

According to William Wienhoeber, the E. Wienhoeber Co., Elm street, never had so large a November as in 1916. It was made so by the unusual number of debutante parties, he says, several of them bringing forty or fifty orders each.

With his Winton, C. W. McKellar spent December 12 visiting growers. He says flowering plants are less plentiful than usual, but that there will be a big supply of carnations.

One rarely sees a more attractive window than that of the Muir store on Grand boulevard. The display maintained there is particularly effective after dark and would do much credit to a store on a main-traveled business street.

A. F. Keenan says that "anybody can do business at the holidays; it's the ability to do business between times that counts."

tities of Beauties into this market at Christmas. Mr. Watson says the supply of Beauties at Philadelphia this Christmas will be slightly less than last year, due to growers timing more of their plants for a later crop rather than to a reduction in the number benched, but he expects the better condition of the principal eastern markets to be a still greater factor in the Christmas market. Beauties sold in New York as high as $9 per dozen for Thanksgiving.

three locations, where cutting is about ten days apart. The earliest shipments come from Halls, Tenn., followed by those from the farm at Grayville, Ill., with the Onarga crop closing the season.

J. E. Cannaday, M. D., proprietor of the State Fair Floral Co., Sedalia, Mo., has been in the market this week.

David Geddis, formerly with C. A. Samuelson, and now in the wholesale business at St. Louis, was a visitor December 11.

Mrs. E. H. Masey, of the Masey Floral Co., Minneapolis, spent a couple of days here this week, picking up stock for Christmas.

The presence of the following visitors was noted in Chicago during the last week: W. D. Desmond, Minneapolis, Minn.; Miss M. Britz, Danville, Ill.; Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Miller, Racine, Wis.; Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Brown, Springfield, Ill.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The condition of the wholesale market last week was splendid. There was plenty of fine stock and business was excellent. Prices have advanced somewhat, now that the mum season is at an end. The retailers, too, say they had excellent business last week, and preparations for Christmas are keeping all hands busy. A few days of cold weather stimulated business somewhat and society affairs used up large quantities of extra quality stock.

The market is well supplied with extra quality Russell, Ophelia, Ward, Milady, Sunburst and American Beauty roses. These were in good demand last week and brought top prices. The Killarneys, which have been off crop of late, are beginning to come in again and soon will be plentiful. Carnations now are coming into their own and better prices are expected during this week. Some fine blooms of Enchantress, White Enchantress, Beacon and Ward are arriving, and a good crop is expected for Christmas.

Mums are about over for this season; only a few late varieties are coming in. Sweet peas are expected to become more plentiful from now on, but they are scarce at present, with the big demand. Violets arrive in fine condition, the cold weather bringing out the color and strengthening the stem. Orchids and valley are having a big call daily and some fine stevias and Paper Whites are offered. Flat ferns bring $2 per 1,000. Asparagus, galax, leucothoe and smilax experienced a big demand last week.

Mission Inn Garden. Christmas prospects will be the topic of the evening and a large attendance is looked for.

The St. Louis County Growers' Association failed to hold its regular meeting December 6 on account of the florists' dance, which was held the same evening. Secretary Deutschmann will send out notices regarding the next meeting of the association.

Fred W. Ude, Jr., of Kirkwood, Mo., left December 9 for Florida, where he will spend the winter. His son, Emil, has a large tract of land under cultivation in that state. The greenhouse range will be looked after by the sons.

The Florists' Club's officers held their regular conference at the home of Trustee Ohlweiler December 8. During the evening an interesting program was mapped out for this week's meeting, which is to be held at the Forest park greenhouses.

H. Young & Son, on Maryland avenue, have their store in splendid shape for Christmas. This firm is producing a number of fine orchids. Ray Young is the buyer in the wholesale district.

Fred H. Weber is spending a few days in New York buying novelties for his Christmas trade. Paul Hyland and Adolph Steidle are in charge of the store during his absence.

Fred Alves, manager for George H. Angermueller, who has been sick for some time, is reported to be much im-

WHEN making a delivery the first impression is made by the box. Of course the flowers contained in it cannot fail to please, but you did not make the flowers. The Climax Line is a Good Line to Tie To

THE FACT that we have in the past seven years built up the largest Cut Flower Box business in the Country is our best advertisement. We strive to please and the results speak for themselves.

"WHEN BETTER BOXES ARE MADE WE WILL MAKE THEM"
is still our slogan.

We manufacture and carry in stock for prompt shipment: Oxford Gray, Mist Green, Mist Tan, White Carnation and our popular Favorite grade—the latter a most satisfactory telescope shipping box. Holiday boxes in season. We make special sizes promptly and at reasonable charge, and specialize in attractive and up-to-date printing and embossing.

With our increased facilities we aim to make our service the best in our line, and if you are in the market it will pay you to wait for the "Climax" Salesman, or send for late price list and samples to nearest office: 141 Milk St., Boston; 2914 11th St., N. W., Washington, D. C.

proved, but he will not be able to take part in the holiday rush.

William Schray & Sons will have extra fine poinsettias for Christmas. Emil Schray says advance orders for these are coming in daily from the local retailers.

The Meier brothers, Charles, William and Henry, of Kirkwood, Mo., had a hog killing last week. They say this takes place every year right after the mum season. The cut of carnations, sweet peas and violets is expected to be large from now on.

W. A. Miller, for the last few years with Fred C. Weber, left for Kansas City, Mo., to take a position with Samuel Murray. His family accompanied him.

December 9 a new store was opened at 4110 Manchester avenue by Miss W. McClure and I. Ericson. The place will be known as the Blossom Shop. Both Miss McClure and Mr. Ericson were employees of Grimm & Gorly during the last year.

Walter Young, of the C. Young & Sons Co., returned last week from the Mexican border and took up his duties at the store. William Dee, of this concern, has been sick for the last week. Business has been rushing.

The Rosary, a new store, owned by John Barnard, with Miss Olga Maul in charge of the flower department, was opened December 9. Mr. Barnard and Miss Maul formerly were with Grimm & Gorly.

The dance given by the younger set of the Florists' Club at the Westminster hall December 6 was a big success. Arthur Beyer, buyer for Fred C. Weber, had charge of the musical program.

Thomas Kirkwood & Son and Anton Bros., of Kirkwood, are supplying this market with splendid carnations. Hartman Bros. and the Ahners, too, have sent in fine consignments of carnations.

PITTSBURGH.

The Market.

Prospects for good crops at Christmas are promising as far as roses and carnations are concerned. Business has been good since Thanksgiving and everything is cleaning up nicely, except Beauties. It seems impossible to make the people familiar with the high prices asked for Beauties.

The florists' supply departments certainly are making things hum. It seems as if all the retailers want their goods at once and at one time. The express companies have fallen down on deliveries and disappointments have begun. The retail stores are getting their wreaths and other novelties out on exhibition. Most of them have been so busy that there has not been enough time to prepare for Christmas, and it probably will be done at the eleventh hour. The Christmas greens men are not showing much stock. There are few Christmas trees; the holly and the holly wreaths are inferior; but better stock is expected by the last of the week.

Various Notes.

Frank Berndt, foreman for the Holton & Hunkel Co., Milwaukee, Wis., was a visitor. He said he was giving the places the "once over" while at their best, and left for the east to spend a few days.

The last Florists' Club's meeting was not much of a success, as Uncle Sam failed to deliver the notices until after the day of the meeting. Clarke.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

There is a healthy condition in the cut flower market, caused by a fairly even demand and supply. Neither demand nor supply is heavy at present. It seems probable that this condition will continue until the approach of Christmas. It has been a surprise to those who were not in on the secret that chrysanthemums of fine quality are still in the market. Not left-overs or culls or ripe stock, but really good Bonnaffon and Mistletoe and Jeanne Nonin that bring excellent prices. Of course there are not many of them, but there are enough to merit mention. Sweet peas are becoming more plentiful; quite a few really nice orchid-flowered blooms on long stems are offered. Another accession to the list is Narcissus Soleil d'Or, the so-called yellow Paper White and early French daffodil of merit. Lilac also has arrived from the famous New Jersey center, where this famous French flower is grown to perfection. Poinsettias are ready on call, as it were, for the yuletide festivities. Primroses and yellow daisies are slowly rounding into form. These are the flowers that add variety to the list. They do not form a large proportion of the flowers offered, but they are of special interest at a time when fall has passed and winter has come.

The outlook for Christmas is bright. There promises to be an abundance of good stock in the market; whether it will suffice to meet all of the demands is a question that time will settle.

Mr. Reid's Plan.

Edward Reid has been hammering steadily away at the Adams Express Co. with a view to securing prompt delivery of cut flowers at the holidays. The officials of the express company asked Mr. Reid to suggest a remedy for the evil. They told him that the increase in volume of express packages at the holidays was enormous; so large, in fact, that it was not possible to handle all the packages promptly. Mr. Reid urged that the shipper who shipped boxes 300 days in a year deserved special consideration; that to place such shippers in the same class with those who sent Christmas presents once a year was bad business, particularly as the Christmas presents would not spoil like cut flowers. He further urged that the express company would be saving itself a great deal of trouble and expense by treating shipments of cut flowers as preferred stock.

The plans submitted by Mr. Reid to the officials of the Adams Express Co. were as follows: That all boxes marked as perishable cut flowers and expressed to Pittsburgh, for instance, would be placed in the hands of two or three of the company's most reliable employees; that these boxes would be gathered on the platform and placed in the express car for Pittsburgh by these men and not buried under a mass of general merchandise; that a wire be sent to the express office in Pittsburgh saying that —we will suppose—fifty boxes of perishable cut flowers were on such a train bound for that city; that this car be met in Pittsburgh by an express company man who understood his business; that the boxes be gotten out immediately and sent over to the express office; that they then be distributed at once.

In the case of flowers sent over two roads, where the greatest danger lies, Mr. Reid proposed as follows: That, when flowers are shipped to the south, the boxes be collected in the same way in this city and placed together in the express car; that they be marked as so many for the Sea Board Air line, so many for the Chesapeake & Ohio, so many for the Atlantic Coast line and so many for the Southern; that a telegram be sent to the company's office in Washington apprising it of the exact number of boxes for each of these four different routes, with the numbers of the express car and of the train; that the Washington employees of the company use utmost dispatch in distributing and restarting these boxes. Mr. Reid further suggested that the same methods be employed to safeguard incoming shipments of flowers.

At a meeting of the Adams Express Co. officials held in this city, it was agreed that Mr. Reid's plan be given a trial next week.

Rose September Morn.

Henry C. Geiger, secretary of the Florex Gardens, was seen at the office of Eugene Bernheimer in this city in regard to the Rose September Morn. Mr. Geiger said: "We have 12,000 plants of September Morn out at North Wales. You know this rose is a light pink sport of Prima Donna. We grew 100 plants of it last year and were so much pleased with it that we have planted 12,000 this year. September Morn is more fragrant than Prima Donna and of more refined type. The plants have shown splendid growth and we think that it will prove a great acquisition to our list of forcing varieties. We propose to offer young plants of September Morn in February."

The Price of Cut Flowers.

Many growers have asked the question whether, in view of the higher cost of coal and other necessities, this season, they would receive any more for their products than in previous years. The question has been answered and is being answered with regard to plants by the adoption of a higher scale of prices on certain kinds—a scale that has been set by the leaders and is being adopted by growers generally. In the case of cut flowers no such scale is possible. So the question was put to Charles E. Meehan, with a certainty of securing a thoughtful reply.

"Flowers have not brought any more this fall than usual," Mr. Meehan said. "The supply has been more than equal to the demand. It seems likely that during the winter things will be different. With a more evenly balanced supply and demand it is almost certain that prices will be satisfactory to the growers, because general business is good and people are willing to pay a fair price for what they want."

Transportation.

The growth of the florists' business has been so rapid during the last few years that it brings up new problems, or rather accentuates old problems, making them more serious than in the past. Leo Niessen voiced the feeling among our shippers when he spoke of the necessity of concerted action to secure relief. Mr. Niessen's idea is that prompt delivery of perishable cut flowers and plants at holidays can be secured from the express companies, past all peradventure, by the assistance of the Interstate Commerce Commission. He thinks that so important an industry as floriculture should receive special consideration. He doubts whether that consideration can be secured from the express companies unless the florists unite and throw their whole force into the effort.

Various Notes.

Edward Neville spoke on his experience during his vacation before the Germantown Horticultural Society December 11. The treasurer's report for the year read at this meeting showed the society to be in splendid condition—a large paid membership and a good balance on hand, after an addition was made to the permanent fund.

The florists and seedsmen of this city contributed generously to the bazaar held for the benefit of the Allies at the Bellevue-Stratford this week.

Clarence U. Liggit said that all varieties of Christmas plants save palms and ferns are already running short.

Mr. Wright Goes West.

As reported in the Philadelphia column last week, M. C. Wright, who for the last six years has been manager of Lord & Burnham's Philadelphia and southern territory, the first of the year will go to their Chicago office as manager of sales. Those who have been privileged to know Mr. Wright, and had the genuine pleasure of doing business with him, will learn of his departure with no little regret. On the other hand, the west is to be congratulated on the prospect of gaining a man of such an enviable reputation in the greenhouse construction field. Mr. Woodward, who has long been his associate, goes to Chicago with him.

The Market.

All seasonable stock is selling well. Many of the retailers report an unusual increase in business during the last two weeks. Carnations are beginning to improve, and it is hoped that the stems will stiffen, so as to match the quality of the blooms. Russell and Ophelia at present are the best and most popular roses. Violets are becoming plentiful, while sweet peas, snapdragons and Paper Whites are increasing in supply. A few good Formosa and calla lilies are to be had.

Various Notes.

George Zimmer has his carnations in fine shape and will have a heavy cut for Christmas. He reports a steady increase in business.

A disastrous accident was narrowly averted last week at the greenhouses of Lewis Henderson. The night fireman let one of the boilers run dry and did not notice it until one of the steam mains over the boiler burst. It seems that in some way or other the return valve between the two boilers had been left closed, and the fireman was watching only one water gauge—of course, the wrong one.

When it comes to quality of carnation blooms A. Donaghue has everything else in this neck of the woods beat to a frazzle. His cut for the holidays will be good.

A meeting of the Omaha-Council Bluffs Florists' Club was held December 7 and the following officers elected: President, John Bath; vice-president, Lee Larmon; secretary, John Gardner; treasurer, Harry Clark. who are cutting anything have no cause for complaint.

Last week the rose market was strong and the supply limited. Had there been any unusual demand prices would have soared. American Beauties and Hadleys sold at 50 to 60 cents each for the selects and Russell was held at 35 cents for the highest grade. Killarney Brilliant, Key, Hoosier Beauty, Sunburst, Ward, Mock and Ophelia all were higher and the lower grades of these were in demand at 3 cents and up.

Orchids are more abundant and prices are slightly lower. Cypripediums bring from $10 to $15 per hundred. Gardenias at last are coming in larger quantities and prices are falling.

The best carnations sold at $4 per hundred December 9 and 10; indeed, a few touched $5, but $3 to $4 was the general quotation, with nothing below $2.

It is remarkable how the late mums are holding out. Some of the wholesalers' windows are full of them and prices are firmer. It looks as if there will be quite a few remaining to the end of the year. The pompons, too, are well appreciated.

Lilies sold up to $10 and $12 per hundred December and the demand left no surplus. Valley fell to $3 and $4. Violets have held well for several weeks. The quality of the Spencer peas is so good they are selling better every day.

There is a large assortment of miscellaneous flowers that seem to appeal to buyers this year more than usual, including yellow daisies, southern gladioli, stevia, pansies, calendula, narcissi, bouvardia, callas and mignonette.

The New York Florists' Supply Co. says all records to date have been broken by the call for greens. The company has leased another building for storage.

The three stores of the MacNiff Horticultural Co. are decorated more elaborately than ever, at a cost of several hundred dollars. The entire front is a mass of evergreens, roping and Christmas color. The new poultry department now occupies much greater space and will soon include goldfish and pet animals.

Stumpp & Walter Co. says 1916 has been a banner year but that the outlook is indicative of far larger things in 1917.

The Kervan Co. has an immense force at work night and day. Christmas trees arrived last week.

A branch store has been added to Alex. McConnell's holiday conveniences.

December 10 A. Rosen, of Brooklyn, was married to Miss Rae Greenberg, of New York.

George C. Siebrecht's basket factory is proving even more successful than expected.

Woodrow & Marketos have a fine winter decoration at the Flat Iron building, Twenty-third street and Broadway.

The largest importations of Japanese red frieze in the history of the business have already been cleaned up, according to B. Rosens.

There were sixty-five cases of immortelles for M. Rice Co., Philadelphia, on the boat from Marseilles which arrived at New York December 4.

The Burns place at Pleasant Valley will repeat last year's Christmas success with Hadley, according to P. J. Smith, who recently was there.

WINTERSON'S "OWN" NOVELTY NATURAL SPRUCE MINIATURE CHRISTMAS TREES
With Round Birchwood Stand

November, 1909, we introduced these beautiful Decorative Spruce Trees to the Trade, and the supply each season has not equaled the demand. They are almost perfect in shape and in various heights of from 15 inches to 42 inches, with a spread of 12 inches to 42 inches. The base is firmly attached to a round block of selected white birch about 5 inches in diameter, and they are not only desirable for general decoration, but likewise suited for basket and other artistic work. We have arranged for an increased number for the coming season, but urge early purchase for shipment as wanted.

USINGER'S UTTERANCES.

The J. W. Dudley Sons Co., of Clarksburg, W. Va., had the decorations for one of the season's largest weddings in Clarksburg.

A. Langhans, of Wheeling, W. Va., was getting ready for the holidays. A fine display of cut stock was noticed. Funeral orders were heavy.

Charles O'Beirne, of Martins Ferry, O., is taking additional store space to keep pace with his rapidly growing cut flower trade.

A new house has been added to the range of Kehrer & Sons, of Martins Ferry. Larger offices also are being built.

The Cunningham Greenhouses, of Delaware, O., are producing some fine carnations, besides other good stock. The season has been satisfactory and the outlook for the future is bright.

The Posy Shop, of Fremont, O., has been busy with orders for decorative work.

A. S. Horn, of Fremont, has finished another addition to the greenhouses.

Preparations are being made for a big holiday trade by the florists in the Auditorium market, Wheeling, W. Va. The sale of wreaths and baskets of artificial flowers is a feature.

The Oldham Greenhouses, of Cambridge, O., have a good lot of stock coming on for the holidays.

The Imlay Co., of Zanesville, O., has its usually good stock of Christmas plants coming on.

A. J. Vonderhorst, the "telephone florist," of Fostoria, O., is building up a good trade at his new stand. He is located some distance from the business section, but with his telephone and delivery car he makes a successful bid for the business.

Magnificent stock was seen at the Constien Bros. place, at Upper Sandusky, O. A scarcity of cyclamens and other plants is reported.

"To have coal and gas for heating one's greenhouses would seem a double advantage these wintry days, but with coal unobtainable and gas likely to be cut off at any time, what is a fellow to do?" asked F. J. Norton, of Bucyrus, O.

A grand display of cut flowers, especially mums, was seen the day before Thanksgiving at the Stuhldreher Bros. store at Mansfield, O. The day after there was not much left, even of the help.

A visit to the greenhouses of the H. Weber & Sons Co., at Oakland, Md., these crisp December mornings is most interesting. The warmth of the place, after a short spin to the greenhouses when the thermometer registered 10 degrees above, was welcome. The high altitude and pure air of the mountains makes the flowers grow splendidly. Mums and lilies were in abundance; roses and other flowers never looked better and plants for Christmas were coming along in fine shape. The hospitality of Will and John Weber makes the handshake a little stronger and the smile a little longer. W. T. U.

NEWARK, N. J.

The Market.

Chrysanthemums, which have ruled the market for so long, are rapidly deteriorating. With their eclipse there is more demand for carnations, which are good and in fair quantity. Many of the growers have good stocks of plants for Christmas. Some sweet peas are coming in, but there has not been a great demand for them. Potted flowering begonias are seen in considerable quantities. Roses continue abundant and of good quality. Within a few days a much larger supply of poinsettias will arrive.

Florists who handle Christmas trees will have difficulty in getting stock from some sections of New England, as the gypsy moth is prevalent there and an embargo has been placed on the trees by the New Jersey department of Agriculture. A supply will be secured from Canada, however, but the longer shipment and smaller quantity doubtless will mean higher-priced trees and greens this year, at least as far as this locality is concerned.

Various Notes.

Henry Hornecker, of East Orange, finds business about normal for this time of the year.

George Penek made effective use last week of a Japanese garden in his window decoration. R. B. M.

The above is a list of National Florists to date. Remember, there is but one National Florist in each city, who gets all orders for that city. To be a National Florist is an introduction not only to the society of good florists, but to the society of good customers, as our advertising appeals to a high-grade clientele.

If you are responsible and will agree to give your fellow National Florists as good service as you expect to receive, we will consider your application.

The Market.

Prices are holding up well in the cut flower market and there is no considerable surplus of anything. Roses are a little lower than they were a few days ago, whites being the slowest to move. Short-stemmed stock sells at an average of $4, while other grades run from $6 to $20, some fancies realizing a little more, particularly Russell and Hadley. All colored roses are cleaned up with ease. Growers have to insist on buyers taking a fair percentage of whites and in this way prevent a serious glut. The weather has been particularly favorable for cut flower production and growers report that crops timed for Christmas are coming on too fast. We have comparatively open, clear weather, which is not favorable for retarding flowers.

Carnations are somewhat more aggressive and make from $3 to $4 per hundred, with some fancies at $5. The quality now is strictly first-class. Single violets sell better than doubles and realize 25 cents per hundred more. There still are good supplies of chrysanthemums and these make double the prices of a fortnight ago. Paper White narcissi are abundant. As yet only a few Roman hyacinths have appeared. Small lots of French Golden Spurs appeared this week. Valley continues high; the best realizes $8 per hundred. Lilies are abundant and are inclined to sag a little.

Bachelor's buttons and yellow marguerites sell well; so do snapdragons, particularly the pink ones. Stevia is a little druggy, while no one wants the Gypsophila elegans offered. This week there is quite a good demand for poinsettias. Callas are arriving more abundantly. Sweet peas are coming in more freely and are of good quality. Some pink bouvardias come in and sell moderately well. Gardenias and cattleyas are scarce. Calls for asparagus are only moderate, that for A. plumosus being the best.

The pot plant trade is extremely active; the large specialists are already well sold out. Quite a number of well berried English hollies in tubs are to be seen and the demand for Christmas greenery of all kinds is stronger than ever before.

Various Notes.

A special car of the Boston and Worcester street railroad will leave Park square, Boston, at 1 p. m., December 16, for the field day of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club at Framingham. The establishments of Messrs. Goddard, Nicholson, Nelson and Butterworth will be inspected.

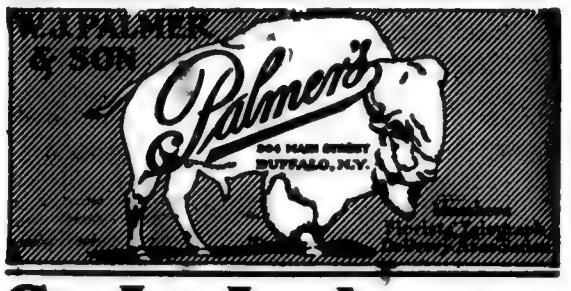
cutting some extra fine American Beauties this season. Crimson Queen is a great specialty and is extra good; so are Hoosier Beauty, Double White Killarney, Ophelia, Tipperary and Bedford Belle. They have a heavy Christmas crop in sight.

The Waban Rose Conservatories have a magnificent crop of roses just right for Christmas. Where everything is grown so well, it is hard to particularize. Russell and Hadley are wonderful. The latter makes Hoosier Beauty appear puny by comparison. Lady Alice Stanley is good; so are Ophelia and Killarney Brilliant. From 3,400 plants of the latter, 35,000 flowers have already been cut this season.

A busy establishment is that of the W. W. Edgar Co., of Waverley, Mass. Houses which were overflowing with choice Christmas stock are rapidly being denuded. The cyclamens, browallias, azaleas, poinsettias, begonias and other plants are in the pink of condition—the best Bartsch brand.

Sweet peas of the Spencer type now are coming in from a number of growers. No better flowers are to be seen than those shipped in by J. W. Philbrick, of Beverly, who has white, pink and lavender, with splendid stems.



Do not forget the club meeting at Horticultural hall December 19. There will be the election of officers and the lecture by J. N. Keeler, on "Greenhouse Construction," which will be illustrated by the stereopticon. Arrangements for the annual club banquet are already under way. The next one will be held in Horticultural hall.

C. S. Andem, of Putnam, Conn., is shipping in Gypsophila elegans, which finds a hard competitor in stevia. His Pink Delight, Alice and Matchless carnations are fine.

At Welch's business is good, but prevailing high prices are not conducive to expanding the flower trade. David Welch says that there is a sharp advance in the prices of all evergreens due to the higher cost of labor, and collections from clients are not so good as might be expected. The concern has many advance Christmas orders to fill.

Paine Bros., of Randolph, have what they call a double stevia, which is whiter than the common S. serrata and sells more quickly. They brought in a few French Golden Spur narcissi this week, the first of the season from any source.

R. & J. Farquhar & Co. have few bulbs left this season. The entire ground floor at the South Market street store now is devoted to flowering and foliage plants and receptacles of various kinds, of all of which they have a splendid assortment.

Red Radiance rose is one which has never taken well in Boston. Last week I noted in the store of the Gude Bros. Co., at Washington, a grand and richly colored sport of Radiance, of a much better color than the one usually seen. As seen growing at the two establishments of the Gude Bros. Co. it was grand and ran American Beauty a close second.

Robert Montgomery, of Natick, is noted as a rose and not a carnation specialist, but he has taken up carnation culture this season and I have never seen grander Matchless, while Pink Delight and White Wonder are almost equally good. Among the roses Russell, Hadley, Ophelia, Hoosier Beauty, Killarney, Killarney Brilliant and Double White Killarney are splendid.

Harry Quint, of Boylston street, reports business as satisfactory. He continues to sell many Dutch bulbs as well as plants and flowers. He has numerous orders for the great National Allied Bazaar, including the furnishing of thousands of tricolor boutonnieres.

N. F. Comley is doing well with American Beauties this season. He planted 2,000 as an experiment. Hoosier Beauty, extra fine Red Radiance, Mrs. W. R. Hearst, Killarney Brilliant and Double White Killarney are his lead-a vigorous war to popularize them in the 70's and 80's, when the craze for carpet bedding was at its height. Few men have done a greater work for horticulture in its broadest sense.

The Welch Bros. Co. is handling an immense quantity of evergreens at present, in addition to cut flowers of all kinds. The company's growers promise a heavy Christmas cut.

The Sutermeister estate, of Readville, will have a fine cut of Purity Freesia for the holidays. Stevia is the leading crop at present. The estate will not have any Dutch bulbous flowers for Christmas this season.

The Market.

Business last week was as good as could be expected, considering the season. The early part of the week was extremely quiet, but during the week end business became brisk. Stock is more plentiful, but nothing has gone to waste. Prices have been good.

Chrysanthemums are practically out of the market. Of course, a few stragglers still remain, but they receive little attention, as the public and retailers are tired of mums.

All of the retail stores have taken on their Christmas dress. They are well prepared with holiday plants and expect to enlarge this end of the business this year. Some of the stores are well stocked with Christmas greens. Holly is selling at $5 and $6 per case. Lycopodium is high, with prospects of going higher. Mistletoe brings 25 to 30 cents and ruscus makes $1 per pound. Immortelles are about the same as other years.

A. C. S. Committeemen Meet.

The committees have been active. Hotel reservations and plans for the reception committee have been made. The members of the Indiana State Florists' Association will be furnished with badges and each member is to act as a committee of one to welcome visitors. Members of the Carnation Society were instructed to be on the lookout for new members.

The invitational form of ticket was decided upon and distribution will be made by members of the Indiana State Florists' Association.

The exhibition space was gone over and plans laid for decorating the stairway and lobby, as well as the hall. There are to be six table decorations, carried out in carnations only, whereby it is hoped to show the real value of the flower for the purpose.

Various Notes.

Hartje & Elder are cutting some fine Governor Herrick violets and good sweet peas, both of which will be in crop for Christmas.

Guy C. Sharp and Frank Lacy, of Noblesville, and F. W. Blubaugh, of Elwood, were visitors here looking after Christmas goods.

A. F. J. Baur recently made a trip to Chicago. O. E. Steinkamp motored to Richmond the early part of last week and spent Sunday visiting friends and relatives.

Stuart & Son, of Anderson, had a rush of funeral work last week and even the wholesalers of Indianapolis profited thereby.

The next meeting of the Indiana State Florists' Association will be held January 9, the meeting place to be decided on later. There will be an early session at 10 o'clock in charge of the committees of the carnation show. The regular business meeting will be held at 2 o'clock. The association is desirous of having a large attendance at this meeting and expects a few new members.

Joseph Hill and Fred Lemon, of Richmond, and W. J. Vesey, of Fort Wayne, visited a number of the Indianapolis florists while here attending a committee meeting.

It has been hinted that Indianapolis is to have a retail florists' association. Such an organization is needed here.

L. F. Benson made a trip to Cincinnati last week.

The Bertermann Bros Co. has a fine line of blooming and berried plants for Christmas; also a nice cut of late chrysanthemums. provement in quality. Carnations are quite scarce, as the growers are beginning to conserve their stock. Some extra fine stevia has been coming in and has met a fair demand. Sweet peas have not been so plentiful of late and the price has gone up. Easter lilies are still held at $12 per hundred, but the sale is dragging. Valley maintains its price of $7 and $8 per hundred, but there is a sufficient quantity to fill all present demands. The supply of narcissi has greatly increased.

Club Meeting.

A discussion of price maintenance and grading cut flowers was the feature of the December meeting of the Florists' Club, held at 1214 F street, northwest. The questions involved came before the meeting upon the suggestion of Z. D. Blackistone. Adolph Gude answered by pointing out the impossibility of price regulation and the ineffectiveness of a standardization of flowers by grades. He pointed out that roses of one grade might flood the market at a time when retailers needed another grade only.

W. F. Gude made a report concerning the committee's action for the entertainment for the gardeners' convention. The committee provided an automobile tour of the city, a luncheon at the Hotel Ebbitt, and a trip to Mount Vernon. Upon motion of Z. D. Blackistone, a vote of thanks to Mr. Gude for the unselfishness shown in entertaining these guests on behalf of the Florists' Club was adopted.

Various Notes.

Adolph Gude has been appointed one of the delegates of the Chamber of Commerce to attend the meeting of the American Civic Association and W. F. Gude will serve in a similar capacity at the meeting of the National Security League.

The Washington Floral Co. is beginning to cut good Paper Whites. The stock will come into full crop a few days before Christmas.

The large ballroom of the New Willard hotel never looked better than it did on the occasion of the annual banquet of the Gridiron Club. As in previous years, C. Henry Small, of New York, of J. H. Small & Sons, visited Washington to participate in the banquet, with his brother, J. Henry Small, Jr. The decorations were done by the Smalls. C. L. L.

Hancock, Mich.—Three new greenhouses, giving the firm a total of 35,000 square feet of glass, have been erected by Dale & Nicholas, who recently acquired the Ripley greenhouses and the store operated for a number of years by the A. M. York estate.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.
President, Kirby B. White, Detroit, Mich.; Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

L. W. WHEELER, of the Pieters-Wheeler Seed Co., Gilroy, Cal., was in Chicago last week.

STEAMERS from the Scandinavian ports continue to bring small lots of lily of the valley pips, but the total is a relatively small quantity.

W. W. HOISINGTON and Burt Calhoun represented the Leonard Seed Co. at the Ohio canners' convention held at Columbus December 12 and 13.

E. C. DUNGAN, of Wm. Henry Maule, Inc., Philadelphia, Pa., is in Chicago with his wife, looking after the printing of the company's catalogue.

IN estimating the cost of canned peas for 1917 the committee of the National Canners' Association puts it down as "seed loss" at 2 cents per dozen cans.

A COMMITTEE of the Iowa Canners' Association, in estimating the cost of operation for 1917, figures $750 as the cost of the seed for packing 28,000 cases of corn.

THE first 1917 calendar to reach The Review is that of a seed grower, George R. Pedrick & Son, Pedricktown, N. J., a pretty picture of a lady with an armful of roses.

THE Aabling-Boyce Seed Co., Seattle, Wash., has opened a retail flower store in connection with its seed store, following a marked tendency in this direction in the trade.

J. W. EDMONDSON, manager of the California Seed Growers' Association, San Jose, Cal., returned to the coast December 8. He intends to be back in Chicago after the first of the year.

THE man who is fortunate enough to have a good crop of gladiolus bulbs this season should be subject for the congratulations of his friends; they will be readily salable at the best prices of recent years.

THE Central Seed House, East St. Louis, Ill., a partnership between W. H. Conant, C. W. Hurlburt and M. B. Conant, makes a specialty of the commission box business and is widening its territory this season.

THE seed trade as a body never was so confident as now that the approaching seed season will be an excellent one. The prevailing high prices of foodstuffs are expected to create an unprecedented demand for vegetable seeds of all kinds.

THE Jefferson-Ratekin Seed Co. was organized at Jefferson, La., last month with the following officers: President, J. W. Ratekin; vice-president, D. L. Howard; treasurer, M. Head. The company will specialize in field seed.

THE U. S. Department of Agriculture is putting the Bureau of Crop Estimates on its figurative back because of the success of its first attempt to forecast the Texas Bermuda onion crop. The bureau's first estimate was 5,328 cars, which it subsequently revised to 5,107, whereas the actual movement as reported from the shipping stations was 4,903 cars. The work will be undertaken again in 1917.

THE EARLY BIRD.

The first general seed catalogue for 1917 to reach The Review was that of W. E. Marshall & Co., New York. It arrived December 8. It contains a "Special Notice" in these words: "Owing to the disastrous war in Europe, a great many of the European seed crops have not been harvested or are prohibited from being exported. At the date of going to press with this catalogue, we are without final reports from our growers, so we cannot guarantee deliveries on some varieties of

A CHANGE IN VIEWPOINT?

When it was proposed to put catalogues under the parcel post zone rates there was much opposition and seedsmen, among others publishing relatively light books, secured an exception in their favor, leaving the flat third-class rate on pieces weighing up to eight ounces. The Postmaster General now recommends that catalogues be put back into the third class (1 cent for each two ounces regardless of distance)

LILY BULBS

OUR MOTTO: "Your dollar's value."

Those who know will grow Reburn & Co. lily bulbs, for they are fertilized (the truth without fear or favor), and feeding the bulbs at growing stage positively produces the best results, maturing a healthy, sound bulb; three times rogued and cultivated by the oldest and best experienced growers in Japan. GIGANTEUM of superb quality.

MULTIFLORUM for early Easter, true Kiota type, as you knew Multiflorum twelve to fifteen years ago. Easter, 1918, is March 31. Try a few cases. Supply limited.

FORMOSUM, black and green stem. The best Oshimo ever produced. Write for prices on all sizes and quantities.

Let us figure on your French and Dutch order for fall, 1917. Our connections are reliable. Read our motto.

Cold storage GIGANTEUM BULBS all the year. All sizes. Ask for prices. See offer of Gladioli in Classified Department.

and the following item is going the rounds:

Washington, D. C.—The House Committee on Post-offices and Post Roads is expected to include in the bill providing for the post-office appropriations for the fiscal year 1918, a provision under which catalogues will hereafter take third-class rates, instead of being accorded the privileges of the parcel post service. This is thought to be legislation aimed directly at the large mail order houses, but its adoption will hit all classes of business using catalogues to further their sales.

The seed trade strenuously opposed the application of parcel post zone rates to its catalogues. Will it be "hit" by putting them back where they were?

VALLEY PIPS ARRIVE.

As the British government this year has adopted special measures to enforce its embargo on German-grown valley pips, the British agents granting export permits only in cases where they have actually seen the growing crop, on non-German territory, the valley pips arriving this year perforce are either Danish or Holland-grown. Two weeks ago a steamer from Copenhagen brought a small shipment and last week a Rotterdam boat discharged nearly 1,000 cases of the precious article. The consignees of last week's arrival were:

M. Van Waveren & Sons, 278 cases.
Maltus & Ware, 429 cases.
American Express Co., 100 cases.
R. F. Lang, 53 cases.
Herwig & Co., 48 cases.

HOW ABOUT GIGANTEUM BULBS?

The British government last summer put an embargo on the shipment of Japanese lily bulbs to Great Britain, subsequently modifying the prohibition to the extent of admitting fifty per cent of the quantity exported to Great Britain in 1915. The result, according to the best authorities in the United States, was to cause an excess of from 1,500,000 to 2,000,000 giganteum bulbs in addition to the quantity usually sold in America to seek a market here. A few years ago it was considered that a fair crop of longiflorum bulbs in Japan was 18,000,000 to 20,000,000 bulbs, of which America took nearly half, so that an increase of 1,500,000 in the quantity offered in this market this year would represent an increase of about fifteen per cent. But it is open to question if there has been since last season an increase of fifteen per cent in the consumption of lily flowers.

At the opening of the season everybody was ready to buy bulbs; at least the wholesale handlers were, for they looked forward to a continuation of the then active demand. But the strong demand from forcers which marked the opening of the season suddenly flattened out after advance orders had been filled. Cold storage warehouses today are considered to contain more giganteum bulbs than ever before in the history of the trade. They were purchased at moderate prices; indeed, at prices that it is thought will not obtain next season, because the Jap must have more money for his bulbs or he will grow a food crop. Also, there is every indication that lily flowers will sell well now that the chrysanthemum season is over, and that forcers will be able to use more bulbs than last season, so holders are not anxious to shove their stock on the market.

PAPER WHITES IN PLENTY.

The situation with respect to Paper Whites is of especial interest. There was a boom at the time the exports ordinarily leave France and prices here were advanced to a level that appears to have been unjustified by the circumstances. A great many shippers were later than usual in making deliveries, which may have had something to do with creating a false appearance of scarcity. It perhaps is true that the stock was not ready for shipment quite so soon as usual this year, but the delay in many cases was due to the inability of certain buyers to cover their needs at prices they were willing to pay; they had to wait until less conservative buyers had taken what they wanted on an advancing market. Then there were plenty for the buyer who had to have his stock at a price. Today the United States is full of Paper Whites, with the holders in some cases on velvet and in other cases with their fingers quite near the fire. This latter condition applies particularly to second hands, the first hands having quite generally moved enough stock on the stiff early market so that they are safe, and more than safe.

Just what will become of the surplus of Paper Whites is not apparent. Already the principal wholesale markets are overloaded with the cut flowers, prices being so low that they do not afford any temptation to take on more bulbs for forcing, even if offered at two-thirds the prices which were demanded earlier in the season.

DUTCH BULBS STILL COMING.

Although in previous years November has seen the close of the import season of Holland-grown bulbs, this year the shipments continue into December. A Rotterdam steamer which arrived at New York December 2 discharged more than 1,200 cases of bulbs, in addition to large consignments of trees, shrubs and plants, some of which undoubtedly are of Belgian origin. The total number of cases of bulbs received to date now is greatly in excess of the total for 1915, which, in turn, exceeded that of 1914. Following are the consignees of last week's arrival, as given in New York customhouse papers:

AS TO DUTCH BULBS.

The Dutch bulb imports this season have exceeded 47,000 cases, according to the records of the New York customhouse, where last year the imports through that port of entry were only 35,000 cases. The difference of over thirty per cent represents the greatest increase of any one year in the history of the bulb trade in America.

Of course a large part of the increase has been due to the action of the British government in prohibiting the sending of bulbs from Holland to England, but the bulb importing season came just at a time when the trade in America was ready to take hold of almost anything that looked like salable stock. The result was that many dealers in this country bought more heavily than they should. Today there are considerable surpluses in the east, although western jobbers are well cleaned up.

Where early in the season stock was going out as fast as it was received and wholesale dealers were steadily behind their orders, the rapid approach of the end of the season makes it appear that some of the late arrivals might better have remained in Holland. It will have a tendency to make buyers cautious about 1917 orders.

MOTT-LY GLEANINGS.

George Tait & Sons, of Norfolk, Va., state that in all their long experience it was never harder than now to live up to their trade-mark of "Thoroughbred Seeds." Manager J. T. Moreland, who had just returned from a business tour of the east and Canadian growing districts, mentioned especially spinach, which is one of the largest crops grown in this region. The seed harvested in California here produces leaves that will not "blister" and pack poorly, requiring three barrels to make one, which, with prices as high as $2.25 per barrel, means quite a difference; so the during 1917 will be just as good as you make it. Every business is a good business—how good depends on you. For many reasons 1917 promises to be a banner year for florists. Are you prepared for it? Have you enough bulbs? Don't wait until it is too late—and, besides, there are no very large surpluses to choose from. The growers have had two years of war times, and their crops are shortened with the demand. Other crops brought more money, so they grew other things. Times are changing, prices will be higher—bulbs will soon be high enough to be better appreciated. Freights are higher, packing is higher, labor is higher, quantities produced are lower, and the unprecedented demand that is sure to come, will make prices high before long. The pendulum of the clock of business swings back and forth of its own momentum plus the power behind it—and times are going to be better than they have been bad. The change is here—are you ready for it? Get your greenhouses planted to their utmost capacity—buy your bulbs now—get enough Horseshoe Brand Giganteum now to last you during 1917—price from various shipping centers is $18 per case of 300 bulbs, as advertised.

growers are hoping for an early return to imported stock. "The potato crop is good," said Mr. Moreland, "the late crop being estimated at 350,000 barrels. One of our customers reports a yield of 135 barrels to the acre. Unfortunately, this condition seems to be solely with us, judging from the reports received from other centers."

The Williams Seed Co., of Norfolk, is making a fine display of bulbs of exceptional quality. Every purchaser, present or prospective, is handed an attractive folder on bulb lore that cannot fail to interest the reader. "We shall send out a unique catalogue for the next season," said Lyon Williams, handing me a sample cover. On the front appears the famous subject, "The Angelus." The back shows a fine old colonial residence, surrounded by a velvety lawn. "I do not think anyone who receives a copy will destroy it; of course, the contents and stock as described will be in harmony," concluded Mr. Williams.

D. W. Warren & Co., of Norfolk, one of the oldest seed houses, now specialize in field seed. They report good business. Mr. Warren has been quite ill, but hopes soon to be around, as usual.

W. S. Langhorne & Sons, of Portsmouth, Va., looks for a considerable increase in local trade on account of the amount of land under prospective cultivation by the increasing army of naval employees.

S. A. Rudd, of Newport News, Va., says it is surprising how many colored people have gone into the growing of vegetables, with much success. Mr. Rudd is a native and, though never outside his home town, is up-to-date through studying the trade journals and handling good seeds.

W. A. Miller & Son, of Lynchburg, Va., report a large business in field and grass seeds. The splendid buildings forming the national home of the B. P. O. Elks, at Bedford, are completed and the extensive grounds have been graded and are ready for seeding and planting.

CATALOGUES RECEIVED.

Armstrong Nurseries, Ontario, Cal.—An attractive, well illustrated, 48-page catalogue of nursery stock, both fruit-bearing and ornamental. Nut-bearing trees are included. Citrus fruits, California specialties and general stock of a semi-tropical character have a prominent place in the book.

I was unable to locate any bug or worm in the small package forwarded. They probably had dried up so completely as to be unrecognizable. You do not say whether your plants are in pots, in flats or planted out. If they are in pots, I would secure some carbon bisulphide, bore a hole in the soil in each pot and pour a few drops in each hole, immediately covering the hole. If the plants are in beds or benches, bore holes three to four inches deep and twelve to fifteen inches apart each way and pour a teaspoonful of the carbon in each hole, closing the holes as fast as the liquid is poured in. tinue this until you cover the affected beds. The gas from the carbon will suffocate any soil pests and will not damage your plants. Carbon bisulphide comes in pound cans, is inexpensive and can be had at any drug store. As it is of an explosive nature, be sure not to use any naked lights while applying it.

Another season, if you can arrange to sterilize your cucumber beds with steam, or even with water as nearly boiling as possible, before planting, you will thus get rid of all soil pests. The best growers of lettuce, cucumbers and tomatoes find sterilization pays them well. C. W.

NEXT SPRING'S TOMATOES.

I intend to force tomatoes this winter and wish to plant them about March 1. I would like to know when they should be started and what varieties would be the best to grow. Any other information will be appreciated greatly. W. C. E.—N. Y.

Sow the seeds about January 1, prick off into flats and later pot the plants singly. Give them a night temperature of 60 degrees, keep a dry atmosphere, grow to a single stem and pinch out the tops when five to six bunches are formed. Never spray your plants. Good varieties are Comet, Stirling Castle, Lister's Prolific and Bonny Best. Tomatoes enjoy a dry, buoyant atmosphere. Mildew will attack them if they are carelessly ventilated. C. W.

SNAPDRAGON

For spring blooms and a bumper crop Memorial Day grow Snapdragon. The flowers sell themselves and are easy to handle, requiring no "green" or making-up. Sow at once seed of the following varieties:

My original Silver Pink at $1.00 per pkt.; 3 for $2.50; 7 for $5.00. Seed of Nelrose, Garnet, Yellow, Light Pink, Phelps' White and Fancy Mixed at 35c per pkt.; 3 for $1.00. All orders cash. Free cultural directions.

Remember, you can grow no plant that will equal Snapdragon for cut flowers.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

Oakland, Cal.—Henry Millard Sanborn, head of the H. M. Sanborn Floral Co., a pioneer florist of the state, died December 7. Details are given in the obituary column.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

A large quantity of funeral work of the better kind and a good deal of entertaining, both at Thanksgiving and since, have made everyone busy and used up much stock. The dry spell has been more or less broken, a gentle rain having fallen, with probably more to follow. This will help the outdoor stock both in quality and quantity.

Among carnations, good rose-pink varieties have been hard to obtain. Other colors have been fairly plentiful, though many lack good shipping qualities. Roses are, if anything, a little more plentiful, but a great many more could be used. There are hardly any Beauties, but some long-stemmed Prima Donna and Russell have helped out. Violets are still on the scarce side, but the rain no doubt will make them more plentiful and insure a good crop for Christmas.

Bulbous stock is beginning to come in more freely and will help out, besides making a larger variety. Much use is being made of single and thin-petaled roses in small baskets for table and window decoration. Valley is still out of the general market and hard to obtain at any price.

The double blue cornflower is plentiful and has been useful, especially during the shortage of violets. All classes of greens are about equal to the demand and redwood and other northern greens for holiday use are arriving in large quantities daily. Azaleas have arrived late in many instances and in bad order in some. Some of the growers have not even received them at date of writing—December 6—so the chance of their making the Christmas market is slim. Some Christmas Cheer rhododendrons have arrived in good condition and will help out. There is a good stock of ericas, poinsettias, cyclamens and begonias coming on. Ferns will be considerably in demand and the growers have good stocks on hand.

Quite a heavy frost occurred this morning, December 7, and this, if followed by others, as is usually the case, will surely shorten the supply of all outdoor stock for Christmas.

Various Notes.

L. H. Freeman hit a happy combination the other day in a cross. This was made for the funeral of a well known resident and consisted of orchids and yellow roses over a base of bronze galax. Mr. Freeman says that he notes a steady and decided increase in the demand for the better class of goods.

Thomas Atkins, long known in connection with the flower and nursery business in this town, now is running the retail store in the Rosslyn hotel for Norris & Son.

Several coming-out and other parties have led to fine business at J. W. Wolters' store this week and there are many others booked.

I have seldom seen better stock of roses than that coming from the greenhouses connected with Wright's Flower Shop. Richmond is still grown there and comes in fine shape.

At Frank Lichtenberg's the force has been busy with the better class of funeral work. The store is most attractive since the alterations, and there already is a fine showing of holiday plants.

The L. A. Floral Co. reports shipping business heavy and is putting on additional packers.

Tassano Bros. have secured a large store on South Spring street for the holiday trade and have opened with a big stock of Christmas greens.

Another old-timer in the florists' business passes out, temporarily at least—our old friend George Watson. Mr. Watson has leased his greenhouses to a firm of Japanese growers for five years. It is said they will go in for rose growing heavily.

I have already noted that splendid lot of cyclamens grown at the Walter Armacost & Co. Sawtelle place. Not only were the plants magnificently grown, but there was a big lot of them, and now Mr. Armacost is shaking hands with himself, as he has the sold out sign on nearly all sizes. All the large ones are gone and most of the small. A grand cut of red roses is coming on for the holidays.

The Santa Cruz Evergreen Co. has made a good start and is selling large quantities of redwood, holly and other seasonable stock. Bernard Tassano says he is well satisfied with the business so far.

Darling's Flower Shop certainly has scored with its new fountain. Not only by day, but after the lights are on in the evening, admiring crowds line the windows. It is a good kind of advertising. Colored lights like Fourth of July fireworks always attract, but there is an additional artistic touch here.

While not able to fill all orders, letters from satisfied customers arrive at the S. Murata & Co. place to show that at least the stock shipped gave satisfaction.

H. W. Turner is in with a grand cut of roses, which look as though the crop will last over the holidays. The long-stemmed Prima Donna and Shawyer blooms are especially good.

The regular meeting of the Los Angeles County Horticultural Society was held at the Times building, December 6.

H. R. Richards.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The local florists are making preparations for a banner holiday business, basing their anticipation principally on the present strong demand for flowers and the willingness of the public to pay the higher prices put into effect during the last few weeks. The retailers say that the people demand good stock and seem willing to pay for it. Taken as a whole, flowers are scarce, and it is generally conceded that there will barely be enough stock for Christmas, although some of the growers are holding back their roses and other flowers for the holidays. Reports differ somewhat regarding the outlook for potted plants; some hold that there are plenty in sight for all requirements, while others are of the opinion that they will be at a premium.

Large chrysanthemums are going off crop rapidly. The late varieties were practically a failure on account of the frost last month, which is one of the principal factors in the present shortage of stock. A good many Chinese mums are still coming in and they move fairly well. Pompons continue to show good quality and the demand shows no signs of waning.

Carnations are better than for some time, but they are not overplentiful and still clear well at firm prices. The rose cut is short of the demand. All varieties on the market leave nothing to be desired in quality, the only complaints being in regard to quantity. Russell is particularly scarce. The cold weather of the last week has held back the violets to a certain extent, but most stock is in fine shape and sells well, there being a heavy shipping demand. Some nice cut heather is appearing and it clears without difficulty. A more liberal supply of orchids was welcomed during the last few days.

Horticultural Society Meeting.

In the absence of President E. James on account of illness, the regular meeting of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society, held on the evening of December 2, was presided over by H. Plath. A special feature of the meeting was the nomination of officers for the ensuing year, which resulted as follows, all being incumbent: President, E. James; vice-president, Tom Fenton; corresponding secretary, W. A. Hofinghoff; financial secretary, Henry Maier; treasurer, J. A. Axell; librarian, Mr. Kempf; assistant librarian, Daniel Raymond; trustee, M. Poss. H. Plath was nominated for usher. The following names were submitted for the exhibition committee: Donald McLaren, A. J. Rossi, H. Plath, J. A. Axell, J. A. Carbone, M. Poss, Daniel MacRorie, John Gill, John Vallance, Frank Burns, Henry Maier, Wm. Kittlewell, Frank Pelicano, P. Ferrari, V. Podesta,

SEATTLE, WASH.

The Market.

Although the report is somewhat belated, perhaps it should be recorded that there was more business done in the flower stores this Thanksgiving than was the case for a number of years. Stock was abundant in all varieties, except carnations, and most of the storekeepers laid in all they could manage to hold. By evening there was hardly a flower left, although fresh supplies were brought in that morning.

The apparent oversupply of chrysanthemums now has been cleaned up and good flowers are in demand at prices that afford some margin of profit to the grower. The late varieties still to come promise to be remunerative. Carnations are not plentiful, and will be more in demand from now on. Roses are arriving of good quality and there is a good sale for them. Violets, mostly Californian, are selling fairly well. They are not used so much in corsage bouquets as in former years. There are few snapdragons in the market, but some excellent bouvardias are coming in and are much used. Cyclamens, mums and primulas compose the bulk of the pot plants. A few abnormal cinerarias were seen last week. The supply of ferns is abundant.

Various Notes.

Four years ago last April the Misses Risdon and Wagner, who occupied a flower stand in front of the Savoy hotel, were summarily ejected from their place of business, notwithstanding the fact that their rent was paid to the end of the month. The period to elapse on which they had paid rent included Easter, and of course the ladies were perturbed and brought suit against the proprietor of the hotel. The law's delays here are well exemplified, inasmuch as the case was only brought to trial last week. The plaintiffs sued for $2,000 and were awarded $1,500, which should partly solace them for the annoyance to which they were put. But to add to the delay, the defendant has appealed the case, so it yet may be some time before the balm is finally applied.

Stuber & Richardson have two houses of poinsettias in fine shape. Their new varieties of red carnations are in strong demand, both for flowers and rooted cuttings. T. W.

Except Maud Dean, all the late-season mums have passed their heaviest cut. Some excellent roses are coming in. The first Paper Whites and Romans have made their appearance. The cut of carnations is gradually increasing, though these are not in supply sufficient to permit any price-cutting.

Valley is exceedingly scarce and white bouvardias are frequently used in place of it. Salal and Oregon grape, the wild greens used so extensively by all the florists, are of excellent quality this season.

that made the piece is annoyed because it was described in a local daily as a "pilot wheel." As the deceased was an engineer, perhaps it would have been more appropriate to have called it a "throttle wheel."

Max Smith has produced the first Paper Whites and Romans hereabouts. He won a prize for a window decoration on Greater Portland day.

A single violet of a light tint is being shipped in from California.

There is a good demand for Christmas trees for shipment in carload lots and the supply of suitable trees is unlimited. S. W. W.

SPOKANE, WASH.

The Market.

No report was made of the Thanksgiving business in Spokane—the week was too busy—so perhaps it is fitting to write a few words about the big day. Thanksgiving day surely furnished a surprise to the florists, bookkeepers reporting the week's sales to be practically double those of last year. Certain it is that there was hardly enough good stock to supply the demand. Every grower was cut down to the limit in an effort to appease the demands of the retailers. Everything sold, and good prices were the rule. Mums brought from $3 to $6 per hundred; carnations $1 to $1.50; roses $1.50 to $5. Mum plants, as well as cyclamens and primulas, sold well, but the great call was for cut flowers and baskets.

Mums, which usually last until well after Christmas, are not holding out so well, a condition probably due to the warm and bright weather during the fall months. However, there will be some good blooms of the late varieties for the holidays. Carnations are recovering from the heavy cutting they received Thanksgiving day and promise to be in good crop for Christmas. Roses are declining a little, both in quality and quantity.

Various Notes.

Considerable corsage work of unique style recently was turned out by some of the retailers. The occasion was a black and white party by society folks. Many ingenious bouquets were fashioned for this affair, the Spokane Florist Co. featuring the idea with a black and white window.

Bernson & Halle are marketing especially fine Golden Chadwick mums and have begun cutting sweet peas.

H. L. Olsson is one of the busiest men in town, his greens business taking him into the woods two or three days a week, and he also oversees the business at the greenhouses. He has a good foreman in C. F. Nawrocki, a grower well known to the Chicago fraternity. A large cut of first-class carnations is expected for Christmas.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

President, John Watson, Newark, N. Y.; Vice-president, Lloyd C. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Secretary and General Manager, Curtis Nye Smith, Boston, Mass.; Treasurer, Peter Youngers, Geneva, Neb.

ONE of the nurserymen's big problems last season was that of labor and it promises to be worse when the spring season of 1917 opens.

THE French nurserymen will devote more attention than usual to soliciting American trade this year, as the United States is about the only open market of consequence. The production of stock has been kept up despite the shortage of labor, to a point where the quantity buyer can drive a good bargain.

NEW NATIVE JUNIPERS.

George B. Sudworth, dendrologist of U. S. Department of Agriculture Forest Service, has suggested the following names for four new types of the juniper family: Juniperus Virginiana pyramidiformis Hillii, Juniperus scopulorum argentea Hillii, Juniperus scopulorum pyramidalis viridifolia Hillii, Juniperus scopulorum horizontalis Hillii.

These junipers are distinct in form and color. J. Virginiana pyramidiformis Hillii is a neat, compact pyramidal type of the Platte river cedar. The specimen was found growing in a block of Juniperus Virginiana produced from seedlings from the hardy, rapid growing Platte river type of the red cedar. It is somewhat similar in form and habit of growth to Juniperus Sinensis stricta and offers the lovers of fine conifers a hardy, rapid growing juniper which is native of soils and conditions over a large portion of the United States.

Juniperus scopulorum argentea Hillii, Juniperus scopulorum pyramidalis viridifolia Hillii and Juniperus scopulorum horizontalis Hillii are three forms selected from plants grown from seeds gathered by D. Hill, president of the D. Hill Nursery Co., Dundee, Ill., from the beautiful silvery tinted juniper growing in the Rocky mountains.

Juniperus scopulorum argentea is a compact, narrow, pyramidal form, showing a fresh silvery foliage. Juniperus scopulorum pyramidalis viridifolia is also a pyramidal form, showing an attractive shade of green. Juniperus scopulorum horizontalis is a broad, open grower with a delicate, graceful branching habit. The foliage has a bright silvery tint. In habit of growth this variety resembles the well known and much admired Juniperus Pfitzeriana, except the J. scopulorum horizontalis produces delicate silvery branches, while Pfitzeriana is a bold, strong grower.

IMPORTS OF PLANTS AND BULBS FOR LAST FISCAL YEAR.

The Review of August 24, page 76, contained a table showing the quantities and values of all kinds of plants and bulbs imported during the first three quarters of the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1915, with the duties collected. The Review of November 9, page 76, continued the statistics to the end of the fiscal year. The records for each quarter were given separately, as compiled by the United States Department of Commerce. In the following table the amounts in the quarterly reports are combined, so as to present a statement of the total imports of each kind of plant and bulb for the entire fiscal year, July 1, 1915, to June 30, 1916:

These junipers should be a fine addition to the family and it is understood they will be propagated and offered to the trade under the above names.

PRIVET FROM SEED.

Will you please give us information as to the best method of growing privet from seed? We intend to plant some seed of "Amoor River, South."

B. F. C.—Tenn.

Stratify the seeds in dry sand and sow them in the spring in a bed prepared outdoors or in sandy loam in a coldframe. All the seeds will not germinate the first season and for that reason propagation by means of ripe or green cuttings is preferable in every way, as the cuttings make nice plants in one season and are more stocky and less variable than seedlings. You can sow the seed in the fall without stratifying, but the seedlings will not appear any earlier than those sown in the spring. Seed beds should have a winter mulch of pine needles, meadow hay or leaves.

WORK OF THE QUARANTINE.

Insects of 193 different kinds which might prove hurtful to American crops and 116 plant diseases of similar significance were detected by state and federal inspection during the last fiscal year on plants and plant products offered for import into the United States, according to the report of the Federal Horticultural Board of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. Of the insects, fourteen were scale insects such as pear scale, though they range from scales found on orchids, cocoanut and bamboo, the finding of a fourth potato weevil in the United States, which was discovered in Irish potatoes imported from the Andes. Of the diseases, citrus canker was found in a number of shipments and the finding of powdery scab on wild potatoes from the east slope of the Andes is taken to indicate clearly it is the home of this disease of the potato.

PLANTS FOR CHRISTMAS

We have our houses stocked full of choice plants for Christmas sales and we recommend the placing of orders early. As Christmas draws near the Express Companies get over-rushed and you may not get your stock on the day you planned for it. Be on the safe side and place your order at once with the HUSTLERS who always give good value for the money in everything they send out.

Our stock of ferns is larger than ever. The erection of one new house 28 feet x 151 feet has enabled us to give more space to ferns and we can give you good value for the money.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The great abundance of Christmas greens and berries has helped to tide over a period of scarcity in cut flowers. In the last week or ten days, since the passing of the chrysanthemums, there has been a marked dearth of prime stock, the growers holding back their products for the holidays. Southern smilax, laurel, boxwoods and the common evergreens are exceptionally good.

Thomas Mead, of the Fottler, Fiske, Rawson Co., Boston, was a caller last week.

The stock and business of the Stillman Carriage Co., at Westerly, have been sold at auction, as the proprietor, George L. Stillman, wishes to devote his entire time to dahlia growing.

Howard Kenney has resigned his position with William Hoffman, of Pawtucket.

The case of the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia and New York, against the Lapham Floral Co., on an account, has been continued.

Peter S. Byrnes, of Wickford, won several prizes at the annual exhibition of the Rhode Island Poultry Association on his Wyandotte fowls.

Several tracts of land in Auburn have been transferred by the J. A. Budlong & Son Co. and Frank L. Budlong to the Budlong Rose Co.

Frederick Dietz is building an addition to his greenhouse at 23 French street.

C. C. Earle, of the Quidnick Greenhouses, Inc., of Quidnick, was a visitor to Boston last week. Since taking over these houses Mr. Earle and his associates have accomplished much work. They now have more than 30,000 plants in the rose houses and upwards of 40,000 carnation plants. W. H. M.

ROOTED CARNATION CUTTINGS

IMMEDIATE DELIVERY

We are now booking orders for our new seedling Superb, $12.00 per 100, $100.00 per 1000.

Superb is a sport of Gloriosa and Enchantress. It has the good stem of Gloriosa and the fine growing habit of Enchantress. The color is a flesh pink and it keeps its color at all seasons. The flowers average about three inches, are very full and generally receive full score on substance. The flowers are all perfect and do not split. In the four years we have grown it, it has proved the best commercial variety, barring none.

AVIATOR

If you want scarlet carnations for Christmas, grow Aviator, $6.00 per 100, $50.00 per 1000.

TOLEDO, O.

The Market.

The weather during the last week became more favorable for Christmas business. The atmosphere is cold and the ground covered with snow. The florists' windows throughout the city are filled with poinsettias. Christmas greens, wild smilax, etc., are seen everywhere. Chrysanthemums are a thing of the past. Carnations are in good supply and the stems are more rigid. Roses are good and the demand takes care of the cut. Orchids and valley are satisfactory and are in heavy demand. The outlook for Christmas is promising and florists are preparing fully for the increase in sales at the close of the year. Artificial wreaths for cemetery and decorative use can be had in all styles and sizes. Baskets artistically arranged with boxwood, ruscus, statice and greens of all kinds are displayed in the windows. Some fine azalea and poinsettia plants, prettily arranged in baskets, are meeting with favor and many orders for these have already been placed.

Various Notes.

Metz & Bateman had a fine F. T. D. window last week. Window cards were used to explain the object of the system and a list of members in all parts of the country was shown, to give the public a good idea as to how Christmas flowers could be sent to friends, regardless of their distance from this city.

Krueger Bros. have some first-class roses in many leading varieties, which promise a good cut for the holidays.

Feniger's Flower Shop is artistically decorated with wild smilax and ruscus. In the windows some novel wreaths and baskets are displayed, along with azalea and poinsettia plants.

J. L. Schiller, the primula specialist, is exceedingly busy shipping the plants to various markets for Christmas sales.

Schramm Bros. had an interesting exhibition of cacti from the Mexican border on display at the Ohio and Michigan land show at the Terminal auditorium last week. The cacti were sent to them from a member of the Sixth Ohio infantry on duty at the border. About twenty good varieties, in all sizes, were shown. G. B. S.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

There was no rush last week, but business was good and orders for the holiday trade are coming in more heavily than last year at this time. Weddings and other social events have taken a slump. Cut flowers were not so plentiful last week as previously. Some chrysanthemums still are seen. Carnations have become scarce, a condition attributed to the fact that growers are holding back the cut for Christmas. Roses are plentiful and few are left unsold. Sweet peas and violets are coming in nicely, but the demand for these as yet is not strong. Narcissi are good and fair prices are being realized on them. Some fine pot plants of cyclamens and begonias are shown in some of the windows.

Various Notes.

The Stuppy Floral Co., of St. Joseph, as usual is sending in some fine cyclamens. These cyclamens are hard to beat in quality; every plant is a specimen and finds a ready sale.

G. K. Parker, manager of the George M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co., reports business good last week. This concern will have a large quantity of azaleas in bloom for Christmas. Mr. Parker went hunting last week and brought back 125 rabbits, a few quails and a squirrel. He must have had a machine gun!

The W. L. Rock Flower Co. has its greenhouses filled with excellent Christmas stock. The cyclamens and begonias are particularly fine; also a number of the new begonia, Mrs. Peterson. The cut flower range will be in full crop for the holidays.

T. J. Noll & Co. report that the supply of stock has diminished to some extent, except roses, which are plentiful. They have received another line of fancy baskets and orders for supplies have been unusually heavy.

W. J. Barnes has cleared all his mums. He reports that it was the best mum season he has ever had. Funeral work was unusually heavy with him last week.

Adolph Mohr is sending in a nice lot of Cincinnati begonias. He has many advance orders for these for the holidays.

Frank McCabe, of the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, and J. A. Peterson, of Cincinnati, were visitors last week.

Craig Quality Christmas Plants

PLANT BASKETS

Our Plant Baskets have been so well received that they are now a very important feature of our Christmas business. Last year we offered only one style in three sizes. This year we have about twenty-five different numbers. All are first-class, both as to style of basket and filling.

Nothing but highly-colored well-grown stock is used, such as Dracaenas in variety, Crotons, Pandanus, Ferns, etc. On account of being filled early and becoming established, they are bound to give you and your customer satisfaction. We cannot recommend them too highly.

Many of the baskets and window boxes are in two-tone effect.

All baskets have zinc (not tin) liners.

NEW SEEDLING VARIETIES

Our new Seedling Crotons, some of which we disseminated in June, 1911, are varieties that should be in every grower's and private person's collection. They are far superior to many of the older varieties of Crotons and the types range from narrow to very large leaf.

We particularly call your attention to our set of thirteen, named after the "Thirteen Original States," which have won highest honors wherever shown.

NEPHROLEPIS JOHN WANAMAKER
Introduced August, 1915

The Wanamaker Boston has more than made good. Everyone who has received early shipments from us has been greatly pleased with the variety and repeat orders have been coming in daily. We have a very large stock.

A "sport" from Nephrolepis Scholzelii, with longer, narrower, gracefully drooping fronds. It is not so compact in growth as Scholzelii, and therefore does not decay in the center, and is a durable house fern. It is a rapid grower, making an abundance of fronds, and is quite distinct from any other Nephrolepis.

The following prices are for immediate and spring delivery:

2¼-inch pots, strong plants.....$8 per 100; $75 per 1,000
4-inch pots, strong plants.....$25 per 100; $225 per 1,000

PAINESVILLE, OHIO

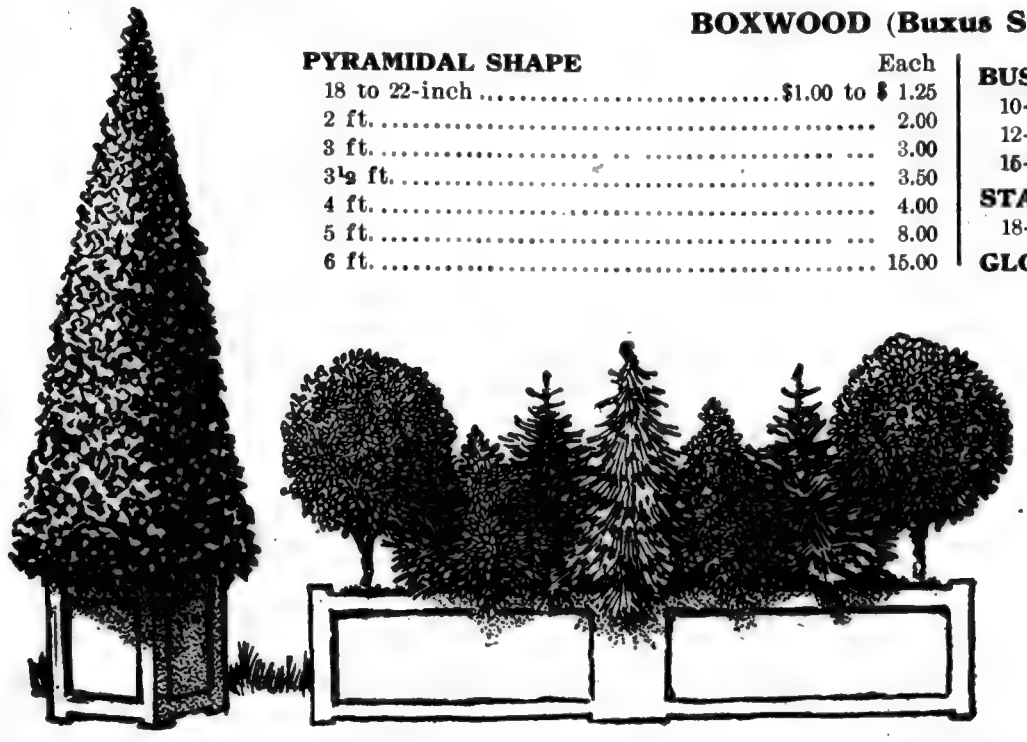
MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

Milwaukee had its first snow storm of the season December 8. Only about two inches of snow fell, however, and the temperature did not go much below freezing. This seemed to give business an impetus and conditions in general seem to be good. The chrysanthemum season is about over, as the daily cut has dwindled down to almost nothing. This increases the demand for other stock. Carnations are supplying the extra demand in good shape, as the cut is fairly large and the quality is good. From present indications, carnations will be right for the Christmas trade and it looks as though there will be a sufficient quantity of good stock to supply the extra demand at that time.

Roses are rather scarce at this time, although the demand is being taken care of. As is usual when this class of stock is not plentiful, the shorter grades are in greatest demand and are cleaned out each morning, at good prices. There is a medium supply of Russell roses and the cut is being disposed of to good advantage. While there should be a good-sized crop of roses for Christmas, it is doubtful whether there will be enough to take care of the demand. Red roses will be especially short and some orders on this stock will have to be cut and something else substituted.

The supply of violets is good this year compared with last year's, both as to quality and quantity. The demand, however, is heavy and no difficulty is being experienced in moving the entire cut at fairly good prices. This stock should cut a much bigger figure in the market this Christmas, as it has every advantage that it lacked last year. Orchids are in good supply and are selling well. Prices are good and the quality is fine.



Cecile Brunner, Baby Doll and Bon Silene are in good supply and sell well. The demand for this stock is steadily increasing and it is becoming more popular with the retailer for corsage work.

There are some exceptionally fine pink bouvardias in the market. This stock is moving exceedingly well. Stevia also is in good supply and there are plenty

Wittbold's Selected Stock of Choice Boxwoods, Laurels and Aucubas

Large and well selected stock of Boxwoods, English Laurels, which are much hardier than bay trees, and Aucubas, the semi-hardy evergreen shrubs noted for their golden-leaved, laurel-like foliage, spotted with bright yellow.

These stately and decorative shrubs are always in ready demand by the customers wherever they are displayed by progressive florists.

of Paper Whites, narcissi, etc., to supply the demand for this class of stock.

Plant orders are coming in every day and appears as though this year would surpass all previous ones as far as sales in this line go. Owing to the late arrival of azaleas, this stock has not been sold as yet, but the plants are just about ready now and are beginning to move. The quality of the plants in general is good, considering the difficulties of importation.

Various Notes.

Milwaukee's "Four Hundred" were out in force Thursday evening, December 7, when the annual charity ball for the benefit of the Milwaukee Infants' hospital was held at the Auditorium. The A. F. Kellner Co. took charge of the decorations, as in the past, and converted the hall into a bower. The old-fashioned bouquet, surrounded by lace paper, seemed to be the most popular, but quite a number of the younger women wore their bouquets suspended from their arms in small baskets. The ball always brings a few extra dollars into the florists' net and gives them an opportunity to produce something original, which has a good chance of being taken up by society in general, if the effect is pleasing.

Frank Berndt, superintendent of the greenhouse plant of the Holton & Hunkel Co., at Brown Deer, Wis., left Saturday, December 9, on a trip east.

H. V. Hunkel made a short business trip to Detroit, Mich., returning December 9.

Among the visitors last week were F. A. Parkmire, of Rogers Park, Ill.; Hugo Rudolph, of Manitowoc, Wis.; B. Klein, of Madison, Wis.; E. L. Parmenter, who is operating the place formerly conducted by H. L. Clapp, of Ripon, Wis.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

It has been rather surprising to note the great difference in business during the last week. The early Christmas shopping has livened up things considerably and everybody is busy preparing for the usual rush. Orders to the present date appear to be quite satisfactory and indications point to a good business. The shipments of laurel and other greens are good and holly is well berried. The wholesale market reports active business in cut flowers and holiday supplies. The daily shipments are meeting all present demands.

The chrysanthemum supply is not nearly so large, nor the demand so great, nor the quality so good. A good few Golden Wedding, Chadwick and Money Maker mums sell easily, especially for funeral work, of which there has been much. Pompons are about over for this season. Roses have not been up to the usual standard, but now are better. Montrose, Francis Scott Key, Ophelia and Aaron Ward still are in steady demand and move easily. The carnation crop for the holidays promises well, but the supply at this time is not large. The red varieties are especially scarce. Violets maintain their good standard and clear well at advanced prices. Pink and white bouvardias move freely. Orchids and gardenias sell well; the high price of valley keeps down the demand for this item. Stevia is plentiful. Paper Whites are coming in fast and sell easily. Sweet peas arrive in fine condition and sell satisfactorily, although the demand is small. Yellow narcissi and Roman hyacinths are found useful for basket work. Greens are plentiful.

The decorations on Main street, put up chiefly by the local florists, are far more elaborate than those of former years, and have helped to make the call for Christmas greens heavier than usual.

Wholesale Grower, Importer and Shipper of Pot Plants

Various Notes.

Frank Mahoney now is in the employ of George T. Boucher.

Julius Berg, of Lion & Co., New York, called on the trade a few days ago with a fine lot of samples, including holiday goods.

George T. Boucher is showing a large quantity of Christmas baskets in many sizes, which contain fillings of berries, moss and foliage. The baskets sell well and advance orders are good.

Edwin C. Kaelber, Inc., has some attractive novelties for the holiday. He reports trade as exceptionally good, with a good quantity of wedding and funeral work.

"The Methods and Marketing Problems of Retail Florists" will be the title of George T. Boucher's talk at the Rochester florists' monthly meeting, which is to be held next Monday, December 18.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Crosman have returned from a visit with relatives in Boston.

The window of H. E. Wilson was a blaze of color during the week end. A canopy of red frieze was used at the top of the window, with poinsettias and bells suspended around the window. Decorated wreaths of red and green, vases of poinsettias and ruscus, with numerous small baskets of boxwoods and artificial flowers, were grouped in the bottom.

Miss Rose E. Brown now is employed by J. B. Keller Sons.

Mrs. M. Crooke and the other florists at Mount Hope cemetery are busily occupied in decorating graves with evergreens, etc., as well as receiving numerous calls for wreaths and baskets of Christmas greens. H. J. H.

FORT WAYNE, IND.

The Market.

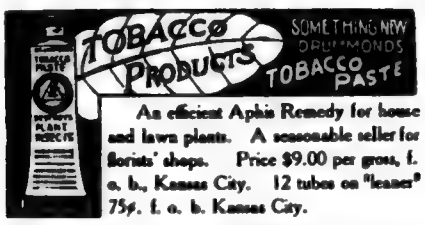
The weather has been cold and snappy since Thanksgiving and has stimulated trade to considerable extent. The supply of stock from the local greenhouses has been of unusually good quality, with roses in the lead. Hoosier Beauty, Richmond, Shawyer, Russell and Ophelia have the biggest demand. American Beauties are meeting with a good call. Carnations are of good quality, but rather scarce, as most of the growers are holding back their stock for the Christmas demand.

Orchids are to be had in many fine varieties and the demand is good. Single violets are becoming more plentiful daily. Easter lilies and callas are in fine supply. Narcissi are moving well. Antirrhinums in fine condition, with big, long spikes, bring $1.50 and $2 per dozen. Chrysanthemums have disappeared from the market entirely, after a long and profitable season. Sweet peas and valley are in good demand for corsage work.

The quantity of business done during November far exceeded that of November of 1915. Everyone is on the qui vive for the Christmas trade and preparations are well under way for the biggest holiday of the year. Indications point to a scarcity in blooming plants, particularly azalea and poinsettia plants. Many of the growers' stock of poinsettias proved to be inferior this year, while the azaleas have but recently arrived from abroad and will require some stringent methods on the florists' part to bring them into bloom for the holidays.

Various Notes.

The Flick Floral Co. put up elaborate decorations for the Nieger-Fox reception in the ballroom of the Hotel Anthony last week.



Markey Bros. were busy with funeral work last week.

The Doswell Floral Co. is receiving some fine Ophelia roses and single violets from its greenhouses. R. F.

Greenhouse Heating.

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. But please do not ask The Review to make a choice of apparatus for you. The greenhouse heating equipment advertised in this paper is, we believe, the best for the trade to buy, and each article the best in the special field of its adaptation.

ANOTHER MAIN NEEDED.

I am enclosing a sketch of my range, consisting of two greenhouses for growing purposes and a small propagating house. I have recently had a hot water heating system installed. The large greenhouse has solid beds, as I intend to grow sweet peas in it. It is piped as follows: Around one end and one side is a coil of seven 2-inch returns. On the other side is a shorter coil of six 2-inch returns. All of these are supplied by one 3-inch flow. I have contended from the beginning that the amount of flow is insufficient. On firing up, I found that the bottom pipes in the coils were cold and this seemed to prove my contention to be correct. The piping is supposed to be capable of maintaining a temperature of 60 degrees in zero weather, but I am sure it will not do so.

The other greenhouse has five 2-inch returns on one side and four 2-inch returns on the other. These also are supplied by one 3-inch flow. This house requires a temperature of 50 degrees in zero weather. The little propagating house has a coil of ten 1-inch pipes all around, under the benches; these are fed with one 1½-inch flow and the desired temperature is 70 degrees.

Gorman's Special Greenhouse Steam-Air Vent

Stops "Air-in-Pipe" Troubles

Will positively take air out of heating plants and will keep your coils hot. No waste or blowing of steam.

Valves in use for twelve years now good as when put in.

I have a Capitol sectional boiler with a guaranteed radiation of 46.50 feet. The top of the boiler is below the level of the returns. A 30-gallon expansion tank is placed about fifteen feet above the top of the boiler. A Honeywell generator also is used. You will notice that all the returns are around the sides and ends of the houses—none through the middle. This is desirable, especially in the large greenhouse, where sweet peas are to be grown.

C. G. J.—N. Y.

The amount of radiation that can be carried by a 3-inch main will depend on the number and size of the returns, on the height of the flow and especially on the height of the returns above the water level of the boiler. In this case the height of the returns above the boiler is not stated, but it probably is not great. Under these conditions, in a house less than 100 feet in length, I would not care to carry more than 800 square feet of radiating surface or to connect with more than eight 2-inch returns.

WILKS SELF-FEEDING HOT WATER BOILER

For Economy, Durability, Dependability

Install a WILKS and forget your troubles.

No night fireman required—as the magazine or coal chamber holds sufficient fuel to keep fire 10 to 12 hours without attention. Best made for a small greenhouse.

The wide house contains thirteen 2-inch returns and, as nearly as I can estimate, there is about 1,100 square feet of radiating surface, which is nearly fifty per cent more than I consider desirable to be carried by a 3-inch main in a house of the length stated, eighty-nine and one-half feet. This house has a width of twenty-eight and one-half feet and has four feet of glass and four feet of concrete in each wall. The sketch shows a door in the side wall near the corner farthest from the boiler, and I infer that a coil starts on each side of the door and runs on the walls back to the boiler. This will make one coil about eighty feet long, while the other is about 145 feet in length. I would run a 3-inch flow pipe for the longer coil, but a 2½-inch flow will answer for the other. Both flows can be

Here's the Valve for You

REASONS—A ROUND DOZEN

1. Can be repacked under full steam pressure.
2. The only valve that comes packed, ready for service.
3. All parts are renewable.
4. Passages through the body are free and unobstructed, as the smallest area is in excess of that of the connecting pipe.
5. The seating surfaces are regrindable.
6. It is warranted for working steam pressures up to 150 pounds. Ordinary valves run from 60 to 125 lbs. pressure.
7. The body is made of special close-grained iron—pipe expansion won't cause it to leak as in the case of other valves.
8. The seat and disc are of durable nickel alloy.
9. The stem is of high tensile bronze.
